NOTES

This segment of the Tafel Family genealogy is incomplete here. However, of note is Dietrich Bonhoeffer (1906-1945), a grandson of Julie Tafel who is known best today as the German Protestant clergyman who was the leader of the Confessing Church that openly opposed the Nazi regime and Adolf Hitler. After the Nazi suppression of the church, Bonhoeffer continued the ministry as an underground operation and eventually was involved in a broad conspiracy to overthrow the National Socialist regime. After the failed attempt to assassinate Hitler on 20 July 1944, he was connected with that attempt, too, and imprisoned. He was executed on 9 April 1945, three weeks before the liberation of Flossenburg, where he was then held.

Dietrich Bonhoeffer was born in Wrocław, Poland, where today a memorial stands to him. He has been the subject of numerous biographies, and his own works have been republished and translated.

1872: Andrew J. Tafel [sic], druggist, 48 N. 9th St.

At the time of the 1860 U.S. census, he is listed as “Leonard Taffel”, language professor. A 13-year-old “Minna Taffel”, born in Wurtemberg, is also listed in this household.

He died at the Philadelphia home of his son, Rev. Louis Tafel. His funeral service in Brooklyn, New York, was conducted in German by Rev. William H. Benade of Philadelphia. He was buried 3 April 1880 in Evergreen Cemetery, Brooklyn, New York.

Luise (Vayhinger) Tafel (1801–1877)
(wife of Johann Friedrich Leonhard Tafel [Leonard Tafel])

She is buried in Evergreen Cemetery, Brooklyn, New York.

27. Gustav Albert Tafel (1829–1868)

He was a typographer, residing in Cincinnati, Ohio.

29. Rudolph Leonard Tafel (1831–1893)

With his brother, Gustav Rudolph Tafel, he emigrated to the U.S. aboard the ship Epervier, arriving in New York on 7 September 1847 from Antwerp. After crossing New York State on the Erie Canal, he arrived in Cincinnati, Ohio, 20 September 1847. In 1850, he met Francis Edmund Boericke, with whom he worked translating publications into German. In 1853 they opened a bookstore for Swedenborgian literature at 24 S. 5th St. [old style address], Philadelphia, Pennsylvania; but Rudolf soon left to a teaching position at the U.S. Naval Academy[1275]. For him there is a declaration of intent for naturalization as a U.S. citizen, 11 October 1852, filed in the Court of Common Pleas, Philadelphia; and an oath of allegiance 11 October 1854. From [1275] He was still in Philadelphia when the 1855 city directory was prepared (sometime in 1854, presumably); he is listed there as a merchant at 24 South 5th St. [old style address].

1868 he was a minister of the New Church in London, England. In the 1891 England census his is noted to be a naturalized British subject.

At the time of the 1891 England census Rudolph Tafel resided at 17 Ansou Road, Islington, London.

30. Hugo Tafel (1833–1862)

Occupations of Hugo Tafel (from U.S. censuses):
1850: Apprentice tinner (under William Stevenson, tinner)
1860: Tinner

Residences of Hugo Tafel (from U.S. censuses):
1850: 2nd Ward, Cincinnati, Ohio
1860: 10th Ward, Cincinnati, Ohio

In the 1850 census he is living in the household of William Stevenson, a tinner to whom he was apprenticed. At the time of the 1860 census he resided in the household of his brother, Gustav.

During the Civil War, Hugo Tafel enlisted in the Union army. On 27 May 1861 he was promoted to Corporal in Co. A of the 9th Ohio Infantry. The Tafel Family chart indicates he was a Sergeant. He was killed in action at the Battle of Mill Springs, in Kentucky, on 19 January 1862; his brother, Gustav, was still attached to the 9th Ohio at this time.[1276] He is buried in Mill Springs National Cemetery, Nancy, Kentucky (Sec. A, Site 393).

Generation No. 10

23. Johann Michael Victor[10] Tafel [Victor Tafel] (Johann Friedrich Immanuel[9], Johann Friedrich[8], Christian Friedrich[7], Johann Heinrich[6], Tobias Friedrich[5], Jakob[4], Jakob[3], Hans[2], Sebastian[1]) was born 1843, and died 1914. He married Clara Wuppermann.

Children of Johann Tafel and Clara Wuppermann are:
40 i. Reinhard[11] Tafel.
41 ii. Gretchen Tafel.
42 iii. Victor Tafel.

[1276] The Battle of Mill Springs was a decisive battle of the Civil War, when a Confederate force of 8,000 men were routed by 4,000 Union troops. The battle took place at Logan's Crossroads, north of the village of Mill Springs on the Cumberland River, south of Frankfort, Kentucky. It marked the start of the Kentucky-Tennessee campaign and was the Union army's first important victory in the western territories. The Confederate rout left eastern Tennessee open to a Union advance. An engraving of the battle was published in Frank Leslie, Famous Leaders and Battle Scenes of the Civil War (Mrs. Frank Leslie, New York, 1896). A contemporary map of the battlefield has been posted to the "American Memory" website at the Library of Congress: Sketch of the battlefield of Logan's Cross Roads and of the enemy's fortified position at and opposite Mill Spring, Ky. to which he retreated after his defeat, Major General George H. Thomas comdg. the U.S. forces, General G.B. Crittenden comdg. the Confed. Forces, Jan. 19th, 1862 (Office of the Chief of Engineers, U.S.A., 1877) (American Memory website, http://memory.loc.gov, under category "Civil War Maps"; accessed 12 Feb 2006). +	58	xi.	Marguerite Tafel, born July 1891 in Ohio.

NOTES

28. Gustav Rudolph Tafel (1830–1908) Also see Additions & Corrections

With his brother, Rudolph Leonard Tafel, he emigrated to the U.S. aboard the ship Epervier, arriving in New York on 7 September 1847 from Antwerp. After crossing New York State on the Erie Canal, he arrived in Cincinnati, Ohio, 20 September 1847.

He was a printer and, later, a newspaper editor. He was admitted to the bar in 1857.

He enlisted in the U.S. Army (Union) on 17 April 1861 and was in the 9th Ohio Infantry Regiment, a German-American unit[1277], with the rank of 1st Sergeant (27 May 1861-30 May 1862), and was promoted to 2nd Lieutenant 30 May 1862 (replacing Charles Gentsch who had been promoted to Captain). He served in Co. A with his younger brother, Hugo, when the latter was killed in action at the Battle of Mill Spring, Kentucky, 19 January 1862. On 24 July 1862 he was transferred to the 106th Ohio Volunteer Infantry, another German-American unit, at the rank of Lieutenant-Colonel.[1278] The unit immediately went into Kentucky, where it fought mostly against Confederate cavalry forces. On 7 December 1862, the unit was overwhelmed by the enemy and captured. As related in a contemporary history:

[1278] The 106th Ohio Infantry was formally organized Sep 1862 under the immediate command of Lt. Col. Gustav Tafel, reporting to Col. George B. Wright.

> "While the army was being refitted at Nashville, Morgan's cavalry was raiding the surrounding country. [After capturing Confederate forces] Moore threw out a skirmish line to resist the advance of Morgan's infantry and dismounted cavalry in line. The rebels pressed steadily forward to a ravine at the foot of the hill on which Moore had formed his line, and under shelter of this poured such a destructive fire upon the Federal troops, that he ordered a new line to be formed in the rear. In this movement the whole line was thrown into confusion, and being attacked on their right and rear by the rebel cavalry, who had, up to this time not been engaged, Moore's command was crowded one on the other into a narrow space where the fire of the enemy proved terribly effective. Moore's troops being unable to return the fire, and he not being able to make another disposition of them, the white flag was raised, and the entire command surrendered. Colonel Tafel, in command of the One Hundred and Sixth Ohio, becoming separated from the other troops, made some further resistance, but, being overpowered, he also surrendered. The contest only lasted a little over an hour." [1279]

They remained prisoners of war until 12 January 1863, when they were released on exchange, after which they regrouped and continued to fight in Kentucky, Tennessee, and Alabama. Gustav Tafel was discharged from the Army on 19 June 1865 when the unit was mustered out. After the war, he was elected to the Ohio state senate, 1866-1868, and was elected mayor of the city of Cincinnati for 1897-1900.

During his service in the 9th Ohio, the regiment saw battle at Rich Mountain, West Virginia, 10 July 1861; Carnifex Ferry, West Virginia, 10 September1861; and Mill Springs, Kentucky, 19 January 1862.

Residences of Gustav Rudolph Tafel (from U.S. censuses and other sources):
1848-1870: Northeast corner of Walnut and 14th Sts., Cincinnati, Ohio
1860 census: 10th Ward, Cincinnati, Ohio
1880 census: 61 Calhoun St., Cincinnati, Ohio
1900 census: 2nd house, University Court, Cincinnati, Ohio

The Gustav Tafel home still stands, on the northeast corner of Walnut and 14th Sts. He resided here 1848-1870.

He is buried in Spring Grove Cemetery, Cincinnati, Ohio.

Therese (Dorn) Tafel (1849–)
(wife of Gustav Rudolph Tafel)

She immigrated to the U.S. in 1848.

49. Hugo A. D. Tafel (1872–1897)

He was an attorney in Cincinnati, Ohio. His middle initials were obtained from a U.S. passport application made on 12 June 1893; he signed the application, "Hugo A. Tafel". He there stated that his permanent residence was in Cincinnati and that he was an attorney-at-law.

50. Olga Emilie Tafel (1873–)

At the time of the 1930 U.S. census, she was a teacher in a private school, living in a residence with three other women teachers (and two other women) in an affluent neighborhood at 6069 Drexel Road,

In Ohio, more than 40 percent of the population claims German ancestry, with more than 50 percent of the population of Cincinnati making the claim. German immigration to this city began in 1788 and continued with periodic force through the 1950s. There still is a bilingual school, twenty German-American societies, and a German-language newspaper. In Cincinnati there is a section of town known as Over-the-Rhine (Über'm Rheín), north and east of Central Parkway (The Rhine) and on either side of Liberty Street.

Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. The two other women are working as a stenographic court reporter and a typist in an insurance office. [N.B.: Next-door neighbors are the Lewis H. Van Dusen household; he was a judge in the Philadelphia Orphans Court. The Lewis H. Van Dusen family also appears in the Patrick family collateral genealogy, herein.]

51. Elsa Tafel (1875–1929)

She was known as "Elsie".

52. Richard Rudolph Tafel (1876–1908)

At the time of the 1900 U.S. census he was an attorney.

54. Paul Waldemar Tafel (1880–1957)

At the time of the 1900 U.S. census he was a bank clerk.

34. Elise Mathilde[10] Tafel (Johann Friedrich Leonhard[9], Johann Friedrich[8], Christian Friedrich[7], Johann Heinrich[6], Tobias Friedrich[5], Jakob[4], Jakob[3], Hans[2], Sebastian[1]) was born 1838; died 1904. She married Franz Edmund Boericke 1854, son of Johannes Boericke and Wilhelmina Doring. He was born 1826 in Glauchau, Germany, and died 1901.

Children of Elise Tafel and Franz Boericke are:

	59	i.	Molvina[11] Boericke, born 1859. She married William Junge.
	60	ii.	Clara Aug. Boericke, born 1861; died 1941.
	61	iii.	Wilhelmine Agnes Boericke, born 1863; died 1864.
	62	iv.	Rudolph Boericke, born 8 October 1864 in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania; died 1897.
	63	v.	Helene Boericke, born 21 December 1865 in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania; died 1962.
	64	vi.	Johanna Magdalene Boericke, born 1868; died 1949.
	65	vii.	Edward Emm. Boericke, born 1873; died 1949. He married Grace Kurt.
+	66	viii.	Gideon Boericke, born 21 January 1874 in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania; died 1950.

The homoeopathic pharmaceutical firm of Boericke & Tafel began with the Swedenborgian-literature bookstore founded by Rudolph Tafel at 24 S. 5th St., in Philadelphia. Constantine Hering[1282] suggested that they also manufacture and sell homoeopathic medicines, which they did from the same establishment; but in a few months Tafel departed to assume a teaching position in the U.S. Naval Academy (see in the Tafel Family collateral genealogy). In 1857, Francis enrolled in the Homoeopathic Medical College of Pennsylvania, continuing to operate the homoeopathic pharmacy and in 1862 assumed the pharmacy of the late William Radde, originally of New York.[1283] Tafel returned to Philadelphia and in 1863 Boericke sold him his original pharmacy at 48 N. 9th St. while continuing to operate the original Radde pharmacy at 635 Arch St. The same year Boericke received his M.D. degree. In 1869, Boericke and Tafel rejoined in partnership and assumed the New York book publisher of William Radde, at which time Tafel moved to New York and assumed that business.[1284]

The firm of Boericke & Tafel, still in existence today although no longer operated by a member of either family, has for more than a century also provided homoeopathic literature, including The American Homoeopathic Pharmacopoeia (New York and Philadelphia, 1882). The apex of the firm's publishing was a the turn of the last century. In 2004, the firm of Boericke & Tafel closed its headquarters in Santa Rosa, California, and moved its sales, marketing and distribution departments to a sister company, Nature's Way, in Utah. Its manufacturing arm was moved to Europe and Mexico.[1285] As yet, no history of the firm and its numerous affiliates has been written.[1286]

[1280] The first display ad for the firm of Boericke & Tafel appears in the 1885 city directory.

[1281] The 1885 city directory had listed 921 Arch St., which is the correct address as corroborated for The Hahnemann Publishing House (F. E. Boericke, Publisher) in Pennsylvania Historical Review, City of Philadelphia (Historical Publishing Co., New York, 1886), p. 132.

[1282] Constantine Hering was a founder of the first homoeopathic medical college in America where lessons were taught in German. He established the Homoeopathic Medical College of Pennsylvania, which later became the Hahnemann Medical College, which in turn continued to teach homoeopathic medicine until well into the 20th century. The Hahnemann school continues in operation today as (currently) part of the Drexel University medical school, and the hospital is separately managed by the Tenant corporation; neither is now a homoeopathic institution.

[1283] William Raddle, Sr., of Philadelphia, and William Raddle, Jr., of New York, managed individual homoeopathic pharmacies.

In 1853, Franz Edmund Boericke and Rudolph Tafel (left) founded the homoeopathic pharmaceuticals firm that carries their name, which had begun with Tafel's Swedenborgian literature sales. Boericke & Tafel's first establishment was at 24 South 5th Street (old-style address scheme), in Philadelphia. The business was in a building (no longer standing) somewhere in the block shown above in a view taken in 2006 (view is to the south on 5th Street from Market Street). The brownstone building at left is the historic Philadelphia Bourse, a nineteenth-century merchants' exchange. Independence Hall is hidden from view by the trees to the right.

As the firm of Boericke & Tafel grew, newer and larger shops were established in other Philadelphia neighborhoods, including one at 1011 Arch Street, where the firm was headquartered until well into the 20th century. The Arch Street shop still stands (seen at right in 2006, then occupied appropriately enough by a Chinese traditional herbals business). The firm seems not to have advertised in any fashion until it took out its first, small block ad in a Philadelphia city directory in 1885 (below).

The Smithsonian Institution's National Museum of American History includes a collection of more than 2,000 historic objects from the Boericke & Tafel Homoeopathic Pharmacy in Philadelphia.[1287]

62. Rudolph Boericke (1864–1897)

He applied for a U.S. passport on 23 December 1895 in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, wherein he requested that the passport be delivered to the firm of Stein & Boericke, Ltd., Engineers, 325 Walnut St., Philadelphia, Pennsylvania.[1288] In the application he stated that his occupation was an an engineer, thus probably he was the co-owner of the firm; also that his permanent residence was in Philadelphia. Walter M. Stein witnessed the identification, giving the same firm address.

63. Helene Boericke (1865–1962)

She applied for a U.S. passport on 28 April 1891 in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, wherein she requested that the passport be delivered to her at 1707 Mt. Vernon St., Philadelphia. On this application she spelled her name "Helena" and indicated her birthdate as 21 December 1866.[1289] On 5 October 1906, she applied for another passport, in Philadelphia, there spelling her name as "Helene" and indicating her birthdate as 21 December 1865.[1290] There she gave her address as 6386 Drexel Rd., Philadelphia; her occupation as musician. Family records communicated for this genealogy indicate that her name was Helene, born in 1865.

64. Johanna Magdalene Boericke (1868–1949)

She was a painter. Muff Worden [No. 163, see under 118], a granddaughter of Johanna's brother, Gideon, noted that Joahnna had studied at the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts, in Philadelphia: [1291]

> "[She] studied watercolor, oils, etc., etc., with the likes of N.C. Wyeth and Howard Pyle, among others, and painted many miniature landscapes. She usually hung the annual exhibit of miniatures there. And various of her sisters-in-law or cousins also took courses there, and it seemed to be the thing to do for young ladies."

NOTES

35. Adolph Julius Tafel (1839–1895)

Adolph Julius Tafel was a co-owner of the homoeopathic pharmaceutical firm of Boericke & Tafel, first of Philadelphia (his brother, Rudolf, was one of the original founders with Boericke, in 1853). The Philadelphia city directories list Adolph J. Tafel in business as follows:

1864, 1865: A. I. [sic] Tafel, homoeopathic pharmacy, 48 N. 9th St., Philadelphia
1866: A. J. Tafel, homoeopathic pharmacy, 48 N. 9th St.
1869: Adolph J. Tafel, drugs, 48 N. 9th St.

Anna (Boericke) Tafel (1845–)
(wife of Adolph Julius Tafel)

At the time of the 1880 U.S. census, her sister, Selma, resided in her household.

At the time of the 1900 census, Winifred Boericke, a 14-year-old niece, resided with her at 3306 Arch St., Philadelphia, Pennsylvania.[1295]

In the 1905 Philadelphia city directory she is listed residing at 4802 Springfield Ave., which was the home of her late husband's nephew, Louis L. Tafel.

63. Anna Aug. Cav. (Tafel) Tafel (1865–1962) Also see Additions & Corrections

The 1900 U.S. census gives her birth date as October 1865. At that time she resided with her widowed mother.

64. Adolph Anton Leonhard Tafel (1868–1949) Also see Additions & Corrections

Presumably he is the Adolph L. Tafel who is listed in the 1900 Philadelphia city directory residing at 3306 Arch St., and in the 1905 directory at 4710 Windsor Ave.

Malcolm Graeme Campbell
(husband of Cornelia Tafel [No. 69])

He was a lawyer.

70. Martha Clara Tafel (1871–)

At the time of the 1900 U.S. census she resided with her widowed mother.

[1294] The "Mud March", or "Burnside's Quagmire", took place when Union army Gen. Ambrose Burnside moved his forces along the Rappahannock River near Fredericksburg, Virginia, in an attempt to cross the army to the other side of the river in order to attack the Confederate flank there. An ensuing rain turned the roads into impassable mud, and under the watchful eyes of the Confederates they retreated to their original position.

[1295] Winifred Boericke has not otherwise been figured into the present genealogy. She applied for a U.S. passport on 18 March 1911 in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. There she gave her birth as on 5 January 1886 in Chicago, Illinois, her current residence as in Bryn Athyn, Pennsylvania, and her occupation as "Private". On 20 April 1923, she again applied for a passport, there indicating her father's name as Felix A. Boericke (who otherwise has not been figured into this current genealogy). She indicated that both she and her father resided in Bryn Athyn, Pennsylvania, and requested the passport be delivered to 1429 Walnut St., Philadelphia.

72. Robert Richard Tafel (1875–)

At the time of the 1900 U.S. census he resided with his widowed mother; at that time his occupation was in desk sales [also something illegible].

74. Hattie Tafel (1878–)

The 1900 U.S. census gives her birth date as [month illegible] 1877.

At time of wife's death: near Tahlequah, Oklahoma
At time of his death: Proctor, Adair Co., Oklahoma

Muff Worden [No. 163], shortly before her death, provided me with a cursory background of the Worden family ancestry, which I quote here only as a matter of documentation; I have not investigated farther: [1303]

> "The Wordens go way back through Peter Worden I and II in East Dennis, Mass. and then in Rhode Island, arriving in Mass. area probably between 1630 and 1635 though I haven't found the ship yet, and on back into Lancashire, England and the town of Leyland near Preston, and Clayton le Woods, back into the 12th century and earlier. They are well-documented. I have found my grandmother's parents thanks to some good help, but have not gone very far back with them, just know that they came from somewhere in England, possibly the generation earlier."

Regarding the immediate ancestors and siblings of Warren Lester Worden, the following information is thus far available: [1304]

[1301] Muff Worden to Earle Spamer, 1 Aug 2006.

[1302] Muff Worden to Earle Spamer, 1 Aug 2006.

Descendants of John Patent Worden

Generation No. 1

1. John Patent[1] Worden was born about 1826 in Rhode Island. He married (1) Susan Pendleton Barber. She was born about 1836 in New York. He married (2) undetermined wife 2 after 1870.

Children of John Worden and Susan Barber are:

	2	i.	Ewing or Erving E.[2] Worden, born about 1860 in New York.
+	3	ii.	Wilson Elwyn Worden, born 1862 in Angelica, Allegany Co., New York; died August 1948 in Enid, Garfield Co., Oklahoma.
	4	iii.	Ethel L. Worden, born March 1870 in New York.

NOTES

The birth dates and places of birth for John Patent Worden (ca. 1836–) [No. 1] and his wife, Susan (Barber) Worden (ca. 1836–), are taken from the 1870 U.S. census. In later censuses, in which their son, Wilson, or another family member reported, John is variously listed as having been born in Rhode Island or Pennsylvania and Susan is various listed as having been born in Rhode Island or New York.

At the time of the 1870 census John Patent Worden was a farmer residing in Ward, Allegany Co., New York.

Both John and Susan Worden are buried in Until the Day of Dawn Cemetery, Angelica, Allegany Co., New York; no dates accompany the record that was seen.

Generation No. 2

3. Wilson Elwyn[2] Worden (John Patent[1]) was born 1862 in Angelica, Allegany Co., New York, and died August 1948 in Enid, Garfield Co., Oklahoma. He married Grace Anola Barnard 1903 in Waukomis, Oklahoma Territory. She was born 1884 in Conway Springs, Kansas, and died 1973 in Iowa.

Children of Wilson Worden and Grace Barnard are:

	5	i.	Weldon B.[3] Worden, born about 1904 in Oklahoma Territory.
	6	ii.	Gretchen Worden, born about 1906 in Oklahoma Territory.
+	7	iii.	Warren Lester Worden, born 30 August 1907 in Waukomis, Oklahoma Territory; died 27 September 1984 in Cherokee Co., Oklahoma.
	8	iv.	Elizabeth Worden, born about 1912 in Oklahoma.

NOTES

The 1900 U.S. census lists the birth date of Wilson Elwyn Worden (1862–1948) [No. 3] as September 1861. In that census his is listed as the brother-in-law of the head of household, Crowell [first name obliterated by overwriting on the census sheet]; he was single at the time. In the 1910 census he is listed as William Worden.

He was known as Elwyn.

Occupations of Wilson Elwyn Worden (from U.S. censuses):
1900: Real estate and insurance agent
1910: Retail lumber dealer
1920: Real estate loan examiner
1930: Farm loan company agent

Residences of Wilson Elwyn Worden (from U.S. censuses):
1900: Waukomis, Oklahoma Territory [residing with brother-in-law]
1910: Main St., Waukomis, Garfield Co., Oklahoma
1920, 1930: 724 Elm St., Enid, Garfield Co., Oklahoma

Wilson Ellwyn Worden is buried in Until the Day of Dawn Cemetery, Angelica, Allegany Co., New York, Lot 715.

The parents of Grace (Barnard) Worden, wife of Wilson Elwyn Worden, were born in Indiana.

The Social Security Death Index lists a Weldon B. Worden, born 21 March 1904, died 28 February 1988, whose last residence was in Durango, La Plata Co., Colorado. Presumably he is the Weldon Warden listed in this genealogy.

Generation No. 3

7. Warren Lester[3] Worden (Wilson Elwyn[2], John Patent[1]) was born 30 August 1907 in Waukomis, Oklahoma Territory, and died 27 September 1984 in Cherokee Co., Oklahoma. He married Mildred Elise Boericke 30 December 1933 in Wynnewood, Montgomery Co., Pennsylvania, daughter of Gideon Boericke and Mildred McGeorge. She was born 27 June 1907 in Overbrook [section], Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, and died 1971.

See Tafel Family collateral genealogy for further information about Warren and Mildred (Boericke) Worden and their descendants.

163. Ethelwyn Worden (1943–2006) [1305]
"Muff Worden"

She graduated from high school in Lima, Peru, and later was a graduate of Temple University, Philadelphia, majoring in music. She never married. She died suddenly while in the Faroe Islands (an autonomous region of Denmark, situated about equidistant between Iceland, Norway, and the United Kingdom).

She worked as a singer, pianist, and Celtic harpist.

Residences of Muff Worden (from family information):
1969-1980: Dover, Delaware
1980-1990: Boston, Massachusetts
1990-1997: Camden, Maine
1997-2006: Seydisfjordur, Iceland (2006: Ranargata 3, 710 Seydisjordur)

164. Gretchen Worden (1947–2004)
"Get"

She never married. She resided with her cousin, Nina E. Tafel, at 771 North Taylor St., Philadelphia, Pennsylvania.

She was the Director of the Mütter Museum, College of Physicians of Philadelphia, 1988-2004, and authored an illustrated, "coffee-table" book about the museum.[1306] She was listed in Who's Who in the [1305] Most of the biographical information about Muff Worden was fortunately received from her (Muff Worden to Earle Spamer, August 2006). Some additional facts also were available through website pages about her, but these mostly were written in Icelandic! (for example, http:// fjardabyggd.is/media/files/Namskra_tonskolaEskogRey.pdf), although various musical performance websites in which she is mentioned are in English. Her own webpage, in English, was http://www.geocities.com/mworden.geo/main.html. The memorial program for her is in Icelandic ("Ethelwyn „Muff" Worden. Útför frá Seyðisfjarðarkirkju").

[1306] Gretchen Worden, Mütter Museum of the College of Physicians of Philadelphia (Blast Books, New York, 2002). This was preceded by two calendars with the artful photographic work of Jim Knipfel. He remembered her after her death, recalling his work that he originally would take "the freak-show angle", but "in the end, I didn't." He described her, simply, as "a tall, stately woman in what I guessed to be her early 40s, with a strong jaw and dark red hair. She wore a lab coat and spoke in a voice reminiscent of Julia Child–but a much throatier, smarter Julia Child." (Jim Knipfel, New York Press, 17 Aug 2004). Additional biographical information from her obituary in The Philadelphia Inquirer, 4 Aug 2004, and the College of Physicians of Philadelphia website, http://www.collphyphil.org/gw.htm (accessed 21 Jul 2006), which institution has also created the Gretchen Worden room in the Mütter Museum.

East.[1307] National Public Radio noticed the death of Gretchen Worden, concisely summarizing her work and the museum in which she worked:[1308]

> "Worden was director of the Mutter [Mütter] Museum in Philadelphia. She died on Aug. 2 at the age of 57, from a brief illness. She turned the little-known medical museum into a museum with a worldwide reputation. The museum was founded in the 19th century. It originated with the collection of Dr. Thomas Dent Mutter who gathered unique specimens for teaching purposes. It exhibits medical deformities, pathologies and medical anomalies, like the horned woman, the man with the giant colon, deformed fetuses and a plaster cast of the Siamese twins Chang and Eng Bunker.[1309] Worden put together a book of photographs from the museum's collection of human oddities and outdated medical models."

Attendance in the museum grew during Gretchen's tenure, from a few hundred per year to more than 60,000. She came to be the Mütter Museum's director in her own peculiar way, oddly enough next door to the First Church of the New Jerusalem at 22nd and Chestnut Sts., which figures prominently in the lives of a number of the people cited in this genealogy. An obituary in The Economist newspaper noted:[1310]

> "Gretchen Worden, who made the Mutter one of the world's most unusual museums and popular attractions, found her life's work close at hand. In Philadelphia, where she grew up and attended university, the museum and its 'babies in bottles' were a spook story reserved for younger siblings and dinner-party spice. So when given a chance to tour the museum by its assistant curator, with whom she sang in her church choir, she jumped. She quickly found out that the museum was next door to her church. She told the man who gave her the tour that she wanted his job should he ever leave, and started as a curatorial assistant in 1975, becoming curator in 1982 and director in 1988."

There was so much that was uniquely—peculiarly and morbidly—"Gretchen" that it is difficult to capture the essence of her life's passions, and her subtly engaging humor. She was involved in many community interests, such as the Swedenborgian church of her childhood (coincidentally next door to the Mütter Museum), the historic Eastern State Penitentiary (a Smith relative was, coincidentally, Warden here in the earlier part of the 20th century), the American Swedish Historical Museum (about which see more below), the Wagner Free Institute of Science (she was infatuated by its early director, Joseph Leidy, who coincidentally was president of the Academy of Natural Sciences [where I worked, and in turn I had been on the Wagner Institute's board of trustees for ten years])—and so on. She seemed to know everyone who was involved in "fringe" social communities, too, and ecclectic local workers like "Mambo Movers". She was if anything a mistress of uses.

I spent many lunches with Gretchen, discussing topics with serious interest; topics that only people who are both scientifically inclined and museologists (like us) can appreciate. And a word of warning: these are not your usual luncheon topics. There was her cluttered office, crammed with toys and mementos given to her by far-flung correspondents and friends. The relics related to medicine or peculiar humor, such as misformed "Siamese" candies; toilet paper samples from around the world; or a skeleton mother suckling a skeleton child, which was a Day of the Dead figure from Mexico. Then there were the Mütter Museum's own collections to talk about; amongst them there are many things not placed on display even in this historic working museum of human anatomy and pathology. For example, feet, tiny as those of children, removed from Chinese women, still tightly bound in silk wrappings (they were hobbling efforts of beautification); and others, perhaps too delicate to mention in a family genealogy. Then there was Gretchen's own research and historical presentations to scholarly meetings, embracing topics not usually considered in modern history, such as transvestite women doctors of the Civil War.

[1310] "Gretchen Worden, director of Philadelphia's Mutter Museum, died on August 2nd aged 56", as read online at website http://www.economist.com (accessed 21 Jul 2006). [When I knew Gretchen, I never knew of the church connection. In reading through genealogical materials, I found a newspaper article that mentioned that she was a member of the church and a member of its historical committee as well as various historical committees in the city. I wrote an e-mail to Gretchen regarding the connection, and oddly enough did not receive a reply. About two weeks later I learned that she had died. And it was not until a couple of years later still that I learned of our tenuous genealogical connection, too.]

Gretchen Worden, not a doctor but a guide, was an honest caretaker of the very things that can happen to the human body (particularly in the absence of prudent public health and good general healthcare); things about which modern medical students may never learn, much less ever see, during their careers. She more easily than anyone saw how artifacts in her museum correspond to the things that go wrong with the human spirit. too, since every artifact had once made its impact on the person and to those around them. She brought those correspondences for the first time into a very public light, but Gretchen never told "spook stories"; she never thought her work macabre, and always appreciated the irony of dark humor that can play with giddiness and contemplation. She left everyone with a sharp realization that this is the world as it can be remade at any time.

In searching for a suitable summary of what was the essence of the Gretchen Worden I knew—and whom many others knew better—I found this item from the American Swedish Historical Museum, in Philadelphia. It paints Gretchen Worden in what was perhaps her most persistent pose, as the sensible and purposeful moderator of self-importance:[1311]

> "In the fall of 2003 we invited a group of Philadelphia colleagues to ASHM for an informal discussion of directions the Linnaeus Project[1312] might take. At the end, they urged us to sum up the project in a few sentences — "In limerick!" called out Gretchen Worden. On August 2, 2004, to the great sadness of everyone who knew her, Gretchen died of complications from the radiation treatment for Hodgkins disease that had saved her life many years earlier. As director of the Mütter Museum—the extraordinary 19th century anatomical museum at Philadelphia's College of Physicians—Gretchen was known around the world both for her curatorial creativity and for her irrepressible humor.

[1312] Commemorating the 300th anniversary of the birth of the great naturalist, Carl Linnaeus. Carl Linné (in his native Swedish) was the naturalist who formalized the binomial scheme and basic taxonomic structure for botany and zoology now used for three centuries. He standarized the format of using genera and species names based upon Latin or Greek roots; and as part of this work he is the man who named "Homo sapiens" (in 1757, officially).

NOTES

Nina Eleanor Tafel (1947–) [No. 166] never married. She resided with her cousin, Gretchen Worden, at 771 North Taylor St., Philadelphia, Pennsylvania.

NOTES

57. Dirk Van Zyverden (1873–1943)
66. Corstiaan Van Zyverden (1887–1946)

In 1919, the brothers founded the Van Zyverden Co., an international distributor of flower bulbs in The Netherlands. Originally cattle farmers, they capitalized on a growing industry beginning in 1915. Dirk Van Zyverden's sons, Cornelius and Jacobus ("Jack"), joined the company and Jack began selling their products in the United States. Dirk and his two sons then started the Van Zyverden Bros. company to sell to the American market, which company eventually Jack took over for himself. During World War II, when travel prohibited Jack from attending to the business in the U.S. and Canada, a Canadian partner assumed the American business for the duration of the war. In turn, Jack's own sons, Dirk and Paul, entered the flower bulb business in America through other firms. Eventually, business expanded for the Van Zyverden Bros., reaching into the southern U.S. Bulb production continued in The Netherlands, which was overseen during the summer months by Dirk and Paul. Jack retired in 1966. In 1969, the firm was incorporated in Mississippi as Van Zyverden Bros., Inc. In 1972, Van Zyverden Bros. was divided into Flower Bulbs, Inc., run by Dirk, and the Van Zyverden Bros. business mark run by Paul (in The Netherlands as Amsterdam Bulb Co.). In 1980, Paul bought out Flower Bulbs, Inc., from Dirk, and in 1983, his company acquired Brown Bulb Ranch, which operated on the West Coast. In 1989, the firm incorporated in Delaware, and in 1995 changed its name to Van Zyverden, Inc. By the end of the 20th century, the firm was owned and operated by Jacqueline Van Zyverden Hogan and Robert A. Van Zyverden, which includes the European subsidiary of Van Zyverden, B.V. The firm continues a vigorous sales program, shipping bulbs annually to all fifty states and Canada.[1313]

511 ii. Linda Jane Montgomery, born 11 March 1952; died 12 July 1970 in Delaware.

NOTES

351. William Tesson Montgomery (1916–)

William Tesson Montgomery graduated from Williamson Trade School, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. The "Smith Genealogy"[1314] notices that while working as a carpenter in Fort Lauderdale, Florida, he was called in the first draw of the military draft in World War II. However, there is an enlistment record for him on 17 May 1941, in Philadelphia.

Other comments from the "Smith Genealogy" note several points about William Tesson Montgomery:

> "[He] served three and a half years overseas, first in England as a Quartermaster Corps carpenter and then volunteered for infantry duty in General Patton's Army in Germany.";
> "When [he] was in England in the service he and his cousin Edward Lawrence Spamer[1315], also in the Army, were together when opportunity offered."; and
> "He has a service-connected back injury and is now [ca. 1960] construction foreman in building private homes in New Castle County, Delaware" [where he then lived].

William Tesson Montgomery legally adopted Robert Burwell, his wife's son by a previous marriage. Upon his death, W. T. Montgomery's remains were cremated.

NOTES

Harry Archible Cook (1922–)
(husband of Helen Montgomery)

Harry A. Cook served in the U.S. Navy in World War II.

The Social Security Death Index lists a Harry Cook, born 7 April 1922, with a date of decease May 1986; he had last resided in Wilmington, Delaware, and his Social Security card had been issued in Pennsylvania. Helen McCarraher, ex-wife of Harry Archible Cook, indicated that her former husband was still alive in 2004, although she had been out of touch with him for a long time. The information about his being still alive came from Helen McCarraher's daughter, Patricia (Pat) Cook, who had been trying to locate her father.

Wilbur Oliver Mummert (1905–1984)
(husband of Helen Montgomery)
"Wib"

At the time of the 1930 U.S. census, Wilbur Oliver Mummert was a laundry driver, residing at 5622 Christian St., Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. In August 1950, a letter mailed to him by his son, Jack, was sent to this same address. Wilbur Mummert was later a supervisor at the Du Pont chemical company on the New Jersey side of the Delaware River across from New Castle, Delaware. At the time of his death, he resided in Clayton, Delaware. During most of his life with his second wife, Helen, they lived at 24 Halcyon Dr., Garfield Park [section], New Castle, New Castle Co., Delaware. They moved to Clayton during his retirement years. He is buried in New Castle, Delaware.

NOTES

356. Susannah (Watson) Emory (1883–after 1929)

In the 1920 and 1930 U.S. censuses she is listed as Susan W. Emory.

Susannah Watson provides an important genealogical connection in our family. She married Edward Bourke Emory, a descendant of the renowned Emorys of the Eastern Shore, whose seat was at "Poplar Grove" in Spaniard Neck; and through them she is genealogically connected, more remotely, to many notable American families. Edward Bourke Emory's father, Edward Bourke Emory (senior), had married Henrietta Tilghman (1855–1953); and Edward's great grandfather, Thomas Emory (1782–before 1850), married Anna Maria Hemsley (1787–) whose mother was Anna Maria Tilghman (1749/50–1817); and Anna Maria Hemsley Emory's great grandparents in her paternal and maternal lineages (both) were Anna Maria Lloyd (1676–1748) and Richard Tilghman (1671/72–1737/38). Cousins of various kinds, and their own marriages, include numerous individuals of the Tilghman and Lloyd families, as well as others whose names are among the historical ranks both in Maryland and in Philadelphia, such as Bache, Cadwalader, Chew, Coursey, Dallas, Hodge, Hollyday, and McCall. Indeed, Anna Maria Hemsley Emory provides a genealogical reconnection with our own Smith family through Elizabeth Wilkinson, fourth wife of Joseph Moore Smith (1782–1863) [No. 34] and their descendants. Of the children of Thomas and Anna Maria Hemsley Emory, marriages reaffirmed genealogical connections with the Tilghman families, and, as noted elsewhere herein, son William Hemsley Emory married Matilda Bache, a great granddaughter of Benjamin Franklin.

With so many confusing intermarriages over many generations, it is impractical to provide collateral genealogies in some places, unless the same genealogy were to be repeated several times. Instead, generally organized collateral genealogies for these families are relegated to a separate appendix to the present genealogy. Even in this manner some members of the families will be overlooked in running up a family tree; but these genealogies are included for their historical record, both in terms of family connections as well as the historical notes that relate to many of the individuals.

For information relating to the Emorys and other families just mentioned, see Appendix 2.

Poplar Grove, the Emory family seat on Spaniard Neck

(Maryland Historic Sites Survey)

Poplar Grove

Poplar Grove is the homestead of the Emory family, situated on Emory Creek, which with the Corsica River (to which it is a tributary) forms the southern side of Spaniard Neck, west of Centreville, Queen Anne's Co., Maryland. The main house is an 18th-century two-story brick structure with two flanking wings; the main building has been added to perhaps eight times. The property has additional historical and architectural significance in also preserving its18th century slave quarters, one of two such small frame dwellings known in the county. Even with some modern renovations, the slave quarters preserve sufficient evidence to allow insights into slave housing. The site also has been used as a field school in archaeology from Washington College.[1319]

The Asplundh Company

For decades, drivers on the nation's highways have been well familiar with the orange trucks emblazoned with large black letters, ASPLUNDH. Oswald Asplundh, who began as a gardener and then opened a landscaping and tree surgery business, trained his brothers Griffith, Lester, and Carl, by which occupation the brothers earned money for their college educations. On 28 August 1928, Griffith, Lester, and Carl created the Asplundh Tree Expert Co.[1325], capitalizing on their uniquely combined experiences in arbiculture, landscaping, electrical engineering, and business management. Appropriately enough, Asplundh in Swedish refers to "grove of aspen trees". The firm specifically targeted power companies of the Pennsylvania–New Jersey area who required tree pruning along powerline rights-of-way; and the business grew from there, and process that would include the development of training schools that financially assisted the company through the Depression years (along with the brothers working without salaries). Oswald left his business in 1936 and joined the Asplundh Company, expanding the business into the Midwest. During the manpower shortage of World War II, the company introduced herbicidal "chemical brush control" as an alternative means of maintenance in power line rights-of-way. In 1939, the firm had grown to the point that a new headquarters location was established at 505 Old York Road, Jenkintown, Pennsylvania.

[1325] A history of the company is on its website (http://www.asplundh.com; accessed 2005), which was referred to for this overview and which in turn is only a synopsis of the longer, more detailed history.

During the 1950s, seven sons of the founders began working in the field and office, beginning a second generation of the family-run business, which expands into New England, Florida, and the Pacific Northwest. In 1953, the first sessions of the Asplundh Supervisory Training Program were started, which continue to day to provide technical and professional development for the business's general foremen. The two hurricanes of 1954, Carol and Hazel, which affected the northeastern U.S., brought about a formalized emergency procedure for the company's response to storm damage.

The Asplundh Brush Control Co. was formed as a subsidiary company in 1956. Its specialization is in right-of-way clearing and maintenance of rights-of-way.

In 1958, Lester Asplundh developed the first fiberglass-boom lift trucks, which greatly improved field safety and accessibility when working around power lines. The product soon became an industry standard and a manufacturing plant in Chalfont, Pennsylvania, became the Asplundh Manufacturing Division. Thereafter, the firm diversified further, introducing services for underground utility construction in the Mid-Atlantic and Southeast. In 1967, the Infrared Services Division pioneered commercial inspection services using thermographic and infrared devices.

By 1968, the sons of the founders began to take positions as officers and directors of the company. In this year, the firm opened its own commercial truck dealership, Asplundh GMC, to provide the company with cost and supply advantages. In 1972, the Asplundh Street Lighting Division was started, providing for the inspection and maintenance of municipal street lighting systems. Two years later, in response to growth and overcrowding in the Jenkintown facility, a 12-acre site was acquired on Blair Mill Road in Willow Grove, Pennsylvania. A year after that, the Asplundh Railroad Division was created to branch into a new services market for the nation's railroad rights-of-way; and the One-Call Division was inaugurated, whereby contractors and member utilities were served by a single source for communicating information about excavating near underground utilities ("Call Before You Dig" notices are seen everywhere today).

In 1984, the company began international operations by expanding into Ontario and Alberta. The GMC dealership is expanded this year, and the Asplundh Manufacturing Division moved to Creedmoor, North Carolina. Also this year the Municipal Tree Division was established to facilitate public-sector agencies in their needs to contract services.

In 1987, the first of fifteen third-generation Asplundh family members completes internal and employment programs to manage the growing company. In 1988, Asplundh finally reaches all 50 states with operations in Hawaii, and establishes Asplundh Canada, Inc. In 1990, joint ventures take the company to New Zealand and France, and national expansion continues with the acquisition of construction companies. In 1992, the Asplundh Manufacturing Division was sold to Altec Industries, Inc.; and an established tree service company in England was acquired. In 1996, the Pole Maintenance Division was made a new subsidiary, Utility Pole Technologies, Inc.; a meter services division was also made a subsidiary, Utility Meter Services, Inc.; and Underground Utility Locating, Inc., was acquired by the company.

The company continues to expand through diversified management and acquisition of service-management providers.

NOTES

The marriage of Willard Smith [No. 486] ("Will") into the Gyllenhaal family links our family to a long lineage from Sweden who later had connections with the New Church in America. In addition, the Gyllenhaal family includes several notable individuals in the acting professions.[1326]

Constance (Gyllenhaal) Smith, wife of Willard Dale Smith, is known as "Connie".

Caithlyn Smith [No. 592] is known as "Katie".

Smith Family genealogy continues after the following collateral genealogy

Collateral Genealogy

(69 descendants[1327])

The genealogy of the Gyllenhaal family, as it relates to the Smith lineage, and as currently understood, is as follows:[1328]

Descendants of Gunne Olofsson Haal

Generation No. 1

1. Gunne Olofsson[1] Haal was from Härene parish, Sweden, and died about 1634.

Child of Gunne Olofsson Haal is:

\+ 2 i. Nils Gunnesson[2] Haal, born in Kulling county district, Sweden; died between 1680–1681.

Generation No. 2

2. Nils Gunnesson[2] Haal (Gunne Olofsson[1]) was born in Kulling county district, Sweden, and died between 1680–1681. He married Märta Hierta. She died 1697.

Children of Nils Haal and Märta Hierta are:

3 i. Catharina[3] Gyllenhaal, born 1632; died 04 January1734/35 in Vinstorp, Sweden. She married (1) Hans Thorstensson Hillesköld; died 1653. She married (2) Johan Trast; born 1652; died 10 January1706/07 in Åsen, Sweden.

4 ii. Gudmund Gyllenhaal, born 1643; died 01 March 1700/01. He married Beata Rosendufva; died 17 March 1724/25.

NOTES

12. Anders Leonard Gyllenhaal (1842–1905)

He earned a bachelor's degree from Upsala University, 1860, after which he worked at sea for two years, returning to but not completing graduate work at the university. He immigrated to the U.S. in 1866, whereupon he entered and remained in newspaper work. A biographical sketch of Anders Leonard Gyllenhaal was prepared for the History of the Swedes of Illinois, in 1908:[1330]

> "Anders Leonard Gyllenhaal was connected with the Swedish-American press of Chicago for about thirty-one years. In April, 1874, he was engaged on the staff of "Nya Sveska Amerikanaren.' The following October, when that paper changed from Republican to Democratic, Gyllenhaal, who was a staunch Republican, resigned and at once was added to the editorial force of 'Hemlandet.' On Jan. 1, 1891, he joined the staff of 'Svenska Tribunen' and remained with that paper until his death, which occurred Oct. 17, 1905. Gyllenhaal pursued no independent authorship, limiting himself entirely to the routine of the newspaper office, editing the news, writing editorials and compiling and assorting the miscellaneous contents of the paper. He was a model in this way, prompt, methodical and faithful in his work to the highest degree. Since his entry into journalism, his life was rather uneventful.
> "He was born July 1, 1842, in Vestmanland, Sweden. After preliminary studies at the elementary school in Östersund he entered Upsala University, taking the bachelor's degree in 1860. He went to sea for two years, then returned to the university for post-graduate work, but was prevented by lack of funds form completing the course. In 1866 he came to this country and for several years engaged in a variety of occupations. He was in the employ of the Western News Company in Chicago for five years just prior to going into journalism. Gyllenhaal came of noble Swedish stock. He was married in 1880 and with his family lived in a New Church settlement at Glen View [Glenview, Cook Co., Illinois], he himself being a firm believer in the teachings of Swedenborg."

The 1892 Chicago voter registration record indicates that he was a naturalized citizen having lived in the state and county for 24 years, seven years in the precinct in which he was registered.

At the time of the 1880 U.S. census he was an editor.

Selma (Nelson) Gyllenhaal (1861–after April 1930)
(wife of Anders Leonard Gyllenhaal)

At the time of the 1920 U.S. census Selma Nelson resided in The Park, Glenview, Cook Co., Illinois.

Information relating to Selma Nelson's parents and siblings is as follows:

Swain Nelson was born about 1828 in Sweden, and died after 1912. He married Johanna Sophia Hoppman. She was born about 1828 in Sweden, and died 1897 in Illinois.

Children of Swain Nelson and Johanna Hoppman are:
i. Nelson. [Died in infancy].

ii. Seymour Gabriel Nelson, born 30 May 1858 in Chicago, Cook, Illinois; died after 1920. He married Annie E. Magnuson 25 December 1881 in Chicago, Cook, Illinois; born in Sweden.
iii. Selma Amanda Nelson, born 25 November 1861 in Illinois; died after April 1930. She married Anders Leonard Gyllenhaal 04 March 1880; born 01 July 1842 in Kloten, Vestmanland, Sweden; died October 1905 in Chicago, Illinois.
iv. J. Amelia Nelson, born about 1862 in Illinois.
v. Adah J. Nelson, born about 1865 in Illinois.
vi. Alvin E. Nelson, born about 1868 in Illinois. He married Helen Farrington about 1902; born January 1876 in Pennsylvania.

Notes

For information relating to Selma (Nelson) and Anders Leonard Gyllenhaal and their descendants, see the Gyllenhaal Family collateral genealogy.

Some biographical notes relating to Swain Nelson and to his son, Seymour Gabriel Nelson (1858–after 1920) were included in Chicago: Its History and Its Builders[1331], which is included with the individuals below.

Swain Nelson (ca. 1828–after 1912)

He immigrated into the U.S. in 1854 (1852 according to information in 1910 census); moved to Chicago in 1856; became a naturalized citizen in 1860. In 1890 he had been a resident of the county for 30 years, and a resident of the voting precinct for 22 years. He established a landscaping and gardening business, which later grew also into a nursery under the name of Swain Nelson and Sons Co., of which later his son, Seymour, assumed control. Swain Nelson has not been located in the 1900 census.

At the time of the 1880 U.S. census, Swain Nelson was listed as a gardener.

Residences of Swain Nelson (from U.S. censuses and other sources):
1880 census: 565 W. Superior St., Chicago, Cook Co., Illinois
1890 Chicago voter registration: 565 W. Superior St.
1910 census: Mill St., Glenview, Cook Co., Illinois [with son]

Swain Nelson related his life in an autobiography that has been transcribed into the Gyllenhaal Family Tree Project.[1332]

The publication, Chicago: Its History and Its Builders, takes note of Swain Nelson: [1333]

> ". . . Swain Nelson was a native of Sweden, who came to America in 1854 and two years afterward removed to Chicago, where he established a landscape-gardening business which developed later into a nursery and landscape-gardening enterprise that is now conducted by his sons under the name of Swain Nelson & sons Company, of which Seymour G. Nelson is the president. The father was closely identified with the improvement of the park system, having made the plans for Union Park in 1865 and for Lincoln Park in 1866, receiving in competition for the latter a prize awarded by the board of public works. Later improvements of the parks were made under his supervision for many years. One of the first steps which he took in connection with the development of Lincoln Park was to rent adjoining property on which to establish a nursery. There were in those days no landscape nurseries in America, so he imported from England and Scotland large numbers of elms, maples, lindens and other shade trees and the product of his nursery was for many years used exclusively in the planting of Lincoln Park. At the time of the great Chicago fire many hundreds of families found refuge in this nursery, the leaves of the trees offering them the only protection from the elements. In the earlier years of the park construction work he removed quite a large number of full grown ash and other trees from where the lagoons were dug, planting them in other parts of the park, where they are growing and flourishing today. Successful in moving these trees, Mr. Nelson soon hauled in other specimens of similar size from the woods in the vicinity—undoubtedly the first large trees in America to be moved and transplanted thus for ornamental purposes. The product of his nursery was used exclusively in the completion of his contracts for the park. A few years later he established a second nursery at River forest, stocked partly with trees removed from Lincoln Park nursery and partly from new sources. This nursery was established primarily because of his contracts for planting the west side parks and later its product was used to a considerable extent in the planting of private grounds. Many of the most attractive estates around Chicago bear testimony to his skill. In his work he always followed the idea of 'landscapes without waiting,' using trees and shrubs that would show immediate results. He took the contract for landscape improvements in Graceland cemetery when it was first projected and in addition the grounds around many of the finest homes of this city and the northwest. He is now eighty-three years of age and for a number of years has lived retired."

Seymour Gabriel Nelson (1858–afer 1920)

He established a nursery in Glenview, Illinois, in 1894; 150 acres in size in 1912. In 1912 he was a member of the executive committee of the General Church of the New Jerusalem. He was an officer in the American Park Builders organization. At the time of the 1920 census, the families of Alvin and Seymour Nelson were neighbors.

1910: Foreman
1920: Nurseryman

Residences of Seymour Gabriel Nelson (from U.S. censuses):
1910: Mill St., Glenview, Cook Co., Illinois
1920: The Park, Glenview, Cook Co., Illinois

Chicago: Its History and Its Builders takes note of Seymour Nelson: [1334]

"Seymour G. Nelson pursued his education in the graded and high schools of Chicago and following his graduation in 1876, pursued a business course. He afterward spent some time in traveling and while thus engaged made a special study of landscape gardening. His early training in that direction was received under his father and soon after his graduation he became his father's associate in the business, in which he still continues, being now president of the company. In 1894 they established a nursery at Glen View, Illinois, seventeen miles form this city and six miles west of Wilmette, comprising now one hundred and fifty acres. They have made the plans and carried out the work of improvement for numerous parks, cemeteries, state institutions and private grounds throughout the northwest and occupy a foremost position in connection with this branch of business. Seymour G. Nelson is also an officer of the American Park Builders, a corporation recently organized for the promotion and development of the parks of American cities. Its object is to further the park and playground movement by planning and developing for municipalities and private individuals the most practical and artistic grounds without losing sight of business-like economy.

"On the 25th of December, 1881, Mr. Nelson was married at Chicago to Miss Annie E. Magnuson, a native of Sweden, and they reside in Glen View. Mr. Nelson belongs to the American Civic Association of the United States and the Hamilton Club of Chicago. He is also a member of the Immanuel church (Swedenborgian) of Glen View, in which he is serving as a member of the council. He is a member of the executive committee of the General Church of the New Jerusalem, which is the national organization of that sect. It is true that in his career he entered upon an established business, but in enlarging and developing the enterprise many a less resolute spirit of more limited outlook would have failed. He has not only been a follower but has also been a leader in his chosen life work, ofttimes displaying an initiative spirit which has enabled him to accomplish results before others had considered the advisability of following the new ideas which he instituted. He is perfectly familiar with all the scientific phases of his business and with its practical side as well, and long experience and study have given him knowledge that has won for him a distinctive position as a landscape artist."

J. Amelia Nelson (ca. 1862–)

As of the time of the 1920 U.S. census, she remained unmarried. At the times of the 1910 and 1920 censuses, she resided with her brother, Seymour. At the time of the 1920 census, she was a florist.

NOTES

573. Patricia Mildred Glover (1963–) [1344]
"Patti"

Patricia Mildred Glover was born out of wedlock as Baby Girl Gladish; her natural father was an older man, according to family, and there is no additional information. She was adopted 30 May 1963 and named by Edward P. and Rosalie V. Glover. Her middle name honors Mrs. Mildred Cook, the woman with whom Patti's natural mother lived when she was pregnant. Elizabeth had been sent to Peoria and the Crittenden Center, a home for unwed mothers. The residence of Don and Mildred Cook was used as an additional home when the Crittenden Center did not have room. Patti informs that the Cooks took in many girls over the years. Mrs. Cook worked as an assistant and office manager for Dr. Glover about the time that Mrs. Glover's third pregnancy ended with a still birth.

Patti has two sisters, also adopted:

Linda K. Ista, born 26 May 1952
Victoria C. Cook, born 1956 [unrelated to the other Cooks of this Smith Family genealogy]

[1344] Patti Pitcher provided the information about herself and her adopted family (Patti Pitcher to Earle Spamer, 25 Jan 2007, and earlier correspondences Jan 2007).

Patti (Glover) Pitcher graduated from the Richwoods Community High School, Peoria, in 1981, then attended one year at Western Illinois University, in Macomb. In her second year she transferred to Robert Morris College (then in Carthage, Illinois) in order to enroll in their Secretarial Certification program. Attending night school, she earned her Associate Degree in Applied Science at Carl Sandburg College, graduating in December 1983.

Patti and R. Scott Clark divorced in December 1983. Patti and Christopher Lanoue divorced 28 October 1997. After her marriage to Clark, she resided in Palm Bay, Florida. After her marriage to Lanoue, she resided in East Peoria, Illinois. In 2007, Patti and Joshua Pitcher ("Josh") reside in Peoria, Illinois.

Edward Glover
(father of Patricia Mildred Glover)

Edward Glover is a chiropractor; he retired in 2005. Both Edward and Rosalie Glover were originally from the area of St. Louis, Missouri, but they have lived for most of their adult lives in Peoria, Illinois.

Additions and Corrections

Hyperlinks embedded in the main genealogy will, when clicked in the computer's web-browser environment, redirect the user automatically to the pertinent additions, emendations and corrections that are compiled in this "Additions and Corrections" section.

Additions apply newly found information to particular parts of the main genealogy. Emendations rewrite parts of orginal texts. Factual errors and errors that may misconstrue meanings are corrected. Inconsequential typographical errors are not corrected.

All additions, emendations, and corrections are in order by page numbers to which they apply in the main text.

The pagination of the "Additions and Corrections" section begins with Roman numeral "i". Footnotes within this section continue the enumeration from the last number used in the main genealogy.

Bear in mind that the pagination and the enumeration of footnotes within the "Additions and Corrections" section will change from revision to revision as new material is continually added here. The content, pagination, and footnote numbers of the main part of the original genealogy do not change.

If the "Additions and Corrections" section is printed out to accompany a printed version of the main genealogy, these pages may be kept either as a separate document or they may be interleaved where appropriate within the main text of the genealogy.

Locating "Smith's Delight" Today: The Attempts by Edward S. Smith and Earle Spamer

The following paragraph was inadvertantly left in the 2008 text from text that was written prior to the 2007 reevaluation. Delete and replace it as follows:

If my reinterpretation is correct, then the "knoll" that was the property called "Smith's Beginning" should be southeast across Pondtown Road. Today this area is a farm accessed on Goose Valley Fish Lane. The farm is situated on an area that is topographically slightly higher than the area that surrounds it; thus the area may represent the "knoll".

Read

If my reinterpretion is correct, the "knoll" of "Smith's Beginning" is southeast of the presumed location of "Smith's Delight". This is across Pondtown Road (see illustration page II-26F) and northeast of Wood Road, in an area of slightly higher topography. How the landscape may differ from three centuries ago is unclear. As with much of the assumed "Smith's Delight" locale, this assumed "Smith's Beginning" locale is farmland even today. Wood Road—a continuation as it were of Burchard Sawmill Road as one travels to the southeast—may be a relic of original property boundaries, just as I conjecture that Pondtown and Burchard Sawmill Roads likewise trace old property boundaries.

Detailed investigations of property transfer records are needed to establish whether any of these assumptions are founded or not. The Smith properties were subdivided soon after the time of James Smith [No. 1], so it is not yet clear whether there exist sufficiently precise early records that can correlate the original boundaries with those of later land transfers and divisions.

Historical and Genealogical Information About Lentley

Emendation
For
The identity of General McKenney has not be determined; nor has the McKenney's genealogical relationship to the Smith family been determined.

Read
The genealogical connection between the McKenneys and the Smiths, through Frances May Watson Deever as herein mentioned, has thus far not been traced succesfully (perhaps due to a misspelling of Deever). General McKenney was William McKenney, who died 23 July 1897 in Centreville, Maryland. He was the grandfather of John McKenney, a later owner of "Upper Heathworth", the former plantation of Capt. John Smith of this genealogy. It is with John McKenney that Edward Seville Smith corresponded and visited while researching the Smith Family genealogy. Regarding Gen. McKenney, a brief notice in the Denton Journal (24 Jul 1897) indicated, "He leaves a widow and several grown children. General McKenney was the owner of about sixty farms, many of them among the best in Queen Anne's county." He also had been an unsuccessful candidate for Governor of Maryland in 1883. His son, William McKenney, died suddenly in June 1921 in Centreville, at the age of 49; he had been the president of the Centreville National Bank. That son, William, left a widow and three children, William Jr., Maria, and John G. McKenney. Both John and Maria, both of whom never married, later were owners of "Upper Heathworth", and they restored that name to the property when they owned it. At this time it is not known whether the McKenney family had had ownership of the property all during the 20th century, or whether John and Maria had purchased it on their own accord.

An examination of high-quality aerial photographs, produced in 2005, viewed on Google Earth online, show nothing particular in the Spaniard Neck area that helps locate a structure such as that we seek here. Structures within view of the Chester River (and Corsica River) are larger homes and farm buildings.

Regardless of whether the brick house was actually on the "Lentley" property, there are varying opinions today as to just where was the brick house. Each set of information based on family sources is essentially credible; but they conflict. Thus far, inquiries to local historical societies about both the brick house and "Lentley" have been inconclusive. For want of a serendipitous find of documentary evidence that surely locates either the brick house or "Lentley", their location(s) may now be lost to all.

Addition
The identity of "Mrs. Prettyman", who painted the oil portrait of Capt. John Smith, has still not been ascertained through definite records. However, the following circumstantial evidence convincingly identifies her as Emma E. (Gooding) Prettyman, wife of Rev. Cornelius Wiltbank Prettyman, a Methodist Episcopal clergyman with whom Rev. John Edward Smith (son of Capt. John Smith) attended divinity school in Carlisle, Pennsylvania. After graduation, Rev. Prettyman was appointed to a preaching circuit in Delaware very near where Rev. Smith was working (Rev. Smith having graduated the year before). The portrait was likely painted circa 1875. In all probability it was painted from a copy photograph of Capt. John Smith made in the 1870s from an original that may have dated to ca. 1840. The original photo may have been a daguerreotype, but it no longer survives. The evidence is as follows.

The portrait's painter is known in the family only as "Mrs. Prettyman". Two photographic portraits are known of Capt. John Smith; they are depicted in illustration page II-88A. Based on the apparent age of Capt. John Smith as seen in these photographs, they seem to have been taken about ten years apart, the latter one not too long before he died. It is the younger Smith whose likeness is reproduced in the oil painting by Mrs. Prettyman. At least two examples of this photo have been seen in family collections; they bear the studio photographer's name and place as R. H. Blair, Smyrna, Delaware. As explained in the main part of this genealogy, R. H. Blair worked in Smyrna only in the 1870s; before and after this decade he was in Massachusetts. Furthermore, Rev. John E. Smith, Capt. John Smith's son, also sat for a photographic portrait by Blair in Smyrna. Thus it must be that the Blair photograph copied an older photograph that depicts the younger Capt. John Smith. From an assumed age of ca. 1840, that original photograph could have been a daguerreotype, perhaps a unique copy.

It is reasonable that the successful Capt. Smith would have sat for a photographer; and if this was early enough the medium would most likely have been a daguerreotype. Daguerreotype photographs are a format somewhat difficult to reproduce photographically because they are mounted under glass, they can appear as a negative when the light strikes them in a certain way, and they may or may not be in fine focus. As noted in the main genealogy, the 1870s copy prints show some hand-painted touch-ups that would have been made to make up for deficiencies in the new negative; and it is this evidence, too, that suggests that the original was a daguerreotype that could not be reproduced perfectly. In turn, Mrs. Prettyman's rendition in oil restored a more formal appearance to Capt. Smith's dress.

That photographer R. H. Blair of Smyrna made the copy photo of Capt. John Smith in the 1870s, and that Rev. J. E. Smith sat for Blair at this time, too, suggests that it was Rev. Smith who had Blair make copies for redistribution to family members. And it was from one of these prints that Mrs. Prettyman painted the oil portrait of Capt. Smith. We may surmise that the painting was made at the time when Rev. Smith and Rev. Prettyman worked in nearby ministerial circuits during the early part of their careers. Inasmuch as John's brother, Capt. James Smith, was the first owner of the Prettyman portrait of their father, presumably either John had the portait made as a gift for his brother or James commissioned the portrait himself.

Regarding the identity of Mrs. Prettyman, the following evidence is presented here.

The Easton Gazette (Maryland) for 2 March 1872 reported the assignment of Methodist Episcopal ministers in Maryland and Delaware; the information was taken from the proceedings of the fifth annual Wilmington Conference of the M.E. Church. The report noticed that Rev. J. E. Smith had been assigned to the Smyrna (Delaware) Circuit as an assistant to Rev. Elijah Miller; and the church's Dover (Delaware) District had appointed one "C. W. Prettyman" to the Leipsic and Raymond's Circuit, in Delaware.

Referred page numbers pertain to the original, printed version of this genealogy. Occasional (but infrequent) one-page variations may be noted between the digital and printed versions, but this does not affect the proper function of hyperlinks within the digital version. This copy was printed on 8 June 2011.

In 1870, when the U.S. census was taken, John Edward Smith was a divinity student at the Methodist school at Dickinson College, in Carlisle, Pennsylvania. Notably, another student in the school was Cornelius Prettyman. Other records show that Smith was in the class of 1871; Prettyman was in the class of 1872. The 1880 U.S. census for Lewes and Rohoboth, Delaware, lists Rev. Prettyman, an "M.E. Minister", with his wife and three young children (the youngest of whom was aged 7). Mrs. Prettyman was identified there as Emma E., aged 30, born in Maryland. (In the 1870 census, Cornelius Prettyman was listed as having been born in Pennsylvania; in 1880 he is listed as having been born in Delaware.) Further research has identified Rev. Prettyman as Cornelius Wiltbank Prettyman, who was from a family of whom many of its men attended Dickinson College (see below). Rev. Prettyman remained in the Delaware–Maryland circuits of the M.E. church throughout his career.

The striking circumstances of Rev. Smith and Rev. Prettyman having been adjacent classmates in divinity school, and that they both were assigned to nearby Methodist Episcopal circuits in Delaware in 1872, all but confirms that that "Mrs. Prettyman", portraitist of Capt. John Smith, was Emma, wife of Rev. Prettyman. And, surely, Rev. John E. Smith's children knew the Prettymans; but following proper etiquette the children probably knew Rev. Prettyman's wife only as "Mrs. Prettyman", hence the family record of the artist only by her polite name.

It is not known if Emma Prettyman was in any way formally schooled in art, or whether her talents were strictly avocational. Her style in painting this portrait is very much like that of the primitive style of many portrait painters in the early and mid-Nineteenth Century, suggesting the influence of an older teacher.

Notes on the Prettyman Family

The Prettyman family saw eight members as graduates of Dickinson College, and one other who was a trustee of the college but not a graduate. Rev. Cornelius Prettyman later became a professor at Dickinson College.

The following summary of Rev. Prettyman's ministerial and administrative services and fraternal memberships are summarized in Who's Who in American Methodism (Carl F. Price, comp., ed., E. B. Treat and Co., New York, 1916, p. 175); the list is in chronological order:

> Pastorates: Talbot, Md., Millington; Leipsic, Del.; Appoquinimink; Sudlersville, Md.; Centreville; Lewis, Del.; Wilmington (Union); Newark; Fairmount, Md.; Seaford, Del.; Salisbury, Md.; (Brandywine) Wilm[ington]; Newcastle; Snow Hill, Md.; Centreville; Smyrna '14—— [to date]. (Wilmington Conf.). Conf. trust. (treas.) Gen. Conf. (alt. '12); trus. Dickinson Coll.; Wilmington Conf. Acad. (Dover). Mem. Beta Theta Pi frat.: Mason: Address [in 1916]: Smyrna, Del.

Rev. Prettyman is noted in The Sun (Baltimore, 15 Jun 1913, p. 2) has having accepted the Methodist Episcopal pastorate in Smyrna, Delaware, at that time (the above account indicates 1914).

Emma Gooding was the daughter of William and Lydia A. Gooding, of Galena, Kent Co., Delaware. William was a farmer.

Records of the Oddfellows Cemetery, Camden, Kent Co., Delaware, include Rev. and Mrs. Prettyman:

Prettyman, Emma E. Gooding (1850–1912)
Prettyman, Rev. Cornelius Wiltbank (1844–1928)

Other Prettymans listed in the cemetery are:

Prettyman, Catherine E. (28 Jul 1815–30 May 1901) [Rev. Prettyman's mother, Catherine Canon]
Prettyman, Cornelius W. (15 Dec 1788–30 May 1848) [Rev. Prettyman's father]
Prettyman, Emily May (20 Aug 1901–3 May 1902), daughter of Anna May Prettyman
Prettyman, Ovid C. (21 Jul 1876–21 Aug 1908) [a son of Rev. Prettyman]

In addition, ten members of a Gooding family are recorded in this cemetery:

Gooding, Francis M. (5 Oct 1852–1 Mar 1914) [perhaps a brother of Emma Gooding Prettyman]
Gooding, Hannah J. (31 Jul 1856–12 Jul 1937), wife of Francis M. Gooding and eight infant and young children

Montreville Bowen (who purchased Upper Heathworth from Mr. and Mrs. George Moore Smith) is recorded in the U.S. excise tax records in October 1864, 1865, and 1866, registered in Centreville, Maryland. He seems to have been reasonably well off, as he is taxed on 26 ounces of silver plate, a piano, a gold watch, and a carriage.

Throughout this section of the genealogy, Bowen's given name, although listed both as Monteville and Montreville as based on my sources, probably is correctly Montreville.

Addition

"W.H. Waner" is surely W. H. Warren, whose family likely included the Misses Warren noticed in John McKenney's recollection on page II-98.

A larger number of the Warren family seem to have resided at Upper Heathworth. In 1875 a tragic event was reported in the Centreville Record, which was picked up in the Denton Journal (3 Jul 1875) as follows:

> SAD CASE OF DROWNING.—A little girl, about 2½ years of age, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. H. Warren, residing on the estate known as the Bowen farm, situate on Chester river, below Booker's wharf, met with a sad and distressing death by drowning, on Tuesday, the 22d inst. Two elder sisters—nearly grown—went down to the beach to bathe, and permitted their little sister to accompany them. The two young ladies first bathed their little sister, dressed her, placed her in a boat hauled ashore on the beach, but not otherwise made fast, and then went to enjoy a bath themselves. While thus engaged, the rising tide floated the boat from its insecure moorings, some distance from shore before discovered by the young ladies. Upon discovery, they attempted to wade out after the boat and bring it ashore, but the water proving too deep, they gave up in hopeless despair. The boat drifted out as far as the middle of the river—which at this point is a mile wide—when the little child clambered over the side of the boat into the river and was drowned.—Up to this writing all efforts to find the body of the child have proven unsuccessful. Mr. and Mrs. Warren were visiting Centreville at the time of the sad occurrence.—Centreville Record.
> Since the above was put in type, we learn that one of the sisters on the shore who witnessed the child crawl out of the boat into the river, went into convulsions, and at present but little hopes of her recovery are entertained. She has not spoken since. Diligent search for the recovery of the body of the child has been made for miles up and down the river, but all efforts have failed. The little girl is represented as being particularly bright and interesting and a great favorite with all who knew her.

Regretfully, the name of the little girl is not known now, who was born after the 1870 U.S. census was taken.

The 1870 census for the 3rd District in Queen Anne's Co. lists a household for W. H. and D. A. Warren, located among other neighbors known to have inhabited Spaniard Neck. However, the identity of the sisters mentioned in the newspaper report is not made clear from it. The household is listed as follows (all were born in Maryland except farm laborer Alfred Williams, who was born in Kentucky):

Warren, W^{m}. H., aged 42	School Teacher
D. A., 38
Maria L., 10
W^{m}. H., 7
Tho^{s}. J., 5
Lucie K., 1
Carmichael, Amanda, 8 [black]
Rebecca, 14 [black]
Williams, Alfred, 28 [black]	Farm Laborer

Referred page numbers pertain to the original, printed version of this genealogy. Occasional (but infrequent) one-page variations may be noted between the digital and printed versions, but this does not affect the proper function of hyperlinks within the digital version. This copy was printed on 8 June 2011.

Presumably, D. A. Warren is William's wife, although we cannot be absolutely certain of this without other indications.

The 1880 census for the 3rd District lists the household as shown below. The census taker, whose handwriting is reasonably clear, though hasty, has made obvious misspellings of names and words on the page, and all names as shown below are as seemingly spelled by him (including the family name, which looks like "Warr" or "Wan" and has been indexed as "Warr"):

Warr[en], William, 52	Farmer
Sarah, 40 (wife)	Keeping hous [sic]
Marar L., 20	At home
Thomas D., 14
Lucy, 10
Hurbett, 4
Sadie, 24	At home
Susan, 21
Ugene, 15 [daughter]
Mary Eva, 12
Cable, James, 26	Laborer
Cable, Ann, 22	Cook

All were born in Maryland, except Sarah, who was born in North Carolina, and the employed Cables, who were born in England. (Recall that John McKenney's account [page II-98] noted that Capt. Bowen had also come from "the Carolinas".) From the list of individuals as shown for the 1880 census it might seem as though Sadie, Susan, "Ugene", and Mary Eva actually belong to another household residing with the Warrens; perhaps they are the children of other Warren parents who were not present or not alive, or whose different surname was not recorded by the census taker. It is also possible that they are the children of William H. Warren by a marriage prior to his marriage to Sarah; but note that they are not present in his household at the time of the 1870 census, when D. A. Warren resided with him and the younger children. However, the older children have not been located at all under the Warren (or similar) name in the 1870 census.

aphides. Diligent inquiry in this neck failed to bring to light any evidence of the present or of the past existence of yellows. Of fruit there was very little, except in the extreme end of the neck.

* * * If this disease occurred in Spaniards' Neck, or anywhere along Chester River, on either side, south of Chestertown, it was certainly very rare. [footnote 1: "In 1888 I re-examined this region very carefully, finding a few affected trees at 'Riverside,' 3½ miles below Chestertown, and a few also in two orchards farther down the river, in Spaniards' Neck, in Queen Anne."]

Addition

The family oral tradition that during part of the 20th century the former Upper Heathworth property "had been used by the Du Pont corporation as a hunting lodge or executive retreat" may after all have been true, although precisely for how long the property was used as such is not clear. Jean Gottman noted in the book, Megalopolis, the modern trend of urbanizing farmland; one example was a dairy farm of meadows turned into a golf course, to which Gottman added, "For instance, Upper Heathworth is such a farm on the eastern shore of Chesapeake Bay in Queen Anne County, Maryland. It has been developed as a gun club." (Jean Gottman, Megalopolis: The Urbanized Northeastern Seaboard of the United States, The Twentieth Century Fund, New York, 1961, p. 319). Of course, this was in keeping with John McKenney's advocacy of hunting (as noted in the Additions & Corrections for page II-93, note 134).

Emendation and Addition
The family name, Fosbenner, is substantiated here through information contained with the marriage notice of her sister, Susannah, to Joseph William Wesley Watson. There, Susannah is noted to be the "youngest daughter of Daniel Fosbenner, Esq." ("Married", The Sun [Baltimore], 13 Jan 1848).

Thus far all that is known of the Fosbenner family are the sisters, Eliza and Susannah, and their father, Daniel.

Daniel Fosbenner has been located in the 1850 U.S. census for Baltimore, 15th Ward, with a household as follows (all but Daniel were born in Maryland):

Daniel Fosbenner, 68, no occupation, born in Germany
Ann Fosbenner, 48
Alexander Fosbenner, 8
Charles Lyons, 16, black, servant
Sarah Watts, 68, "Dumb" [affliction]
Ann Lilly, 35
Henry Lilly, 12
Catharine Lilly, 8
Robert Lilly, 6
Charles Lilly, 2

The relationship of Daniel Fosbenner to Ann Fosbenner, Sarah Watts, and the Lillys is not known here.

A Daniel Fosbenner has been located in the following U.S. censuses for Baltimore, and who presumably is the Daniel Fosbenner in question, but this has not been surely ascertained: 1820 (9th Ward), 1830 (9th Ward), 1840 (8th Ward).

In the 1850 census, another Daniel Fosbenner is listed: aged 27, born in Maryland, residing with numerous other "Mariners" in a "Sailors Boarding House". Whether he is a relation to Daniel Fosbenner is uncertain.

Occasional (but infrequent) one-page variations may be noted between the digital and printed versions, but this does not affect the proper function of hyperlinks within the digital version. This copy was printed on 8 June 2011.

Daniel Fosbenner ran for public office in the Baltimore City Council (8th Ward), in 1840 and 1844 at least.

Daniel Fosbenner died 17 February 1851 in Baltimore, as noticed in the obituary in The Sun (18 Feb 1851, p. 2). It mentions that he was "for many years an active member of the Methodist Episcopal Church."

Ann Fosbenner is listed in the 1860 census for Baltimore, 15th Ward, with the following household:

Alex Fosbenner, 18, Apprentice Carpenter, born in Maryland
Ann Perkins, 13, born in Ireland
Benjamin Jennings, 26, Jun.[?] Machinist, born in Massachusetts
Sarah Jennings, 29, born in Maine
Walter Jennings, 5/12, born in Maryland
Barbara Carling[?], 24, servant, born in Maryland
John Robey, 29, black, servant, born in Maryland

Rev. Joseph E. Smith's obituaries indicated that he had served pastorates in Baltimore, Maryland; Wilmington, Delaware; Philadelphia, Lancaster, Wilkes-Barre, and Scranton, Pennsylvania; Wheeling, West Virginia; Buffalo, New York; St. Paul, Minnesota; and Trenton, New Jersey. They also indicated that he had been secretary of the American Society of Education. He was buried in Mount Moriah Cemetery, Philadelphia, but which regretfully has long been a vandalized property in great disrepair and in unsafe surroundings.

His obituary from The Washington Post (7 Dec 1910, p. 2) provides new information for this genealogy:

Lancaster, Wilkes-Barre, Scranton, Wheeling, Bufalo, St. Paul, and Trenton. For five years he was pastor of the Mount Vernon Methodist Church in Baltimore, which is often called the Cathedral of Methodism.

Dr. Smith is survived by four children—Miss Caroline F. Smith of Washington, the Rev. Frederick W. Smith, rector of Trinity Church, Takoma Park [Maryland], Wilbur F. Smith, of Baltimore, and the Rev. Dr. Herbert S. Smith, rector of St. Margaret's Church, this city.

Complete funeral arrangements have not been made. It has been decided, however, that burial shall be in Mount Moriah Cemetery, Philadelphia.

From this we may also note that the Mintwood Place address originally given in this genealogy as the residence of Rev. Herbert Scott Smith and his sister, Caroline, was in fact originally their father's.

Rev. Joseph Smith had been called to the pastorate at the Mount Vernon Place Methodist Episcopal Church, Baltimore, from his post in Trenton, New Jersey (as noted in the main genealogy). The Trenton Evening Times (7 Dec 1910) noticed his passing:

Rev. Dr. J. E. Smith Dies At 80 Years

Former Trenton Pastor Passes Away Suddenly in Washington—Highly Esteemed Here

Word was received by General James F. Rusling today of the death of the Rev. Dr. Joseph E. Smith, former pastor of the State Street Methodist Church, at his home in Washington, D. C., last night. The former Trenton minister's death was very sudden. The exact cause of death is not known here, but is supposed that the infirmities of age were responsible as Dr. Smith was 80 years of age.

Dr. Smith was pastor of the State Street Church for five years. He left Trenton about twelve years ago. He was a man of high character and fine scholarship and possessed great pulpit ability. He distinguished himself and his churches wherever he served. Dr. Smith while here, had a lengthy controversy with Father Hogan on the question of religion.

Dr. Smith was pastor of many churches during his ministerial career. He occupied pulpits in Wilmington, Wilkes-Barre, Scranton, Buffalo, St. Paul, Baltimore and this city.

He had been invited to return to this city and particpate in the semi-centennial celebration of the State Street church. His death will be regretted deeply. The funeral will be conducted from his home in Washington Friday afternoon.

Addition

Another example of Rev. Joseph E. Smith's sermon topics is found in a newspaper announcement during his pastorate in Trenton, New Jersey:

A Series of Sermons.

Rev. J. E. Smith, LL. D., pastor of the State Street M. E. Church, will begin, tomorrow evening, a series of Sunday evening lectures to young men. The following subjects will be discussed: "The Glory of Young Men," "Ideals," "Guides," Perils," "Investments," "Amusements," "Success," "Christianity," "The Perfect Man."

Addition
The 1900 U.S. census, enumerated 1 June, indicates that George Washington Smith had been married to Margaret Slaughter for two years. The figure "13" [years] for G. W. Smith is crossed out and "2" inserted; Margaret has "2" indicated. She indicated that she had had one child, who was still living; that child must be Margaret Slaughter Smith [No. 122].

The attribution of Isabelle Margaret Smith (1888–1896) [No. 121] as a daughter of Margaret Slaughter may be in error (she could be the daughter of G. W. Smith's first wife, Eliazabeth), although take note that the "13" years of marriage as first indicated for G. W. Smith would coincide with a time shortly before the birth of Isabelle.

Emendation
The "Smith Genealogy" gives the birth date of Margaret Slaughter Smith [No. 122] as July 1897; the 1900 U.S. census gives the birth date of Margaret Slaughter Smith [No. 122] as July 1898.

In January 2011 , James Smith's military records were examined from archival sources; they were compiled after the war during accountings of veterans' military activities (in this case, assembled Confederate archives), although one original Confederate States document is included in the file. The records fairly corroborate the information that is given in this genealogy, but which are summarized with information below for the sake of a more complete, authentic record from original sources.

As reconstructed from the Conferate-records archive created after the war, James Smith's service is as follows (which may be compared with other lists in the main portion of this genealogy):

Served as a Private in Co. B, 1st Maryland Cavalry.

1862 September 10	Enlisted in Charlottesville, Virginia, by Capt. Emach, for "Three years or the war".
1863 July 1–1864 February 29	Period of service indicated on cover sheet
1863 October 10	Captured at Racoon Ford [three records indicate Racoon Ford, one record indicates Germania Ford]
1863 October 12	Committed to Old Capitol Prison, Washington, D.C.
1863 October 27	Transferred to Point Lookout, Maryland
1863 October 28	Arrived from Washington at Point Lookout, Maryland
1864 March 3	"[P]aroled, until exchanged, at Point Lookout, Md."
1864 March 15	Received of the quartermaster in Richmond, Virginia, $230.13, for accounts as follows:

8 months pay (1 Jul 1863–29 Feb 1864)	96.00
"Pay for Horse 3 mos & 10 days"	40.00
Clothing for year ending 1 Jan 1864	134.13
"Deduct Clothing drawn"	40.00
"Parole & Furlough"	[nothing listed]

1864 August 7	Captured at Moorfield, Virginia
1864 August 10	Listed as prisoner "confined in Military Prison at Wheeling, Va. (also known as Atheneum Prison)".*
1864 August 11	"[F]orwarded from Harper's Ferry, West Va., to Camp Chase, O."
1864 August 12	Arrived from Wheeling, West Virginia, at Camp Chase, Ohio
1865 March 18	"[P]aroled at Camp Chase, Ohio, and transferred to Point Lookout"

*This record also provides the following additional information: Age, 23; blue eyes; brown hair; original residence in "Queen Ann" County, Maryland; arrested by "Genl Averal" in Moorfield, Virginia, 7 August 1864. [It is unknown whether this indicates that he was in fact captured by the General or that the listing indicates a prisoner of the General's command.]

Records further indicate that James Smith also received pay for the use of his horse even while he was a prisoner of war.

An early work by James Smith was the building of a storehouse for J. Hersey Hall in Centreville. Hall advertised his new storehouse in the Centreville Observer, which advertisement was noted in the Denton Journal, 10 May 1873:

> We copy from the Centreville Observer, the following description of the new store house recently built, and now occupied by J. Hersey Hall, of Centreville, Queen Anne's county, whose advertisment will be found in our columns:
> "The new store house of Mr. J. Hersey Hall, on Front street, of this town, is one of the handsomest improvements added to the town for many years, and out strips any store we have met with on the Eastern Shore. The building is a two-story brick with cellar, the front being of the best pressed brick. It has two large windows in the lower story front, each one containing four panes of glass, 38¾ by 23½ inches, shielded from the street by heavy wire blinds. The store is entered through heavy doors which lets you into a small vestibule, inclosed with glass, from which you enter the store through spring doors. The interior is certainly handsome. The shelving on the dry goods side is two feet deep (built so as to show goods endways) are handsomely bracketed and painted. Those on the grocery side are not so deep, but are otherwise similar to the dry goods shelves. Under the shelves on the grocery side are neatly arranged bins, each to hold about one barrel. The counters are built of yellow pine, with beautiful walnut tops; are built low, and are added to by a row of stools for the accommodation of customers when dealing. At the extreme end of the store is an elevated platform covered by oilcloth and enclosed by a handsome railing. This contains the cashier's desk, safe, etc. On one side of the rear end of the room is a handsome staircase, with walnut twist rail, gotten out by Capt. James Smith, the builder of the store. It is a neat job, and speaks well for Capt. Smith's ability as a first-class mechanic. The front windows of the store are retreating, and are the depth of the vestibule, and are lighted up by bronze lamps. The storeroom proper is lighted up by handsome bronze chandeliers, and is heated by a furnace in the cellar. The doors and the vestibule partition are handsomely oaked, the graining being done by Messrs. Emmort & Quasterly, of Baltimore. The other painting was done by that staid old gentleman and excellent painter, Mr. W. Reese, of this town, and is in keeping with his well known reputation. The whole arrangement of the store, the doors, locks, hinges, chandeliers, money drawers, and in fact, every thing about it is first-class, and will remain a lasting tribute to the noble generosity and accomplished taste of Mr. Hall, the young proprietor. The second story of the building is divided into three rooms, two of them for sleeping rooms, and the other for a carpet, boot and shoe room.["]

The location of the J. Hersey Hall store in Centreville was on North Commerce St. between Lawyer's Row and Water St. The store was destroyed in a fire in 1902 along with the Clyment's Store and McKenney's "corner brick store". (>>"Town of Centreville Historic District" National Register of Historic Places nomination form, U.S. National Park Service, ca. 1990.)

J. Hersey Hall was also one of the later owners of "Upper Heathworth", the property in Spaniard Neck once owned by Capt. John Smith, the father of Capt. James Smith. Hall purchased the property in 1887, then somewhat reduced in acreage from the size acquired by Capt. Smith from the Hollyday family of adjacent Readborne. (See page II-98 of this genealogy.)

numerous wharves and granaries in Centreville. However, the damage done to the Price–McKenney–Smith wharf was fortuitously short-lived, as noted below ("Our Neighbors", Easton Gazette, 13 Oct 1877, p. 3):

> In speaking of the late storm, the Observer says, at the Centreville Landing the damage done to grain, fertilizers, &c, was not inconsiderable. * * * The piles of lumber at the wharf belonging to Mr. R. Price, Mr. McKenney and Capt. James Smith were floated away, but it has all or nearly all been recovered uninjured.

The R. Price there noted is surely the same man who owned the R. G. Price Lumber Yard, which is noted also in the discussions of George Moore Smith [No. 52] (also see the map on page II-114A). McKenney is likewise a familiar name in this section of the present genealogy.

District Superintendent Of M. E. Church Suddenly Stricken.

FORMER PASTER IN SALISBURY

Civil War Veteran, Prominent In Civil Affairs And National Leader Of His Denomination

Salisbury, Md., Feb. 16.—The Rev. Thomas E. Martindale, 73 years old, a widely known member of the Wilmington conference Methodist Episcopal Church, died suddenly here this morning from heart disease. The fatal attack occurred while Dr. Martindale was engaged in some detailed clerical work connected with the coming meeting of the Wilmington Methodist Episcopal Conference. He was in his library surrounded by his family when stricken and died before medical assistance could be called.

Dr. Martindale was district superintendent of the Salisbury district. He was very popular with the members of the conference and had been a superintendent at three different times [but see below], his service in this connection covering 16 years.

Before becoming superintendent of this district a year ago he was pastor of Asbury Church, this city. When he resigned he was elected minister emeritus.

Thomas E. Martindale was pastor of the Asbury Church for the years 1887–1890, 1906–1915; and he was district superintendent 1898–1902.

Of note also is the pastorate of the Asbury Church held by Charles Wiltbank Prettyman, 1896–1901, who is mentioned in this genealogy with reference to Rev. John Edward Smith; and that Rev. Prettyman's wife, Emma, was the artist of the oil portrait of J. E. Smith's father, Capt. John Smith.

The Methodist Episcopal minister whom Rev. J. E. Smith assisted in the Smyrna Circuit in 1871–1872 was Elijah Miller who, according to the 1870 U.S. census, was born about 1811 in Maryland.

The 5th annual Wilmington Conference of the M.E. Church was held in Easton, Maryland, in March 1873. An early announcement listed those in whose homes the attendees would reside during the conference. John France and J. E. Smith were to lodge with Samuel Patchett. (>>"Wilmington Conference, M. E. Church", Easton Gazette, 22 Feb 1873.) [According to the 1870 U.S. census, Samuel Patchett (born about 1829) was a furniture dealer in Easton.]

The review of the Wilmington Conference meeting in May reported, "First years class culled and reported through Rev. H. W. Todd, chairman, and the following passed: Jno. D. Kemp, J. E. Smith, G. W. Wilcox, D.W.C. McIntire, S. S. Baker, R. H. Adams, R. C. James." (>>"Fifth Annual Session of the Wilmington Conference, M. E. Church", Easton Gazette, 8 Mar 1873.)

Addition

The following information about the Bryn Zion Church is given in the history of Kenton Hundred in Henry C. Conrad, History of the State of Delaware (published by the author, Wilmington, 1908, Vol. 2, p. 627):

> About a mile to the northeast of the town of Kenton is Bryn Zion Church founded in 1733 by eight or nine families of Old Duck [C]reek village who were members of the Welsh Tract Baptist Church of Pencader Hundred, in New Castle County. In 1747 a conveyance of one-half an acre of land was made by william Griffin to six men, trustees of the Baptist Society, for church uses after the confession of faith adopted by the Baptist Association at Philadelphia which met September 25, 1742. This land was never occupied by a church building, the Welsh Tract Baptists rebuilt and used the church built by the Independents and known as Mount Zion. The congregation and church were incorporated July 22, 1794. In the graveyard of this church repose all that was mortal of many of the old famlies of the Hundred.

The following information is given in Thomas Hale Streets, David Rees of Little Creek Hundred; and the Descendants of John Rees, His Son (Philadelphia, 1904, pp. 30-31):

> The will of Jeremiah Rees, of Little Creek Hundred [whose daughter-in-law in the second marriage of his son, John Ringgold Rees, was Elizabeth Ann Sevil, daughter of Abel Sevil], was signed 10 December, 1800, and probated 4 march, 1801. * * * The name of Rhoda Wallis was among those of the constituents who, 24 November, 1781, petitioned the mother church that Bryn Zion be constituted a separate church.

Addition
The nature of circuit pastorates may be lost on many people today. One might imagine a transient minister, riding from Sunday to Sunday to minister to a far-flung group of congregants of his faith. While this is partly true, in fact his docket was as busy as that of a house-calling doctor. A few examples from newspaper listings suffice to provide glimpses of the busy schedule during parts of his career on the Eastern Shore during nearly 40 years:

> Rev. J. E. Smith will lecture in Greensborough on the 17th, 18th and 19th insts. Subject, "Heaven, Hell and Spiritualism." It is believed Mr. Smith will repeat the lectures in Denton at an early date. (>>Denton Journal, 5 Dec 1885)

> Rev. John E. Smith lectured at Preston on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday nights of this week to large and appreciative audiences. (>>Denton Journal, 20 Feb 1886)

> Rev. J. E. Smith announced last Sunday that he would hereafter change the alternate Sundays on which he would hold service in Denton, preaching to-morrow. He will preach at Preston to-morrow night. Service in Easton will be held on each Sunday following his Caroline [county] appointments. (>>Denton Journal, 24 Apr 1886)

> "The Great Invitation" will be Rev. J. E. Smith's subject at Preston tomorrow morning. In the evening "Onward March" will be his theme. In the afternoon at Williston the subject will be "The Gates That Are Never Shut." (>>Denton Journal, 25 Sep 1915)

> "The Light of Asia" will be the subject of Rev. J. E. Smith's sermon in the New Church at Preston tomorrow morning, and "When the Sun Stood Still" will be the theme in the evening. At Williston in the afternoon Mr. Smith will preach on "The Seen and the Unseen." (>>Denton Journal, 22 Sep 1923)

In addition to his regular circuit pastorates cited in this genealogy, some of Rev. J. E. Smith's occasional or intermittent pastorates are noted from time to time in newspaper listings of church events. The following few examples are cited from the Denton Journal, and are included here simply as a means to identify a few of these other places, as surely there were others.

> Rev. J. E. Smith lectured to a large audience in Federalsburg on Monday evening. Mr. Smith announced that he would hold service there regularly hereafter. (>>Denton Journal, 4 Jun 1887)

> Rev. J. E. Smith, will preach at Anderstown tomorrow afternoon instead of filling his regular appointment at Denton. (>>Denton Journal, 30 Jul 1887)

A particular sermon is noted here:

> Rev. J. E. Smith,will preach will preach tomorrow afternoon in the Masonic Hall, Denton. Apropos of Charleston's calamity his subject will be "The Moral Phase of the Earthquake." (>>Denton Journal, 11 Sep 1886)[1346]

Innuendo seemingly dogged Rev. Smith from the beginning of his ministries in the New Church, as further inferred from this erroneous newspaper item published less than three months after Rev. Smith's withdrawal from the Methodist Episcopal Church (Denton Journal, 13 Jun 1885):

> It is stated that Rev. J. E. Smith, who recently left the M. E. church to join the Swedendogians [sic] and was assigned to a charge in Maine, has resigned because the congregation did not suit the pastor.

Rev. Smith did not go to Maine, nor did he ever resign from any New Church pastorate.

Addition

Rev. Smith's work for the New Church in the South apparently began earlier than reported by previous family historians and this genealogy. The following newspaper records from the Denton Journal, dating from the time of the family's residence in Easton, Maryland, record some of his missionary travels:

> Rev. John E. Smith will leave shortly for the South, where he will act as missionary of the Swedenborgian Church. (>>Denton Journal, 5 Mar 1887)

> Rev. J. E. Smith has returned from his southern trip . . . . (>>Denton Journal, 9 Apr 1887)

> Rev. J. E. Smith will go South, to Georgia and Florida, in January. He has an engagement in Brooklyn during December. (>>Denton Journal, 26 Nov 1887)

> Rev. J. E. Smith is on a missionary tour through Georgia and Florida. (>>Denton Journal, 2 Feb 1889)

> Rev. J. E. Smith, who recently returned from a southern lecturing tour, held service at the New Jerusalem Church, Preston, on Sunday last. (>>Denton Journal, 8 Mar 1890)

> Rev. J. E. Smith has gone to Chattanooga, Tennessee. (>>Denton Journal, 20 Aug 1892)

> Rev. John E. Smith, who has been delivering lectures during the winter in the South has returned, and on Sunday preached to his congregation in the New Jerusalem church at Preston. He was in Denton on Monday. (>>Denton Journal, 30 Apr 1892)

Addition

Although the Smith Family genealogy has not indicated precisely when the Smiths moved from Easton, Maryland, to Jacksonville, Florida, a brief newspaper item records this information:

> Rev. J. E. Smith will hold service and preach at the court house, Denton, at 3 o'clock tomorrow (Sunday) afternoon. Mr. Smith has accepted a call to a large church in

> Jacksonville, Fla., and will remove, with his family, to his southern home next week. (>>Denton Journal, 1 Oct 1892.)[1347]

Thus, it is clear that the Smiths moved to Jacksonville about the second week of October 1892. Either they had just arrived in, or were enroute to, Jacksonville on the 400th anniversary of Christopher Columbus's arrival in the New World.

Despite the family's removal to Florida, it is known (as cited elsewhere in this genealogy) that they occasionally visited the North; and it is likewise known in church records that Rev. Smith attended the annual General Convention of the New Jerusalem as representing the Jacksonville, Florida, Society.

In the Northeast again, John Smith was a missionary of the Pennsylvania Associatio of the New Jerusalem. The Smith Family genealogy[footnote 307] takes note that he served at Montgomery's Ferry and Lancaster, Pennsylvania, and in Vineland, New Jersey. The annual directories of New Church societies affiliated with the General Convention provide a record of Smith's associations. For example, in 1910 the following more explicit listings are noted (Journal of the Ninetieth Annual Session of the General Convention of the New Jerusalem in the United States of America, pp. 232, 234, 235):

Maryland
- Preston, Charles B. Harrison, Secretary; Rev. J. E. Smith, Visiting Minister . . . .
- Williston, Caroline Co., Rev. J. E. Smith, Visiting Minister. [See more about Rev. Smith's association with the Williston society farther below.]

Pennsylvania
- Allentown, Lehigh County, Court-house, first Sunday in each month, Rev. J. E. Smith, Visiting Minister . . . .
- Lancaster, 323 West King St., Rev. J. E. Smith, Visiting Minister.
- Montgomery's Ferry, third Sunday in each month, Rev. J. E. Smith, Visiting Minister.
- Philadelphia, Rev. J. E. Smith, Missionary, 512 South 47th St. [note that his address has not been updated, as then he resided at 820 S. St. Bernard Street, Philadelphia; the same address also is given in later years of this directory]

Addition

As part of his general ministry, Rev. Smith was called upon to participate or officiate at various functions. For example, on 25 June 1903 he delivered the invocation at the commencement exercises of the Philadelphia College of Osteopathy. Although the newspaper record noted only that the offering was by "Rev. J. E. Smith", and other pastors of the same name are known from this general time, this Rev. Smith is likely the man who is the subject of this genealogy. The Swedenborgian tenets have been closely related to the practices of osteo- and homoeopathy, thus it is likely that the New Church's Rev. Smith, who lived nearby, was called upon for his services. (>>"Osteopathists Graduate", Philadelphia Inquirer, 26 Jun 1903.)

Note is made in this genealogy that Rev. Smith included among his circuit pastorates the small church at Williston, Maryland. Various citations indicated that he held services here in the second decade of the 1900s, following upon earlier preaching work at this location. It is clearer now that his relationship was earlier than this, but not without controversy. He first preached here in the early 1880s as a Methodist Episcopal minister, and later, beginning in 1906 apparently, as a minister of the New Church. See addition remarks with the discussion of the Williston church on p. II-205 ff [and about which also see farther below in these Additions & Corrections].

Rev. Smith's relationship with the Maryland societies of the Eastern Shore continued, as noted, during his residency in Philadelphia. For example, in 1905 he was a Visiting Minister to the Preston society, and in 1910 he was a Visiting Minister to both the Preston and Williston societies (only these years have been examined in the church's Journal of the Annual Session). (>>Journal of the Eighty-fifth Annual Session of the General Convention of the New Jerusalem in the United States of America, held in the city of Boston, Mass., from Saturday, June 10, through Wednesday, June 14, 1905, p. 237; Journal of the Ninetieth Annual Session of the General Convention of the New Jerusalem in the United States of America held in New York City, N.Y., from Saturday May 21 through Wednesday, May 25, 1910, p. 232.)

Also, in the matter of Rev. Smith's work during the closing years of his professional uses to the New Church, before retiring, he continued a close relationship with the New Church in Baltimore, Maryland. Two articles from the Baltimore newspapers help testify to his work:

Rev. J. E. Smith Preaches at New Jerusalem Church Mission.

Rev. John E. Smith, of Philadelphia, spoke yesterday at the New Jerusalem Church Mission, 1515 North Fulton avenue. At the morning service Rev. Mr. Smith's subject was "Strength and Comfort After Conflict." In the evening he preached on "The Search for the Spiritual World." Both services were well attended and vital facts in the light of Christian teaching were brought out. [>>Baltimore American, 1 Mar 1920, p. 8.]

Rev. J. E. Smith Preaches.

Rev. J. E. Smith, of Philadelphia, delivered the sermon yesterday morning at the New Jerusalm Church Mission, Weber's Hall, 1515 North Fulton avenue, in celebration of the thousandth Sunday of the life of the mission. The first service was held at Horn's Hall, North avenue, near Madison avenue, on December 3, 1900. Rev. Lawrence G. Albutt has been pastor of the church through the entire period, and was in charge of the devotional part of the services yesterday. [>>Baltimore American, 16 Aug 1920, p. 12.]

Anniversary of Mission.

A well-attended service was held at Weber's Hall, 1515 North Fulton avenue, yesterday morning in celebration of the one thousandth Sunday of the Baltimore Northwest Mission of the New Jerusalem Church. The devlotional exercises including a special prayer of thanksgiving, were conducted by the pastor Rev. C. Laurence Allbutt, in charge since the movement was instituted December 2, 1900. Rev. John E. Smith, of Philadelphia, whose work on the Eastern Shore has been so fruitful, read the Scripture lessons and preached. [>>Baltimore American, 16 Aug 1920, p. 8.]

We know from evidence provided elsewhere in this genealogy that Rev. Smith remained a resident for a while in the neighborhood of his last Methodist Episcopal pastorate at Mt. Salem M.E. Church, in Wilmington, Delaware. And while he was not formally ordained by certificate into the Church of the New Jerusalem for another year, it is clear that he embarked immediately into New Church activities despite having lost his M.E. credentials. A brief newspaper item seen in the Denton Journal (Denton, Maryland, 4 Apr 1885) notes without further elaboration, "Many persons will read with interest the synopsis of a sermon by the Rev. John E. Smith, delivered in the New Jerusalem church, Wilmington, last Sunday, published to-day."

fact, the Free Press's report was contributed by Rev. A. Smith himself; hardly an impartial observer. Still, this is at this time our sole opportunity to see into the apparent distrust of the Swedenborgian ministry amidst a broader-based Methodist Episcopal ministry in Maryland and Delaware, as well as into the logical mind of Rev. J. E. Smith, about which much is recalled and inferred in family sources quoted throughout this genealogy.

From the Denton Journal (2 Jan 1886):

"VAGARIES OF SWEDENBORGIANISM."

Extracts from a Lecture Delivered by Rev. Alfred Smith.

Rev. Alfred Smith, pastor of the Greensborough M. E. church, delivered a lecture in the church on the "Vagaries of Swedenborgianism" on Monday evening last. "I have no desire," began the speaker, "to drag before you the vagaries of this strange man, but since Swedenborg's 'ghost' has been called up, and that, too, by one of his friends, it is only natural that we should stop to see what manner of thing it is. This is a new and strange 'ism' to the people of this community and hence the question, What is Swedenborgianism? is heard upon the lips of everybody."

What are the doctrines of the system? "A few have heard from the mouth of one of its most ardent and zealous new followers somewhat of his teachings," said the pastor [referring to Rev. J. E. Smith][1349], "but still the question comes, How does it look when we put side by side with the old orthodox teaching of the bible? Vagaries literally means freaks and hence by the vagaries of Swedenborgianism we mean the freaks of the 'ism.' The speaker explained there could be no unfairness in discussing the question from this standpoint unless there were tenets in it superior to those of the old faiths. He had found nothing whatever in Swedenborgianism superior in any sense to orthodoxy, but more things inferior and something pernicious. To the latter he addressed himself. Before doing so he said he did not wish to detract from the character of Swedenborg. Any one might be delighted to make a pilgrimage to the place that enshrines the dust of that great scientist, philospher, linguist, theologian and—dreamer. He was not an impostor. But if any man were to make the claims to-day that he made, no matter how learned, he would be set down as a man of unsound mind.

"In making statements concerning this 'ism,'" said Mr. [Alfred] Smith, "I shall in every case refer you to the writings of Swedenborg or some of his recognized followers, in proof of it: First—That the books of the Word are those which have the internal sense, as follows: the five books of Moses, Joshua, Judges, Samuel, Kings II, Psalms, and all the Prophets; and in the four Gospels and the Revelations." Here he referred to Swedenborg's "Arcana Celestia." [sic] "Thus you will see that they throw out ten of the books from the Old Testament and twenty-two from the New, as no part of the Word of God. By internal sense and external sense they mean soul and body. Romans has a body without a soul. But there is no ground whatever for the distinction. Why allow inspiration to Luke in his Gospel, and deny it in his Acts of the Apostles? Why attribute inspiration to the writings of John and deny it to the writings of Paul? Paul says, 'Am I not also an apostle? Have I not seen the Lord?' Again, 'But I certify to you, brethren, that the gospel which I preached is not the gospel of men, neither was I taught it, but by revelation of Jesus Christ.' Joshua was taken up into a 'great and high mountain;' Paul was taken up into 'the thrice heaven.' And yet John inspired and Paul not! Supreme absurdity!" The speaker characterized this as a fiction with no basis in reason or truth. The genuineness and authenticity of the Sacred Canon, as we now have it, 39 books in the Old Testament and 20 in the New—in all 59—have been settled questions for fourteen centuries. Not that it has had no critics in that time, but it has had none to unsettle the faith of the masses.

[1349] Comment in square brackets apparently added by the newspaper reporter.

There has never been a time in the history of the bible when it had so many scholars to defend it in its entirety as to-day.

Second—That there is in the world a spiritual sense hitherto unknown and that it is to be interpreted by the science of correspondences. Here the speaker referred to the "true Christian Religion," by Swedenborg. This means that this internal sense was not known till Swedenborg revealed it. "Supreme egotism," said the speaker, "all the great and good men who preceded him were poor deluded creatures, feeling their way along the dark! What is this law of correspondencies? Simply that there is something spiritual to which every word of God's mind corresponds. It is positively false that orthodox Christianity has no science or interpretation. Hermaneutics is such a science, and we do not need a dreamer, nor a crank, nor a prophet to interpret it. The best interpreter is one who possesses brains, knowledge and piety." Mr. Smith then quoted from Brown's Encyclopedia: "The Swedenborgian mode of interpreting Scripture is totally at variance with every principle of sound philology and exogeses, and necessarily tends to unsettle the mind and leave it a prey to the wildest whimseys that it is possible for the imagination to create."

Third—"That the Divine Trinity consists of essential divinity, divine humanity, and divine proceedings, and that these three are only different conditions of one God." This means that when God was in the flesh there was no God out of the flesh. In refutation of this Mr. Smith cited: "This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased;" "Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do." Did Christ cry to himself and commit his soul to himself? Absurd!

Fourth—"There is no devil and no hell except that which is within us." Mr. Smith cited: "For if God spared not the angels that sinned but cast them down into hell and delivered them into the fire and chains;" "Depart, ye cursed, into everlasting fire, prepared for the devil and his angels."

Fifth—"That all angels were men and that a regenerated man is in communication with angels and spirits." Also that "all the other planets are inhabited by men." They base their claim upon the fact that Abraham and others saw angels, and that Swedenborg was in communication with angels for twenty-seven years.

Sixth—"That the second coming of Christ and the last Judgment ware even now accomplished facts." Swedenborg claimed that the last judgment took place in 1657, at the time the revelations were made to him.

Seventh—"That at death we put off the material body never to take it up again, and that we pass into the spiritual world with a spiritual body, which possesses the very form and every organ of the natural body." "From this," said the speaker, "you will see that they do not believe in the resurrection of the dead. A body within a body! We need only to turn to Christ to see the error of this. He arose from the dead in his natural body. Afterward He said to the disciples: 'Handle me and see that it is I myself.' He is to us a pledge of the resurrection."

Eighth—"That there is a state beyond the grave which is reformatory in its character." This is somewhat the same as the Catholic's purgatory, and there is no Scripture to prove it.

Ninth—"That the world's redemption was not affected by the death of Christ; that Christ simply came to subjugate evil and that he did not die in our stead." With Swedenborgians the tragedy of the cross is a farce, and the blood of Christ no more than the blood of a bull.

In concluding, Mr. Smith asked the question, What has the world thought of Swedenborgianism? The best authorities conclude that the whole system is the product of a diseased mind.

We do not know the exact reason why the Denton Journal was favorable to printing Rev. J. E. Smith's reply to the summary article of Rev. Alfred Smith's lecture. One may safely assume that the editors agreed because the reply occasionally puts down the Greensborough Free Press reporter, who was after all not impartial because it was Rev. Alfred Smith himself.[1350] And of course it is best to sell one's own paper rather than to demote it. The letter was strongly unfavorable to the Free Press's own coverage, not to mention that Rev. Alfred Smith was at the time one of Greensborough's own. Whatever the slants, we are fortunate to have the rendition preserved for us. At least, in every case cited by Rev. J. E. Smith in his rejoinder, his points of clarification all are in strict keeping with the tenets of Swedenborg's writings; none are contortions for the purpose of "saving face."

From the Denton Journal (9 Jan 1886, square brackets as published:

Rev. J. E. Smith Replies.

[Rev. J. E. Smith requests us to publish the following letter, which was written by him to the Greensborough Free Press, and was refused by that paper.—Eds.]

To the Editor of Greensboro' Free Press:

Please allow me space in your valuable paper to say a few things in reference to the report of my lecture made by Rev. Alfred Smith.

I recognize in it some things I said and many things I did not say. The things I did say are garbled extracts taken from collateral remarks without stating the premises made or showing the arguments. Of the many Scriptural quotations and references made, barely one is mentioned. Your reporter seems to have studiously avoided giving to the public anything of the lecture that would be of probable force, and taken such things as would possibly prejudice the popular mind against the system of truth which I represented. By such manipulation he has certainly succeeded in making it appear a "disjointed collection" of not "well-rounded periods," but the disjunctions and their collection are his, not mine; this will be apparent to all who heard the lecture and read the report thereof.

Of the things which I did not say the following is a partial enumeration. I did not say that to "call our belief Swedenborgianism was a misnomer," though it might truthfully have been said. I said to call the New Church the Swedenborgian Church was a misnomer, for the reason that Swedenborg never founded a church nor preached a sermon.

I did not say "we repeat the assertion that the New Church teaches that men live beyond as they do here." I denied the representation made that we teach that men keep on doing in the other world what they do here. In the natural sense we neither live nor do in the other world as we do here, but as to our spirits we are the same. If we misrepresent here, we would there.

I did not say that Bishop Foster pronounced Swedenborg one of the greatest men of his age (though he might justly have done so); I said that Bishop Foster said that "Emanuel Swedenborg would live in the souls of men long after his shallow traducers have passed into oblivion." Let the brother be careful lest he be one of the number.

I did not say that the method of determining latitude and longitude at sea by lunar observation, given in the North American Review, "was an elaboration of a point given by Swedenborg." I said it was identical, both in diagram and description, with that given in Swedenborg's "Principia."

I did not say that John Wesley called him "a scholarly crank, and that he had to take it back." I said that he called him a learned lunatic and did take it back.

I did not say that "everything in the Bible is not true in the literal sense." Parts of it are true in the literal sense. Yet its deepest and truest meaning is the spiritual. Alas for the Lord's words if they receive such fearful misrepresentation when your reporter is preaching as have mine!

[1350] As we glean from Rev. J. E. Smith's note, "Mr. [Alfred] Smith was either incompetent as a reporter or designedly perverted and misstated my utterances of that evening."

I did not say that the high priest was an "onery villian [sic]." I said his words which the preacher had for a text in God's Word were the words of a "malignant and scornful high priest." Was this an effort to disgrace the lecturer by putting such inelegance into his mouth, or was it the native inelegance of your reporter?

I did not say "if there is no hell in you there is none anywhere." I said "you are in hell to the extent that hell is in you, both here and hereafter."

I did not define the Godhead at all, but defined the trinity in God as love, wisdom and power, the latter proceeding from the two former.

I did not say that "death was no break to heaven." I said that it was an orderly step in life; not the most orderly, as your reporter declares.

I did not say "Lucifer meant Nebuchadnezzar," but that Lucifer was the name of a morning star, and the fall was as the falling of a morning star; that the falling from heaven was not a fall out of heaven of an angel whose name was Lucifer, who is supposed to have become the personal devil.

I did not say devil means the aggregate of evil, but that it was from do evil combined into one word, devil, and was aggregated of evil.

I did not say that angels were departed humanity, but men who were once upon the earth.

I did not say that Swedenborg taught that God was the God of heaven and hell, but that the Bible taught it.

I did not say that "the doctrine that God refuses to forgive is more hellish than hell." I did say that the doctrine that God, from vengeance or wrath punishes his enimies with burnings in fire was more hellish than hell, because it makes God do what only devils are capable of doing.

When the word "ghosts" passed my lips, I immediately asked your reporter to change it, as I did not intentionally use it, but it did not suit his purpose, and so he put it in. Thanks for his kindness.

I did not say "there will be no judgment." I said there is now and will be after death, judgment, but the popular dramatic judgment, performed by a physical Christ in the air, would not be, and proved it by Christ's own words: "I judge no man; the words that I speak unto you they shall judge you at the last day." Judgment is performed here and hereafter by the truth in separating evil from good in man.

I did not challenge my audience to controvert me. I invited any questions that might be asked arising out of the subjects presented. Mr. [Alfred] Smith did not "spring a discussion." He would not and did not discuss at all, although I invited him to do so, then or at any future time, when I would pay the expense of the hall.

If the lecture was so "flat," so "destitute of proof," so "improbable," why doesn't he demolish me?

He asked for a text of Scripture proving an intermediate state. I offered such Scriptural evidence as I thought would be satisfactory, which he refused to accept. He did not discuss but rejected them. I gave him some texts the next day, and have plenty more for him at the next opportunity. But the doctrine of an intermediate state is not peculiar to the New Church, as nearly all churches teach it more or less.

Now, by way of comment, I have this to say: Mr. Smith was either incompetent as a reporter or designedly perverted and misstated my utterances of that evening. If he was incompetent of course he is excusable, but please never subject me to the mortification of being thus falsely represented again. I do not blame you, for doubtless you, as well as myself, thought him fully capable and willing to give an accurate and fair report of what was said. If it was intentional, all I can say is—Well, it may be he could not help it under the circumstances.

Now as to the "flatness" of the lecture, its want of "proof," its "disjointedness"—if it was all this, why throw it away; but as color blindness is the result of individual constitution and not change of things, so perhaps this apparent "flatness" resulted from the flatness of the brother's eye pupil, so that it seemed according to the shape of his cornea; a sound eye is necessary to sound objects. Some did not see it flat as did your reporter; a number said to me, "You have said what I think is the truth upon these subjects." Several gentlemen said they would contribute liberally to the building of a New Church house; voluntarily, too. Others said they would not have missed the lecture for ten dollars; that it was somehting to think about. In fact, I heard of no one's dislike or displeasure except our ministerial brethren whose creed was infringed. Now there were a good many eyes that looked at that "flat, disjointed" lecture; they were of the best intellectual lookers in the county. So you see it is not safe for one man to try to see for everybody else; a ditch might be near; and besides the days of proxy seeing in religious matters, as it was in the era of ecclesiastical viceregency, are gone by; so let others look and think a little for themselves, and don't assume to see and say it all for them, my genial brother Smith. If you succeed in your proposed lecture on the "Vagaries of Swedenborg" in making him appear as awkward as you did me, then I vote you skilled in the art of misrepresentation. Either weakness in yourself or your cause lies at the bottom of this.

J. E. SMITH.

This was not the end of it, either. Rev. Alfred Smith seems to have preached rather continuously on the matter of the singular topic, "Vagaries of Swedenborgianism", and continued to refute Rev. J. E. Smith's preachings generally. The following items are noted from the Denton Journal nearly three years after the original dialogues:

Some time since the Rev. Alfred Smith, of Cambridge, lectured in Preston, Md., in opposition to Swedenborgianism, Rev. John E. Smith, formerly of the Wilmington Conference has been preaching this doctrine for the past few years in Caroline and Talbot [counties], and on Wednesday last gave a free lecture in Independence Hall, in reply to Rev. A. Smith's Preston lecture. (>>Denton Journal, 1 Sep 1888)

Ministers at Loggerheads.

The Cambridge papers publish long accounts of the disagreeable controversy between Rev. Alfred Smith, pastor of the Zion M. E. Church, of Cambridge, and Rev. J. E. Smith, of Easton.[1351] Both ministers are well known in Caroline county, and have held the pastorates of churches here. Rev. Alfred Smith recently delivered a lecture in the Preston M. E. church, on the "Vagaries of Swedenborgianism," and on Wednesday of last week Rev. J.E. Smith lectured in Independence Hall, Cambridge, replying to the attack on the faith of New Churchmen. He also spoke of an attack which the Rev. Alfred made in the Cambridge church on the 25th ult. The pastor had assailed the character of his former colleague in the Wilmington Conference and produced a letter to support the charge. In his reply the Easton minister said the accusation was a "base slander, and the last resort of a defeated man." He also said that if the pastor were responsible to the amount of $500 he would bring suit for damage before leaving the town. (>>Denton Journal, 8 Sep 1888)

Addition

In various places of this genealogy, there are passing references to Rev. John E. Smith's remarkable, engaging abilities in speaking. Several items in the Denton Journal have been found, which amply document these statements. Surely there are other such statements, in this and other newspapers and perhaps in other sources, but note, too, that they come from his times both as a Methodist Episcopal minister and a New Church minister:

> Large and attentive congregations are attracted to the M. E. Church of this place by the eloquent ministrations of the pastor Rev. J. E. Smith. The audience room of the church is scarcely large enough to accomodate [sic] the congregations. (>>Denton Journal, 1 May 1880)

> As Mr. Smith is very popular in this community [Williston, Maryland], he will doubtless be greeted with a large audience on each on [sic] occasion. (>>Denton Journal, 2 Dec 1882)

> Rev. J. E. Smith delivered his new lecture "Wanted a Man," in the Potters' Landing[1352] M.E. Church on Thursday evening to a good house for such cold and stormy weather. It was a rich literary and intellectual treat. Some of his highlights of eloquence wre perfectly grand. (>>Denton Journal, 9 Dec 1882)

> Last Sunday evening was the occasion of the Rev. J. E. Smith's farewell sermon to his concgregation in Greensborough. Mr. Smith had served on the charge three years, the limit in the M. E. Conference. The reverend gentlemen [sic] gave touching experession to his feelings and regard for his flock. There was always the warmest sympathy between the pastor and his congregation. (>>Denton Journal, 10 Mar 1883)

> Rev. John E. Smith lectured at Preston on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday nights of this week to large and appreciative audiences. His reasoning was logical, and his remarks were very favorably received. (>>Denton Journal, 20 Feb 1886)

> Rev. J. E. Smith continues to preach semi-monthly in the academy on Sunday afternoons. His sermons are able, well delivered, and attract much attention. (>>Denton Journal, 3 Jul 1886)

Rev. Smith's expertise in debate as well as church affairs is noted in passing in a newspaper item from his time as a Methodist Episcopal minister. In Marydel, the town that straddles the Maryland–Delaware border, "a gentleman of unblemished character . . . was seen to go into a wood and a loose woman was seen on the other side of the same wood." After being reported by an unidentified person, the man was prosecuted on moral grounds by the church, and "Rev. J. E. Smith, of Greensborough, was given charge of the defence." Although the newspaper record does not mention the man's name—and in fact the item was written under a pseudonym—he was cleared of charges. (>>Antiochus, "Letter From Templeville", Denton Journal, 25 Feb 1882)

Delaware death records give the Collinses' names as Eli L. Collins (9 July 1836–14 January 1933) and Comfort W. Collins (18 February 1837–1 April 1928). A Delaware marriage record for them gives the date 11 March 1858; her maiden name is given there as Willson, but on her death certificate as Wilson. He was the son of Eli Collins of Delaware and Patience Abbott of Delaware. She was the daughter of Zachariah Wilson of Sussex Co., Delaware, and Mary Reed of Sussex Co.

Although Edward S. Smith did not indicate when the poet Edwin Markham visited 820 South St. Bernard Street for dinner, it must have been on Sunday, 6 May 1917. The following newspaper item appeared in The Philadelphia Inquirer on that date:

TO READ "RUSSIA ARRIVED"

Edwin Markham Will Entertain Audience With His Poem

"Russia Arrived," the poem of Edwin Markham, for the reading of which a Russian Radical was sentenced to eighteen months in a jail by the late Czar Nicholas, will be recited by the author himself this evening at the Church of the New Jerusalem, Twenty-second and Chestnut streets. The poet arrived in the city yesterday and was the guest of Rev. Charles Harvey, at 214 North thirty-fourth street.

His subject this evening will be "What Swedenborg Brings to the Heart of Men," after which he will recite his poems.

Edwin Markham was an adherent of the New Church and the writings of Swedenborg. Although he had visited Philadelphia on other occasions, this is the only one thus far noted in which he visited the church at 22nd and Chestnut Sts., which coincides with Edward Smith's recollection.

> William B. Nuttle, Dr. John W. Hignutt, George Lacey Stevens and their successors in [illegible] for the use of the Methodist Episcopal Church."
> All went well till last March, when, at the session of the Wilmington Annual Conference, the lines of Williston circuit were changed and the Williston church was added to Burrsville circuit. Rev. A. S. Bichelle, the new pastor of the Burrsville circuit, on his first preaching day at the Williston church, it is said, found no congregation and was informed by a gentleman of the neighborhood that his service was not desired by the church and that he would find empty benches should he continue to come. Soon thereafter Rev. John E. Smith, upon invitation of a number of the congregation, began to conduct services in the church.
> It is said that Dr. Stephen M. Morgan, of Dover, presiding elder of the district, addressed a letter to Mr. Smith asking that he desist from holding service in the church and that no attention was given to the letter. Afterward the pastor, Rev. Albert S. Bichelle, through his counsel, Henry R. Lewis, of Denton, filed a bill in the Circuit Court of Caroline County in equity, restraining the trustees "from entering into any agreement or arrangement with any person to hold religious services in Williston Methodist Episcopal Church without consent of the preacher in charge, Rev. A. S. Bichelle, and also restraining and prohibiting John E. Smith from holding religious or semireligious services in said Methodist Episcopal Church or on the ground."
> The defendants are prominent citizens of the county, and it is thought that they will file a motion for a dissolution of the injunction and that the validity of the deed under the laws of Maryland and the discipline of the Methodist Episcopal Church will be attacked. The defendants have retained Attorney Albert G. Towers, of Denton.

This article also records for us just when Rev. Smith is first known to have preached at the Williston church as a New Church pastor, in March 1906.

A resolution of the case was not reached for more than a year and a half. The Baltimore American (11 July 1908, p. 4) reported:

METHODISTS WIN

Decision In the Williston Church Property Case.

Denton, Md., July 10.—(Special)—In the matter of the Williston Church property, recently argued before the Caroline County Circuit Court by Henry R. Lewis, counsel for the Methodist Episcopal Church, and by Albert G. Towers, representing the heirs-at-law of the late Arthur John Willis, the court's decision, just handed down by Judge Adkins, allows the injunction to stand.

The injunction restrains Rev. John E. Smith, of the Swedenborgian Church, from using the church and also the local trustees from granting the use of the church for any purpose not in accord with the Discipline of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

The decision continuing the church in its present relation was based on the demurrer field by counsel for the Methodist Episcopal Church to the answer of the heirs-at-law of the late Arthur John Willis, who had petitioned the court to be made parties to the suit and had filed their answer therein.

The validity of the title to property is not passed upon in the court's decision and it is generally believed that the church will revert to G. G. Stevens, heir-at-law of the late Arthur John Willis.

The Journal of the Annual Session for the General Convention of the New Jerusalem for 1910 indicates that at that time Rev. J. E. Smith was a Visiting Minister for both the Preston and Williston societies of the church (Journal of the Ninetieth Annual Session of the General Convention of the New Jerusalem in the United States of America held in New York City, N.Y., from Saturday May 21 through Wednesday, May 25, 1910, p. 232). The fact that Rev. Smith is further known to have held a New Church circuit pastorate at the Williston church shortly after the legal proceedings noted above, as well as a decade later, is evidence that a later change of opinions took place. It is apparent that Rev. Smith had had an ongoing, though perhaps intermittent, New Church relationship with the Williston church for some two decades prior to his retirement.

Correction
For
Ralph Smith's grave lies in a row of graves belonging to the Grahams, some of whom are known to be a part of our extended family; however, the individuals who are here buried with Ralph are as yet unconnected to the lineages known as this time. The graves in the lot are (from left to right as one faces the markers):

Read
Ralph Smith's grave lies in a row of graves belonging to the Grahams. The Grahams are related to the Sevil family in the marriage of Elizabeth Ann Sevil to John Ringgold Rees, both of whom are buried elsewhere in the Bryn Zion Cemetery, as also are other members of the Rees, Ringgold, Wallace, and Griffin families [refer also to the entry for Elizabeth Sevil Rees in the Additions & Corrections for the Sevil family]. The relationships of the Grahams with whom Ralph Smith is buried is not yet precisely determined in this genealogy. Elizabeth Ann Sevil was the third wife of John Ringgold Rees. His second wife had been Ann Graham (1804–1865, married 1849, thus possibly she also had a previous marriage), and it through Ann that the Grahams are related to the Sevils and Smiths. However, the parents and immediately family of Ann Graham have thus far not been determined, and so we are not certain of how the Grahams buried in Bryn Zion Cemetery are related.

Laura, daughter of John W. and Fannie A. Graham	(17 February 1873–1 September 1873)
Frances A. Graham	(20 March 1841–30 December 1873)
John W. Graham	(6 March 1827–25 December 1899)
Mary E. Graham	(1 June 1839–15 October 1911)
Ralph Parmelee Smith
A stone marked only "M. E. G."

John W. and Frances "Fannie" Graham resided in Kenton Hundred, Kent Co., Delaware; he was a farmer.

At the time of the 1870 U.S. census, Mary E. Graham resided with Lewis Graham (born ca. 1825), who was a constable in Kenton Hundred, Kent Co., Delaware. His relationship to her is unknown, and his burial location is thus far not determined.

Laura's and Ralph's graves are marked with old, soft-stone markers; the others are more modern granite stones showing more recent family care.

One may question why Ralph Smith was brought from Philadelphia and buried at Bryn Zion Cemetery, since this is a Baptist church cemetery and Rev. Smith, originally a Methodist Episcopalian, had by then been aligned with the Church of the New Jerusalem for more than a decade. Ralph's grandfather, Nathan Thomas Sevil, and others are buried there, and Elizabeth Ann Sevil was a sister of Nathan. One might suppose that the place of burial may have been suggested by Ralph's grandmother, Rebecca Sharp Wells Sevil, who herself would be buried there eleven years later.

Research information from Roberta Mack Zipperian [No. 460], conducted in the family history library in Salt Lake City, Utah, provides the following data that may relate to the parents and siblings of Daniel Wells ("Bobbie" Zipperian to Earle Spamer, 18 Mar 2009):

> "I found in an index to [New Jersey] wills; not the originals; a Daniel Wells d. intestate 1795. Widow Rebecca. She dies 1800. Three sons show up after that seeking guardianship from the same man (Thomas Clark, Jr. and I've found no connection between him and any family members) and their names are Daniel Jr., Samuel and William."

Addition
A couple of newspaper accounts have been located that relate to Sam Johnson, the entertainer and former slave who had been held by William Watson. We may assume that since Sam Johnson was about 90 years of age in 1939 (from Edward S. Smith's note of a newspaper clipping he had seen [the clipping has not been identified for this genealogy]), he was born about 1850 and was 55-60 years old at the time of the newspaper articles quoted below.

The first item is told in derogatory language, so the reader should bear in mind the tone is typical of the day; today it is a quotation. Still, I choose to recount the story exactly because it provides a picture of Sam Johnson and an anecdote about his abilities (and mischieviousness). The article further corroborates Edward S. Smith's account of the man's showmanship. Still we have no further information relating to Sam Johnson's continuing as an entertainer in old age, or with a circus, although based on the 1939 newspaper article when he was about 90 there is no reason to discount some circus or carnival affiliation.

> The Queenstown News has the following story:
> "One of our reporters, whose veracity has never been questioned, called Tuesday, the first time since the big snow; and in the course of human events which he had observed since being able to get around one was that one Sam Johnson, a negro who hails from Centreville, and is known by the 'coons' of that burg as a hoodoo, got into all sorts of trouble while on a visit in Caroline county a few weeks since.
> "The account of Sam's troubles as furnished by our reporter, started when Sam was invited to attend a funeral of a popular colored individual, as he was thought to be some sort of a 'locust' preacher, for he sports a stove-pipe hat and a Prince Albert coat. Sam accepted the invitation and everything was running along as smooth as a new pack of cards, while the parson had started to read a special psalm prepared for the occasion, and the pall-bearers had started to lower the body into its final resting place, whilst the mourners with heads bent low, were listening attentively to the minister's words and, no doubt, thinking of the time when they would join their departed comrade; when Sam—who is noted as a ventriloquist—without warning, said: "Let me down easy, boys!" Susannah H. (Fosbenner) Watson (ca. 1828–ca. 1918)
(wife of Joseph William Wesley Watson)

Emendation and Addition

The family name, Fosbenner, is substantiated here through information contained with the marriage notice of Susannah to J. W. W. Watson ("Married", The Sun [Baltimore], 13 Jan 1848, p. 2):

> On Wednesday morning, 12th instant, by Rev. John A. Collins, JOSEPH W. W. WATSON, of Queen Ann's [sic] county, Md. To MISS SUSANNAH H., youngest daughter of Daniel Fosbenner, Esq. of this city.

Thus far all that is known of the Fosbenner family are the sisters, Eliza and Susannah, and their father, Daniel.

Daniel Fosbenner has been located in the 1850 U.S. census for Baltimore, 15th Ward, with a household as follows (all but Daniel were born in Maryland):

Daniel Fosbenner, 68, no occupation, born in Germany
Ann Fosbenner, 48
Alexander Fosbenner, 8
Charles Lyons, 16, black, servant
Sarah Watts, 68, "Dumb" [affliction]
Ann Lilly, 35
Henry Lilly, 12
Catharine Lilly, 8
Robert Lilly, 6
Charles Lilly, 2

The relationship of Daniel Fosbenner to Ann and Alexander Fosbenner, Sarah Watts, and the Lillys is not known here.

A Daniel Fosbenner has been located in the following U.S. censuses for Baltimore, and who presumably is the Daniel Fosbenner in question, but this has not been surely ascertained: 1820 (9th Ward), 1830 (9th Ward), 1840 (8th Ward).

In the 1850 census, another Daniel Fosbenner is listed: aged 27, born in Maryland, residing with numerous other "Mariners" in a "Sailors Boarding House". Whether he is a relation to Daniel Fosbenner is uncertain.

Daniel Fosbenner ran for public office in the Baltimore City Council (8th Ward), in 1840 and 1844 at least.

Daniel Fosbenner died 17 February 1851 in Baltimore, as noticed in the obituary in The Sun (18 Feb 1851, p. 2). It mentions that he was "for many years an active member of the Methodist Episcopal Church."

Ann Fosbenner is listed in the 1860 census for Baltimore, 15th Ward, with the following household:

Alex Fosbenner, 18, Apprentice Carpenter, born in Maryland
Ann Perkins, 13, born in Ireland
Benjamin Jennings, 26, Jun.[?] Machinist, born in Massachusetts
Sarah Jennings, 29, born in Maine
Walter Jennings, 5/12, born in Maryland

The wedding announcement of Wilbur Fisk Smith and Catharine Hooper "Feigner" provides the following information (The Sun (Baltimore), 3 Nov 1905):

> Smith–Felgner.
> Miss Catherine Hooper Felgner, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward L. Felgner, was married at 6 P. M. yesterday to Mr. Wilbur Fiske [sic] Smith, son of Rev. Dr. Joseph E. Smith, of Washington, D. C., formerly pastor of Mount Vernon Place Methodist Episcopal Church, of this city.
> The ceremony was performed at the home of the bride, 2108 Eutaw Place, by the father of the groom, assisted by Rev. Dr. Wilbur F. Sheridan, now pastor of Mount Vernon Place Church, and Rev. Herbert Scott Smith, brother of the groom.
> The bride, who was attended by her sister, Mrs. Harry B. Dillehunt, as matron of honor, wore a gown of white chiffon, trimmed with duchesse lace. Her veil was caught with a spray of lillies of the valley and she carried orchids and lillies of the valley.
> The matron of honor wore a gown of white chiffon and broadcloth and carried American Beauty roses. Rev. Frederick W. Smith, of Providence, R. I., was his brother's best man.

The address, 2108 Eutaw Place, was the Edward Felgner residence.

Addition
Catharine Hooper (Felgner) Smith is listed in the National Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution, Vol. 113 (DAR ID number 112548), as a descendant of William Bell, Jr. (1744–1798), who in 1778 took the Oath of Allegiance in the State of Maryland.

In 1900, "Miss Katharine Felgner" was noted to have made a bequest in memory of her late mother, for the furnishing of a room in the Home for the Aged of the Methodist Episcopal Church, at Franklin St. and Fulton Ave. (>>"Home For Aged Methodists", The Sun, 4 Jan 1900, p. 7.)

Felgner Family
Collateral Genealogy
(24 descendants)

The genealogy of the Felgner family, as it relates to our Smith lineage and as currently understood, is as follows.[1354] Quite a lot of information has been discerned for the Felgner family of Baltimore and the associated families of Hooper and Gail. The biographical data have been obtained principally from newspaper and other published accounts, while public records have yielded the usual information about residences and occupations. Although some of the information included here may be seen as disproportionately voluminous as compared to the information about the direct Smith family relations of the Felgners, it is nonetheless included for completeness for the sake of those family researchers who may be investigating these lineages, as well as for the general interest it may provide to the family at large. The texts also provide some interesting insights into life among the afluent in Baltimore, in locations that no longer survive as such.

Descendants of Frederick William Felgner

1. Frederick William Felgner-1. He was born 01 January 1810 in Saxony, Germany; died 18 September 1879 in Baltimore, Maryland. He married Margarethe, born about 1811 in Hesse Cassel, Germany; died 18 May 1891 at 76 Madison Ave. extended, Baltimore, Maryland.

Frederick Felgner and Margarethe had 5 children:

\+ 2 i Maria Sophia Felgner [Mary Felgner]. She was born 08 February 1837 in Baltimore, Maryland.
3 ii. John William Felgner. He was born about 1839 in Maryland; died 11 October 1867 in Lynchburg, Harris Co., Texas.
4 iii. Louisa C. Felgner. She was born about 1844 in Maryland; died 30 March 1893 in Baltimore, Maryland.
5 iv. Sabina Elizabeth Felgner. She was born about 1844 in Maryland; died 30 July 1896 in Baltimore, Maryland.

Feldner (1865–1910), a prominent Baltimore lawyer, also had resided in Eutaw Place and had real estate interests in other locations there. His name is only coincidental to this genealogy, but it may be seen when searches are made in OCR-indexed resources that may mistake Feldner for Felgner.]

F. W. Felgner was active in the German-American community in Baltimore, and travelled numerous times back to his native Germany. Among various newspaper notices is the following (The Sun, 8 Jun 1841, p. 2):

> THIS IS TO GIVE NOTICE.—That on THIS (TUESDAY) EVENING, the 8th inst. At 5 o'clock, we contemplate laying the Corner Stone of the German Church of the Evangelical Association, on the corner of Eutaw and Camden street, on which occasion a German discourse will be delivered by the Rev. On 12 November 1842, "a very destructive fire" took place in Baltimore at the corner of Plowman and S. Front Streets, near Jones' Falls. The Baltimore Sun for 14 November (p. 2) also took note of the following:

> Attempted Robbery.—During the fire on Saturday morning, some rogue seized the moment as a favorable one for making an entrance into the clothing store of Mr. F. W. Felgner, situated in Lombard street, between Charles and Hanover. He first gained access to the back door leading to the store, but finding none of his keys would fit, he proceeded to effect his purpose by boring several holes through one of the pannels [sic], in order to cut out a circular piece, and thus unlock the door from the inside. As he had just finished, the boy who slept in the store awoke, and approaching the door, put the burglar to flight. The villain had taken the precaution of preparing well for tying up the valuable clothes which he expected to get, by cutting up a line found in the yard, into suitable lengths. Had he effected his purpose, his prize would have been very valuable.

F. W. Felgner was occupied as a tailor and clothing manufacturer until early in 1864 when he sold out his business and entered into tobacco manufacturing, from which he and his descendants became very wealthy. He seems also to have made real estate investments; advertisements, usually for numerous lots, are noted over his name in auctioneer's advertisments in Baltimore newspapers. For example, one advertisement in The Sun for 19 May 1856 (p. 3) notices 66 lots for sale by him at public auction, "The most desirable building lots on Gibson, Garden and Bolton streets, bordering on the city limits . . ."

Another sale, this one apparently of a home owned by F. W. Felgner, is noticed under the auction sales in The Sun for 27 May 1863 (p. 3):

BY F. W. BENNETT & CO.
VERY VALUABLE PROPERTY
BETWEEN NORTHERN AVENUE AND DRUID HILL PARK,
IN FEE SIMPLE,
AT AUCTION.

On THIS DAY, May the 27th, at 1 o'clock, at the Exchange Salesrooms, in the city of Baltimore, we shall sell, by direction of the owner, 1,000 FRONT FEET OF GROUND, by 150 feet deep—clear of streets and alleys—on Garden and Eutaw streets.

The improvements are a large, two-story double frame DWELLING, 40 by 32 feet, with a two-story-back building, 27 by 21 feet, brick Stable, Carriage House, Spring House and Gardener's House, with a great variety of choice Fruit and Ornamental Trees. There is a Flower and Vegetable Garden, abounding with all kinds of plants, & c.

This property is deserving public attention, being now very desirable as a country residence—very elevated, overlooking the city and bay, with a fine grove of oaks all around the dwelling, and only a few hundred yards from the terminus of the city passenger railroad, with the best of water at the door, which makes it very desirable at the present time. In the future it must become exceedingly valuable as building lots.

Persons wishing to view the premises can do so at any time before the sale, between 4 and 6 o'clock.

Plats can be seen at the office of the auctioneer.

Terms made known at the sale.

F. W. FELGNER,
F. W. BENNETT & CO.,
Auctioneers.

This property may be the one purchased by Felgner's son-in-law, George William Gail, Sr. [see a lengthy description of the property farther below, under Gail].

As noted above, F. W. Felgner sold his tailor and clothing business early in 1864 and immediately entered into the tobacco business. The following advertisement first appeared in The Sun (Baltimore) on 17 March 1864 (p. 3):

LARGE STOCK OF FIRST-CLASS TAILORS' GOODS AT AUCTION.

On TUESDAY MORNING, March 22d, at ten o'clock, we shall sell at No. 14 St. Paul street, by order of F. W. Felgner, Esq., who is declining the business, his entire superior stock of FRENCH AND ENGLISH CLOTHS, CASSIMERS AND VESTINGS, in great variety. To which we ask the especial attention of purchasers.

Also, Tailors' Trimmings, Furnishing Goods, Counters, & c. Sale peremptory. Terms cash.

F. W. BENNETT & Co., Auct'rs.

Soon thereafter appeared the following notice (The Sun, 30 Mar 1864, p. 4):

JAS. F. TOWSON,

manufacture of the celebrated "BISCHOFF SMOKING TOBACCO," and the sole privilege of the use of that name, to Mr. F. W. FELGNER, of this city, who will continue the business as heretofore. Thanking my friends and customers for their past patronage, I solicit a continuance of the same to my successor.

JOHN G. LANTZ.

Baltimore, April 1, 1864

Referring to the above, I would inform the trade that I shall continue the busines at the Old Stand, No. 117 BARRE ST., and will make it my aim to maintain the superiority and reputation of the "BISCHOFF SMOKING TOBACCO," in every respect. Soliciting a transfer of their favors to me, I shall endeavor to merit their confidence and approbation by a prompt and faithful attendance to their orders.

F. W. FELGNER.

Baltimore, April 1st, 1864.

As one might expect for a growing and eventually very successful firm, various newspaper articles appeared that relate to its business affairs, a few of which are noted as follows.

A long article appeared in The Sun for 21 November 1870 (p. 4), pertaining to a disastrous fire on South Charles St. near Pratt St., when "About 3½ o'clock in the morning the policeman upon the beat discovered smoke issuing from the large three-story tobacco manufactory of Mr. F. W. Felgner, Nos. 88 and 90 South Charles street." The fire was soon brought under control, but some time later a wall fell in, killing one fireman and injuring two men, and rejuvenated the fire, spreading it further in the ruins and to an adjacent property. The cause of the fire was unknown, the loss to Felgner being an estimated $35,000 to stock and machinery and $15,000 to the building, covered only by insurance of $29,500.

A retrospective article in The Sun (11 Nov 1906, p. 15), on "Some Country Homes of Old-Time Baltimoreans", took brief note of the home of F. W. Felgner on North Avenue, and which provides also a small peek into his family:

Among the places on North avenue, toward Druid Hill Park was one owned by the late Mr. Abercrombie and sold by him to F. W. Felgner. The latter paid $15,000 for it, but later sold it for a much larger sum. His object in buying was not speculative, for on the advice of his physician he had been seeking a country home to save the health of his children, who were delicate.

Frederick W. Felgner's obituary in The Sun (Baltimore, 20 Sep 1879, p. 1) reads:

Death of a Well-Known Merchant.—Mr. F. W. Felgner, of the firm of F. W. Felgner & Son, tobacco manufacturers, South Charles street, whose death at his residence, Madison avenue extended, has been mentioned in the obituary column of THE SUN, was born in Germany in the year 1810. He came to this country when nineteen years old, and commenced working at the tailoring business. He subsequently went into the manufacture of tobacco, and, being quite successful, continued at it until his manufactory is now one of the largest in Baltimore, employing about 300 hands. He never took an active part in politics, nor held any office. His death was caused by paralysis, with which he was seized on Monday last, after several days illness with chills and fever. He leaves a wife, one son and three daughters, one of them the wife of Mr. G. W. Gail, of the firm of Gail & Ax.

The notice in the obituary column (p. 2) noted that F. W. Felgner had died a the age of 69 years, 4 months, 12 days, which yields a birth date of 1 January 1810.

The tobacco firm of F. W. Felgner & Son was thereafter in the control of Edward Louis Felgner [No. 6].

Margarethe Felgner [Margaret Felgner] (ca. 1811–1891)
(wife of Frederick William Felgner)

At the time of the 1890 Baltimore city directory, Mrs. Margaret Felgner resided at 76 Madison Ave. extended.

3. John William Felgner (ca. 1839–1867)

Nothing more has thus far been ascertained about John William Felgner other than a brief obituary notice in The Sun (Baltimore) for 23 October 1867:

> FELGNER.—On the 11th instant, at Lynchburg, Harris county, Texas, J. W. FELGNER, of yellow fever, in the 39th year of his age.

4. Louisa C. Felgner (ca. 1844–1893)
5. Sabina Elizabeth Felgner (ca. 1844–1896)

At the time of the 1890 Baltimore city directory, Louisa and Sabina Felgner resided with their mother at 76 Madison Ave. extended. Sabina was listed there as "Mrs." Sabina E. Felgner; however, she had never married.

Georg Wilhelm Gail [George William Gail] (1828–1905)
(husband of Maria Sophia Felgner)

A biographical notice of George William Gail, Sr., appeared in Baltimore: Its History and Its People (Lewis Historical Publishing Co., New York and Chicago, 1912, Vol. II—Biography, pp. 242–246; authorship of the volume given only as "Various Contributors"). This will serve to introduce him and his ancestry as well as being an overview of his accomplishments in America:

> To none of her adopted citizens does our country owe a greater debt of gratitude than to those natives of the Fatherland who brought to the upbuilding of our commercial interests and the solution of our financial problems of the intellectual vigor and executive ability characteristic of the finest type of their race. Chief among the German-American citizens of the recent past to whom Baltimore gratefully acknowledges her inestimable obligation was the late Georg Wilhelm Gail, founder of the firm of G. W. Gail & Ax, tobacco manufacturers of the Monumental City. For more than half a century Mr. Gail was among the foremost of our representative business men, exerting a strong and lasting influence upon our commercial interests and prosperity.

The Gail family appears to have originated in Dillenburg, Nassau, Germany, but cannot be traced further back than the seventeenth century, the parochial records having then been burned. There is a tradition, however, that they came to Dillenburg form the neighborhood of Braunfels.

Johann Conrad Gail, great-grandfather of Georg Wilhelm Gail, had some military charge in the "Oranisch Nassauische Kreis-Batallion", and in the later years was Schultheis (Mayor) of Dillenburg, as appears from documents still in existence.

Georg Christian Gail, his son, was a bookbinder by trade, but was also engaged in the grocery business.

George Philip Gail, son of Georg Christian Gail, had been apprenticed to a tobacco manufacturer on the Lower Rhine, and on returning home had started a small tobacco factory with his father. In 1812 the factory was seized by the French, as Dillenburg was at that time annexed to the Grand Duchy of Berg, in which the tobacco monopoly was introduced. Geissen, being in Hessian territory, and the Grand Duke of Hesse being an ally of Napoleon, tobacco manufacturing remained a free occupation. In this emergency Mr. Gail displayed the business enterprise and fertility of resource afterward so largely inherited by his son, Georg Wilhelm. He succeeded in intercepting some cart-loads of raw tobacco which he then had on the road, and turned them in the direction of Geissen, where he at once establish[e]d himself in business. He found good customers in the smugglers who carried the tobacco into the monopolized territory, and his business grew, especially after the formation of the German Zoll-Verein (Customs Union), and about 1840 he began to buy and import his raw tobacco direct from the United States, thus giving another notable proof of enterprising ability. Soon after moving to Geissen he married Susanna Busch, a native of that place, and they became the parents of a large family, one of their sons being Georg Wilhelm, mentioned below.

Georg Wilhelm, eighth child and youngest son of Georg Philip and Susanna (Busch) Gail, was born July 8, 1928, in Geissen, Hesse Darmstadt, Germany, and received his preliminary education in his native place. Later he was sent to Amsterdam, where he filled the position of a clerk, but the efforts of his father were directed toward fitting him for life in this country, intending to send him hither as the representative of the house. With this end in view he caused him to be instructed in English, and it was in order that he might acquire a better knowledge of leaf tobacco that he sent him to Amsterdam. After remaining there one year he returned home in the spring of 1846, and in the autumn of the same year was sent to Bremen for a few months to learn more about tobacco.

His departure for America had been fixed for the spring of 1847, but as he was still under nineteen years of age, it was decided that a brother-in-law of more mature age and business experience and his father's partner, should accompany him. At the last moment a disagreement arose between his father and brother-in-law and the latter refused to go. Mr. Gail's father decided to accompany him as far as Liverpool. At that time there was but one regular line between European and United States ports—the Cunard—sailing on the fourth and nineteenth of each month from Liverpool to Boston, stopping at Halifax. Upon reaching London and going to the steamship office, Mr. Gail's father, who spoke no English, told him to engage two passages instead of one, then, for the first time, announcing that he himself would accompany him. After spending some two weeks in London, Manchester, Birmingham and Liverpool, they sailed form the last-named city, on April 19, as passengers on the side-wheel steamer "Caledonia", Captain Lott. They touched at Halifax, May 4, and on May 6 landed in Boston. The same day they left by rail for New York, where they stayed two days, witnessing the celebration of the victory of Buena Vista. They they spent one day in Philadelphia and reached Baltimore the evening of Saturday, May 10, putting up at the old Barnum's City Hotel.

The father returned to Europe in July, and the son was then left alone, to apply in a new land and under new conditions the lessons in which he had been so thoroughly drilled at home, and to enter upon the career for which they had been designed to fit him. He soon became well acquainted among the German residents of Baltimore, and hearing them frequently remark that the smoking tobacco manufactured in this country did not suit their taste, conceived the idea of starting a factory here himself. After securing his father's approval he returned to Germany in the autumn of 1849 and remained there during the ensuing winter, doing practical work in the factory, thus equipping himself more thoroughly for the great responsibility which he was about to assume. In the spring of 1850 he returned to Baltimore, and during the summer was followed by a young workman in his father's service, named Heinrich Deibel, whom he had selected as his future foreman. Young Deibel came by sailing vessel with his wife and child, bringing the necessary implements and materials for the new business. Mr. Diebel served Mr. Gail faithfully to the close of his life, his death occurring some ten years before that of his master. His son, George Deibel, now fills his father's old position.

Mr. Gail hired a house on the west corner of a private alley on the south side of Pratt street, between Charles and Hanover, which had been until then a dwelling, but suited his purpose for a small tobacco factory. His plan was to confine himself to German smoking tobacco, that being the only kind with which he was familiar, but as Baltimore was but a limited field for that article, it was his intention from the beginning to travel systematically in order to introduce his product in other centres of German population in the United States. He started on his first trip about the first of December, 1850, visiting Philadelphia, Trenton, Newark, New York, Newburg, Poughkeepsie, Rondout, Albany, Rochester, Syracuse, Buffalo, Cleveland, Sandusky, Columbus, Cincinnati, Louisville, St. Louis, and returning by way of Wheeling and Cumberland. The result was sufficiently encouraging, and he wrote home for a traveling agent. His father selected Christian Ax, who later, having returned to Germany, married Mr. Gail's sister and became his partner. Mr. Ax arrived in the spring of 1851 and soon after went on the road, extending the field of operations to Chicago, Milwaukeee and other towns. To Mr. Ax's assistance, advice and popularity as a salesman was due much of the firm's later success. The traveling expenses at first exceeded the profits, but this soon changed when they began to import German cigars, which they did in 1852. They were made in the home factory and soon made a reputation for themselves, helping to bear the business expenses and thus insuring a profit. Prohibitive duties, enacted in 1861, destroyed this branch of the business, but by that time Mr. Gail had added to his product other kinds of smoking as well as snuff and fine-cut chewing tobacco and domestic cigars. The increased consumption of smoking tobacco during the war was another source of revenue, and under the firm name of G. W. Gail & Ax the business developed into huge proportions.

With the end of the war, in 1865, the most critical period of the business commenced and lasted until the introduction of the stamp system in 1868. Before this the internal revenue tax, enacted in 1862, was paid on oath, and though frauds by dishonest competitors were numerous and annoying, still, as long as the war lasted the demand was so great and the profits so good that they met with some measure of success despite unfair and fraudulent competition. But with the return of peace and disbandment of the armies and the reduction of the large government expenditures, the competition against fraudulent traders, who often sold tobacco for less than the tax which had to be paid, became more and more impossible, and the business of the firm in smoking tobacco alone had fallen from over two million four hundred thousand pounds in 1864 to only four hundred thousand pounds in 1867. With the introduction of the stamp system in 1868, which reduced the opportunities for fraud to a minimum, a new era dawned for the firm. They gradually regained ground, and by 1891, when they sold their interests to the American Tobacco Company, their annual output was five million pounds and upward. The first part of the present factory building on Barre street, forty by one hundred and eighty-three feet, was erected in 1853, and in 1858 a front extension of one hundred and four feet was added, and also the east wing. The front extension west of the original building and the large warehouse on the corner of Charles street, eighty by one hundred and eighty-three feet, were added in 1886, and the building on Lee street some years later.

Some years before the death of Mr. Ax, which occurred in 1887, Mr. Gail's son-in-law, Ernst Schmeisser, had been admitted to the firm, and upon the death of Mr. Ax his son, Christian Ax, Jr., and Mr. Gail's son, George William Gail, became partners. The business is now a branch of the American Tobacco Company, and is managed by Messrs. Schmeisser and Gail, Mr. Ax having retired.

Notwithstanding his engrossing business interests Mr. Gail found opportunity for the social amenities of life, holding membership in the Germania Club of Baltimore, the German Society of Maryland, the Maryland Club, the Baltimore Country Club, the Maryland Country Club and the German Historical Society. He was also identified with a number of other social and patriotic organizations. His religious affiliations were with the Lutheran church, of what he was a lifelong member, and in politics he was an Independent Democrat.

Mr. Gail married (first), September 12, 1854, Mary Sophia, born February 8, 1837, in Baltimore, daughter of F. W. Felgner, one of the pioneer tobacco manufacturers of this city. Their children were: Nanny, married Charles F. Meyer; Louise, became the wife of Ernst Schmeisser; Ella, married John Hinrichs; George William, a sketch of whom follows [q.v.]; Mary. The mother of these children died in March, 1891, and in October, 1892, Mr. Gail married (second), in Germany, Emma Landmann, of Geissen, by whom he had one son: George Philip [sic], born January 28, 1894. One of the notable landmarks of Baltimore was the Gail residence in Eutaw place, which Mr. Gail began to build in 1874, having purchased the ground in 1867 of his father-in-law, F. W. Felgner. The house was completed in 1875 and in September of that year was first occupied by Mr. Gail and his family, and for years it was the scene of domestic happiness and of genial and refined hospitality. In private life Mr. Gail was the embodiment of domestic and neighborly virtues. He never wrought an injury and never missed a chance to help; approachable and genial, his friends were almost numberless, both in the land of his adoption and in that of his birth.

Mr. Gail died at sea, October 5, 1905, while returning from a visit to Germany. His body was taken to Baltimore and interred in Greenmount Cemetery amid the sincere mourning of the entire community, all feeling that his death had removed for the city a man of fine natural endowments, spotless probity of character and useful influence; a man belonging to that class of citizens who, although undemonstrative and unassuming in their natures, nevertheless help in a great measure to form the character and mould the society of the communities in which they live. The record of his daily life is filled with evidence of the fact that he was a man of great sagacity, quick perception, sound judgment and remarkable force and determination of character. At all times he stood as an able exponent of the spirit of the age in his efforts to advance progress and improvement. Realizing that he would not pass this way again, he made wise use of his opportunities and his wealth, conforming his life to a high standard, so that his entire record was in harmony with the history of an ancestry honorable and distinguished.

Many tributes were paid to his memory by the Baltimore press. Editorially The Sun said, in part:

> Mr. Gail was a man of most lovable personal traits, and a perfect example of that simplicity of of life and manners which is one of the most attractive features of the German character. In the course of his very successful business career he amassed a large fortune, and he had the good sense to utilize it in the usual form of making himself the possessor of a spacious city house, surrounded by handsome and extensive grounds. In this house he lived a quiet and happy life, and in his goings about he preserved the pleasant and simple ways of the German Fatherland. He was a generous giver to charitable and educational purposes, and took an enlightened interest in matters of public concern. A thorough believer in civil service reform, he was a member of the Executive Committee of the Maryland Civil Service Reform Association, throughout its existence, and he was scrupulously faithful in attendance at its meetings. With a vivid remembrance of the days when such of his compatriots as Carl Schurz, Frederick Kapp and Franz Siegel came to America as the home of free institutions, and with a personal acquaintance with many of these leaders, Mr. Gail was fully imbued with the spirit of honest liberalism, and was always to be counted on as a staunch upholder of good causes in politics. As an honest man of gentle and kindly spirit, and as a good and useful citizen, Mr. Gail will be sadly missed.

According to information that G. W. Gail, Sr., provided on a passport application made in Baltimore, Maryland, 13 May 1903, he “emigrated to the United States, sailing on board the [S.S.] Caledonia from Liverpool, on or about the 6 day of May, 1847”. (Notably, on another passport application made in Baltimore, 30 May 1905, the ship’s name and place and date of sailing are omitted from the spaces provided.)

Maria Felgner and Georg W. Gail were married in Baltimore by Rev. Daniel Kreamer.

He became a naturalized U.S. citizen on 9 October 1852 (the index card in the naturalization records gives his name as “George Wilhem Gail”).

During his residency in America, George W. Gail, Sr., was a tobacco manufacturer in the firm of Gail & Ax. On his passport applications made in 1903 and 1905 he gave his occupation as "Capitalist".

He married his second wife, Emma Landmann, 16 October 1892 in Germany. She was born June 1851 in Geissen, Hesse Darmstadt, Germany. Together they had a son, George Phillip Gail, born 28 January 1894 in Baltimore, Maryland, whose name is given as Phillip Gail on a passport application made by his father in 1903. In various records the spelling of Phillip is with one "l", but on the authority of his father's own handwritten spelling, with two "l's", that spelling is adopted here. George Phillip Gail later returned to Germany.

At the time of the 1900 U.S. census, George W. Gail employed numerous servants; the household included four single servants and two more whose families also resided there, presumably in tenant houses. In all, 15 non-family residents were at the property, most of whom were German immigrants.

His death at sea in 1905 resulted in a long obituary notice in the Baltimore Sun (13 Oct 1905, p. 12), which is reproduced here in its entirety for the information it conveys about him, his family, and his business. However, see also following it for a more detailed biography written for a detailed biographical history of Baltimore. The Sun article appears first here:

DIED IN MIDOCEAN

Mr. G. W. Gail, Sr., Succumbed To Pneumonia.

AS HE WAS COMING HOME

Believed To Have Contracted Cold On Board Ship—
Was Accompanied By Wife And Son.

Mr. George W. Gail, Sr., the founder of the old Gail & Ax tobacco firm and one of the leading German-American residents of Baltimore, died October 5 on the North German Lloyd steamer Brandenburg about halfway between Germany and home.

His active business and social life in this city never completely weaned him from his fatherland. Besides a fondness for the scenes of his childhood and the home of his ancestors, Mr. Gail had also a great love for the ocean, and those who knew him best say that there is a fitness in the circumstances of his death.

All summer he had been traveling about Europe, spending most of the time in Germany. He left his home in this city in June, and was then in the best of health. An ocean voyage had always invigorated him and increased his spirits, and when the steamer arrived in New York yesterday his relatives expected to seem him heartier and haler than ever.

Word of his death came in the morning from his widow, who, with their 11 year-old son Philip, had been traveling with him. Mr. Ernst Schmeisser, his son in law, was the first to receive the tidings. Mr. George W. Gail, Jr., president of the Board of Fire Commissioners, was promptly notified, and the two left without delay for New York to make arrangements for the funeral, which will take place from Mr. Gail's mansion, which occupies the city block from Eutaw street to Lindon avenue and from Ducatel to Whitelock street.

The telegram stated that death was due to pneumonia. No word of his illness was received by his relatives before he left Bremen, and they conclude that he must have taken a severe cold while on the steamer. They feel certain that he would not have attempted the voyage unless he thought he was strong enough to make the trip.

Liked The Ocean.

Mr. Gail had crossed the ocean a score of times. Whenever he could spare a few months from his business cares he would make the trip, and since he retired he has seldom missed a summer voyage. It was about 13 years ago that he met and married his second wife, who was Miss Emma Landmann. The ceremony was performed in Germany. Although recognized as an American millionaire, an exacting official made him secure from Mayor Latrobe an affidavit showing that he was able to take care of a wife. General Latrobe was a good friend of Mr. Gail and lost no time in forwarding the necessary document. By the second wife he leaves one son, George Philip [sic] Gail, who, accompanied by a tutor, was with him and his wife on their last trip.

His first wife was Miss Mary S. Felgner, of Baltimore, who was related to the family of wealthy tobacco merchantts of that name. She died in March, 1891, leaving five children, all of whom are well known in Baltimore social circles—George W. Gail, Jr., Miss Mary Gail, Mrs. C. F. Meyer, Mrs. Ernst Schmeisser and Mrs. John Hinrichs. Most of the grandchildren are grown. They are George W. Gail 3d, Misses Helen, Mamie and Elizabeth Gail, Charles F. Meyer and Miss Ella Meyer, William C., Ernest, Harry and Gerhard Schmeisser, Christopher, John, Ernest, Paul and Miss Mary Hinrichs.

Not An Active Politician.

Mr. Gail was well known and highly respected by the leading business men of the city, and 20 years ago he was regarded as one of the most progressive of their number. In politics he was an Independent Democrat. He took active part in the campaigns of the Reform League and was a champion fighter, when aroused by any cause which he thought was worthy. He never sought office and he was only active when he thought the business interests and the general good of the community required action.

He was prominent in German society, being a member of the large and exclusive organizations of Baltimoreans of German extraction. He always had a deep feeling of solicitude for the Germans who came to this country and who, for one reason or another, met misfortunes. He was a generous contributor to German charities, taking an interest in the work of the German Orphan Asylum, the German Aged Home and other institutions. He was for a long time vice-president of the German Society of Maryland. He was a member of the Zion Church, on Gay street.

As a manufacturer of tobacco his name will be remembered with that of the Allens, of Virginia; the Dukes, of North Carolina, and the other men who made millions out of that industry before it was finally brought under the control of the American Tobacco Company. His fathers before him had been tobacco merchants in Germany.

He was born in Hesse-Darmstadt, Germany, July 8, 1828. His great grandfather, Johann Conrad Gail, held military rank in the German army and was for some time Mayor of Dillenburg, Germany. His father, George Philip Gail, when a youth was apprenticed to a tobacco manufacturer on the Lower Rhine, and after serving his time returned to his home. In 1812 Mr. Gail's father and grandfather opened a small tobacco factory, which, if business concerns can speak of ancestry, was the progenitor of the big warehouse occupying nearly a block at the corner of Barre and Charles streets. In 1840 the Gails began to buy and import raw tobacco from the United States.

Came To America.

It was as buyer for his father's factory that Mr. Gail first came to America in 1847. In order to get a more thorough knowledge of the tobacco business he obtained a position as a volunteer with a tobacco broker of Amsterdam in 1845. He was only 19 years old when he came to this country. He arrived first at Boston, but came direct to Baltimore, which was then a tobacco-shipping port. Accompanied by his father [error], he visited the tobacco markets of Richmond, Va., Lynchburg, Va., Pittsburg [sic], Pa., Cleveland, Ohio, and Buffalo, N. Y. In the next few years Mr. Gail made the acquaintance of many German residents of Baltimore. Hearing the complaint from them that the smoking tobacco manufacturered here did not suit their tastes, he conceived the idea of starting a factory here, and in the fall of 1849 returned to Germany to discuss plans with his father. In the following spring he returned, and later Heinrich Deibel, a workman in his father's factory, was sent over by the father to be the foreman of the son's factory.

Mr. Gail rented a house on the corner of a private alley on Pratt street, and there began his business. In order to push his product he found it necessary to travel. His first trip was made in December, 1850, when by aggressive canvassing he gave his trade an impetus in Philadelphia, Trenton, Newark, New York, Newburg, Poughkeepsie, Albany, Rochester, Buffalo, Cleveland, Sandusky, Columbus, Cincinnati, Louisville, St. Louis, Wheeling and Cumberland. So rapidly did his business increase that he found it necessary to have larger quarters and a confidential employe [sic] to help him.

> He was joined by Christian Ax, who later became his brother in law and business partner.
> In 1891 the business was sold to the American Tobacco Company. The present factory was erected in 1853, and in 1859 a large front extension was added. From time to time various other additions were made as business required.
> The death of Mr. Ax occurred in 1887, but a few years previous Mr. Gail's son-in-law, Mr. Ernst Schmeisser, and Mr. Geo. W. Gail, Jr., became partners.

G. W. Gail was buried in Greenmount Cemetery 16 October 1905. The Baltimore Sun (17 Oct 1905, p. 15) noted the funeral with a long article, part of which reads as follows:

> G. W. GAIL, SR. LAID TO REST
> MANY FRIENDS ATTEND THE FUNERAL SERVICE.
> Beautiful Floral Offerings Received as Last Tributes—Interment Was in Greenmount Cemetery—Rev. Julius Hofmann Paid a Glowing Tribute to the Memory of the Deceased, Telling of His Charitable Spirit—Numerous Societies Represented at Funeral.
> The funeral of Mr. Georg [sic] W. Gail, Sr., who died in midocean while en route to this counry, took place from his home, 2801 Eutaw Place, at 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon. It was noted as a coincidence that yesterday was the thirteenth anniversary of his second marriage. While the funeral services at the house were largely attended, only the immediate family accompanied the body to the grave in Greenmount Cemetery.
> Rev. Julius Hofmann, pastor of Zion Church, conducted the service. Dr. Hofman [sic] spoke in German, and he paid a splendid tribute to the deceased. He said that Mr. Gail would not only be missed by the members of the family, but that thousands of German-Americans in this state would mourn his loss. He said that Mr. Gail was a loyal American citizen, but that, nevertheless, he loved his fatherland, and that he never failed to have a good word for the members of his nationality whatever their station, and that all who met him were impressed with his kindly and charitable spirit.
> He said that Mr. Gail had come to this country as a young man, and that he made a fortune because he understood the needs and demands of this country. He spoke of the many charities in which Mr. Gail had been interested and the high regard with which he was held in all circles. His address was touching to a degree, and in the crowd that thronged the house there were many wet eyes.
> Many Floral Offerings.
> The body of Mr. Gail lay in a large room adjoining the library, and clustered around and over the bier were many beautiful floral offerings that completely hid the floor, casket and were even banked up against the walls.

Civic organizations that were represented at the funeral were the German Orphans Asylum, Germania Club, German Society, German Aged People's Home, Harmonia, the Maryland Leaf Tobacco Association, and several branches of the American Tobacco Company (Felgner, A. F. Leidenroth, Gail & Ax, E. Skinner, and Marburg). A resolution was also adopted by the Tobacco Board of Trade.

G. W. Gail, Sr., left provisions in his will for bequests to numerous charitable and civic organizations, including the General German Orphan Association, General German Aged People's Home, Hebrew Hospital and Asylum Association, Hebrew Benevolent Society, Hebrew Orphan Association, German Society of Maryland, Society for the History of Germans in Maryland, and the Maryland Institute for the Promotion of the Mechanics' Arts. (>>"Bequests Made By G. W. Gail", The Sun, 19 Oct 1905)

In 1908, the large Gail property was purchased by real estate speculator Charles E. Spalding and later razed for subdivision. The home and property were described at length in the newspaper article announcing the forthcoming sale ("In Realty and Building Field", The Sun, 31 May 1908, p. 10):

> The handsome property of the late George W. Gail, situated on Eutaw Place, Whitelock street, Linden avenue and Ducatel street, promises shortly to be out of existence and will be replaced by many dwellings, which, it is understood, will be erected on the now beautiful grounds.

An offer for the premises in their entirety has been made by Charles E. Spalding, who in the past has been identified in some of the largest building operations in Baltimore. While no figures have been mentioned, it is known that the property was held at more than $300,000 and that the sum offered by Mr. Spalding is satisfactory to the trustees of the estate—George W. Gail, Jr., Ernst Schmeisser and John Hinrichs—who are represented by George W. Lindsay & Son, real estate brokers, and a contract of sale may be signed in the next day or two.

The property fronts on 610 feet on both Eutaw Place and Linden avenue, while the frontage on Whitelock and Ducatel streets is 320 feet each. On the grounds, which are beautifully terraced, have handsome lawns and with a lake on the north end, there is the big and magnificent mansion and the other outbuildings.

The house is a commodious affair of gray brick in the Italian villa style, old-fashioned now, but substantial and handsome. To reach it one must pass through an iron gate, go up a flight of stone steps, which lead to the top of the terrace and then up to the large porch, which stretches all the way across the front. The doorway is wide and there is a tesselated vestibule, with a marble wainscoting, in which to await the coming of the butler.

Beautiful Hall and Stairway.

When the door is opened one finds oneself in a wide, lofty-ceilinged hall, which runs from front to back of the house. To the right of the entrance there is the mahogany stairway, with shallow steps and a handsome hand-carved rail. On the newel post is a bronze figure holding a light aloft. The stairs go up three sides of a wide recess, and above them in the roof is set a panel of stained glass.

On the left of the hall are three beautiful rooms. The library is first. It has long French windows on two sides and great mirrors set in the walls. The mantelpiece is of an imported marble in a pale tint. The library is separated from the drawing-room by the folding doors of walnut, set with glass.

The drawing-room, a long apartment, has a bay window, which gives an appearance of even greater size to it. There is a handsome mantelpiece in this room also, and the chandelier is of bronze. Separated from it by folding doors is the sitting-room, large, sunny and lighted with French windows, fitted with mirrors and bronze chandelier in its turn, and with the marble fireplace in a different tint from those of the other rooms.

This whole suit,which may be made into one apartment at will, has parquetry floors of attrative designs,the floors having been imported from Vienna by Mr. Gail before that material came into general use in this country. Opening from the sitting-room is a small apartment which is used as a morning-room or boudoir.

Dining-room of Great Size.

On the other side of the hall is the dining room, a hospitable dining-room, big enough to accommodate a small army of guests. Its prevailing color is terra cotta. The wallpaper is of terra cotta tint, the wainscoting of terra cotta marble, the mantelpiece and fireplace also of the latter. There are great mirrors here, and long windows which reach almost from ceiling to floor. On the right of this a plate glass door gives admittance into the conservatory. In the conservatory are chrysanthemums and other flowering plants, and there is a small pond in which fishes of various bright colors flash about.

Back of the dining-room is a delightful butler's pantry, with a floor of blue and brown tiles, and the various closets necessary, and through a window in this, with a sliding panel, one obtains a view of a substantial kitchen, floored with the same tiles, and with the boilers and copper utensils shining in the sun.

Upstairs there is room after room (the house has 25 all told), many with private baths attached, all high-ceilinged, lofty, light and attractive.

The third story is like the second. Under the house is the laundry; on the lawn at the back are several greenhouses.

The mansion is heated by steam, the handsome brass radiators having marble tops; it is lighted with electricity, and in spite of the fact that according to our civilization it is called old, it is really most modern, and probably as handsome a residence as Baltimore boasts.

Property Owned for Many Years.

The property has been in the hands of the Gail family for many years. It was purchased by the late F. W. Felgner, father of Mrs. Gail, in 1849. In 1867 it was purchased by Mr. Gail. The present frame dwelling-house, located at > Linden avenue and Ducatel street, formerly occupied the site on the hill now occupied by the big mansion. When Mr. Gail first purchased the place he occupied this frame dwelling as a summer residence and lived down town in the winter. At that time that section of the present city was considered far in the country. In 1874 the frame house was carried intact down the hill on rollers and placed in its present position and the mansion erected. The mansion was designed by the best architect of the time of its erection (1874), a German of the name of Nierse, who also planned the Academy of Music, and it took one and a half years to build, and it was not completed until 1875.

Edward Felgner was in the tobacco manufacturing business during all of his career. After the death of his father, who had founded the firm in the purchase of the Bischoff Smoking Tobacco manufacturing business from John G. Lantz in 1864, Edward L. Felgner continued in control of the business until it was bought out by the American Tobacco Company conglomerate in May 1899. During his tenure the firm saw some substantial labor issues, including strikes. Most notably was the adoption of the eight-hour work day by his firm and three other tobacco manufacturers in Baltimore, in 1886. (The newspaper item that announced the action also notes the competing firm of Gail & Ax, of whom the Gail family is also related to the Felgners.) The article is as follows (The Sun, 27 Mar 1886, p. 4):

> The Eight-Hour System Adopted by Four Leading Tocacco Manufacturers.
> (Reported for the Baltimore Sun.)
> The tobacco manufacturers, Messrs. Gail & Ax, who employ over 400 people; Marburg Bros., employing 350; F. W. Felgner & Son, employing 300, and H. Wilkens & Co., employing 110 hands, will all introduce the eight-hour system into their factories this morning, paying the ten-hour wages, and granting a proportional increase to the piece and weight workers. The hours will be from eight to five, with an hour at noon for lunch. All their employes, so far as they are eligible, will be advised to organize preparatory to formng an essembly of the Knights of Labor. A member of the firm of Marburg Bros. stated yesterday that Messers. Gail & Ax's action of Thursday had been a complete surprise to the other manufacturers. An understanding, it was stated, had been made between the four factories that they would adopt the system, and, that any factory, on adopting it, would first notify the other three, so that all might act simultaneously, and it was expected to go into effect on the 1st of May. When Messrs. Gail & Ax's action became known, Messrs. Marburg and > Wilkens immediately adopted the sytem for today. Mr. Felgner was telegraphed to at Reading, Pa., and he wired back his full consent, so that all four factories will start simultaneously this morning.

As one might expect, labor issues continued to arise from time to time, as one may examine in various newspaper articles.

In May 1899, the firm of F. W. Felgner & Son was bought by the American Tobacco Company conglomerate, as noted in The Sun for 29 May (p. 12):

> TOBACCO FACTORY SOLD
> The American Tobacco Company Secures The Plant Of F. W. Felgner, Sons & Co.
> The American Tobacco Company has bought the smoking tobacco factory of F. W. Felgner, Sons & Co., and now practically controls the manufacture of smoking tobacco in Baltimore.
> The purchase was concluded last Friday, when Mr. E. L. Felgner went to New York to confer with the American Tobacco Company in reference to the purchase. Mr. Felgner declined yesterday to state the price paid for the works, but said it was considerably over $300,000.
> The company has been manufacturing principally cut plug smoking tobacco and has been one of the principal competitors of the American Tobacco Company. About three hundred hands are employed by the company.
> Mr. E. L. Felgner will remain at the head of the factory for one year. He has agreed not to engage in the manufature of tobacco for ten years.

The value of the property alone was indicated in tax records on the deed as $75,000 ("Deed For The Felgner Factory", The Sun, 10 Jun 1899, p. 7). Legal proceedings were entered in the U.S. Circuit Court in Baltimore on 29 December 1899, to dissolve the firm of F. W. Felgner & Son Co., which at the time has no assets or liabilities. The filing attorney was noted in the newspaper as Harry B. Dillehunt, who was a son-in-law of Edward L. Felgner.

The firm of F. W. Felgner & Son, as a branch of the American Tobacco Co., continued through the decade of the 1910s. In January 1912, the F. W. Felgner and Marburg Bros. factories and their work forces were merged, and the Felgner property was used as a warehouse for the tobacco manufacturer.

Edward L. Felgner enjoyed his profits in the purchase of a summer estate outside of Baltimore city in 1900:

> Mr. Edward L. Felgner bought at auction yesterday for $23,000 the place recently purchased by Mr. Horace Slingluff kown as the Shaw property in the Green Spring Valley. The property is situated on the Reisterstown turnpike at the junction of the Western Maryland railroad and Green Spring branch of the Northern Central railway, and contains about 108 acres. It is improved by a handsome mansion in course of construction, three dwellings and other buildings. O. A. Kirkland was the auctioneer and Harry B. Dillehunt solicitor. (>>The Sun, 28 Mar 1900, p. 7)

> The country seat of Mr. Horace Slingluff, known as the Shaw property, has been sold by Mr. H. B. Dillehunt, assignee of a mortgage from Mr. Slingluff to Mr. E. L. Felgner, to Mr. Felgner for $23,000. The place is in two lots, containing in all about 108 1-3 acres, and is situtated in the Third district of Baltimore county, at the junction of the Western Maryland railway and the Green Spring Valley branch of the Northern Central railway. The Reisterstown road also runs by the property, which for years was the home of Mr. William Checkley Shaw. When he left Baltimore the place was bought by Mr. Redmond C. Stewart, who sold it to Mr. Slingluff when Mr. Slingluff's lease on the Whedbee place, "Pomona," near Pikesville, expired, about a year ago.
> The place is practically all under cultivation and is improved by a handsome dwelling, two tenant houses and outbuildings. Mr. Felgner will make extensive improvements and occupy the place as his summer home. (>>The Sun, 2 Jun 1900, p. 7)

Two years later, Edward Felgner moved to sell his Green Spring Valley property to Dr. Edwin Geer, who proposed establishing a private asylum "for the treatment of persons of both sexes suffering from alcoholism and mental and nervous diseases of all sorts." The sale was contested in court by neighbors. (>>"Objects to Sanitarium. Matthew S. Atkinson Sues Dr. Geer And E. L. Felgner." The Sun, 11 Oct 1903, p. 14.)

E. L. Felgner's obituary in the Baltimore Sun (6 Jan 1908, p. 8) reads:

Mr. E. L. FELGNER DEAD

Well-Known Tobacco Merchant Expires At His Home.

Mr. Edward L. Felgner, of 2108 Eutaw Place, well known throughout the South as a leading tobacco merchant, died yesterday at his home of heart failure.

As the head of the firm of F. W. Felgner & Son Company, Mr. Felgner built up an extensive business, which from its headquarters in this city carried on its trade in many States. In 1899 the firm was bought out by the American Tobacco Company, and was continued as the Felgner branch.

Mr. Felgner's wife was Miss Grace Hooper, daughter of the late William E. and Katherine B. Hooper, and sister of Mayor Alcaeus Hooper. Mrs. Felgner died September 4 [sic], 1893. Surviving him are two daughters, Mrs. Harry B. Dillehunt and Mrs. Wilbur F. Smith.

In physical proportions Mr. Felgner was unusual, standing over six feet two. For some years he has been in poor health and spent considerable time between Atlantic City and Baltimore. While on the boardwalk in Atlantic City, Mr. Felgner was often mistaken for Senator Chauncey M. Depew, of New York, to whom he bore a striking resemblance.[1355]

The funeral will take place tomorrow at 2 P. M. from his home. The services will be conducted by Rev. Joseph E. Smith, of Washington, formerly pastor of the Mount Vernon Place Methodist Episcopal Church of this city. Burial will be in Greenmount Cemetery.

Wilbur F. Smith and Rev. Joseph E. Smith both are Smith Family relations in the present genealogy.

Edward L. Felgner died intestate; his personal property was appraised at more than $400,000, mostly in bonds and securities. ("Mr. Felgner Left No Will", The Sun, 14 Jan 1908, p. 18; "Mr. E. L. Felgner Estate", The Sun, 30 Jan 1908, p. 8.)

Descendants of William E. Hooper

1. William E. Hooper-1. He was born 1812; died 1885. He married Catherine Bell 1833, daughter of Richard Bell and Catherine Leaf; born 1813, died 1881.

William Hooper and Catherine Bell had 8 children:

	2	i.	Mary Hooper. She was born about 1841 in Maryland.
	3	ii.	Amanda Hooper. She was born about 1844 in Maryland.
	4	iii.	Jane Hooper. She was born about 1846 in Maryland.
+	5	iv.	Grace Hooper. She was born 1851; died 24 September 1893 in Baltimore, Maryland.
	6	v.	Ella Hooper. She was born about 1851 in Maryland.
	7	vi.	Alcaeus Hooper. He was born about 1854 in Maryland.
	8	vii.	Leonard Hooper. He was born aobut 1858 in Maryland.
+	9	viii.	Alcaeus Hooper. He was born 02 January 1859 in Maryland; died 01 July 1938 in Baltimore, Maryland.

NOTES

1. William E. Hooper (1812–1885)

A newspaper item in The Sun (Baltimore) in 1894, pertaining to the estate and will of William E. Hooper, notes that he had left six daughters and four sons, among whom his estate of two million dollars was to be divided. Who the various children were that are not accounted for in this genealogy (above) are not known here. (>>"Wm. E. Hooper's Will", The Sun, 26 May 1894, p. 10)

The 1830 U.S. census for the 2nd Ward, Baltimore, Maryland, lists one William Hooper, aged 50–59 years, who could be an elder William Hooper. Although there are no other males listed for this household (only a woman about his age and a very young female), it is mentioned here because the next listed person on the census page is one Charles R. Watz, in whose household is a male under the age of 5. Coincidentally, perhaps, in the 1850 census a Charles Watz, aged 20, resides with William Hooper [No. 1] and both are in the same occupation (sailmaker).

Occupations of William E. Hooper (from U.S. censuses):
1850: Sailmaker
1860: Merchant
1870: Wholesale cotton manufacturer
1880: Cotton manufacturer

Residences of William E. Hooper (from U.S. censuses):
1840: 5th Ward, Baltimore, Maryland
1850, 1860: 4th Ward, Baltimore, Maryland
1870: 12th Ward, Baltimore, Maryland
1880: 368 Madison Ave., Baltimore, Maryland

Generation 2

5. Grace Hooper-2 (William E. Hooper-1). She was born 1851; died 24 September 1893 in Baltimore, Maryland. She married Edward Louis Felgner; born October 1847 in Maryland; died 05 January 1908 in Baltimore, Maryland.

See the Felgner Family collateral genealogy for information pertaining to Grace Hooper, Edward Felgner and their descendants.

9. Alcaeus Hooper-2 (William E. Hooper-1). He was born 02 January 1859 in Maryland; died 01 July 1938 in Baltimore, Maryland. He married Florence Gees about 1882.

Alcaeus Hooper and Florence Gees had 5 children:

10	i.	Florence Hooper. She was born about 1887 in Maryland.
11	ii.	Katharine Hooper. She was born about 1890 in Maryland.
12	iii.	Hamilton Hooper. He was born about 1892 in Maryland.
13	iv.	Grace Hooper. She was born about 1899 in Maryland.

Occupations of Alcaeus Hooper (from U.S. censuses and other sources):
1890 Baltimore city directory: Wm. E. Hooper & Sons, Woodberry [Woodberry Cotton Duck mill]
1910: Capitalist (own income)

At the time of the 1910 U.S. census, Alcaeus Hooper resided at 2201 Maryland Ave., Baltimore, Maryland.

He was mayor of Baltimore, 1895–1897, elected on a Republican reform ticket, having earlier served as an alderman. His term in office was tempestuous, but also saw modernization of the Health Department and improvements in public schools and electrical distribution in the city. He did not run for a second term. He was appointed to the School Board by his successor, Mayor Hayes, and resigned that position in 1910.

He was often noted and humorized (sometimes by himself) for his short stature. A passport application (14 May 1884) indicated that his height was was 5 feet, 1 inch.

His obituary in The New York Times (2 Jul 1938, p. 13) noted that he was survived by his son and unmarried daughters Florence and Elizabeth, and also by a third daughter, Mrs. Stuart White of Aurora, Illinois, but it is not here known whether that daughter was Katharine or Grace (and also which of them had predeceased her father).

Mr. GEORGE W. GAIL DEAD

Former President of Fire Board A Victim Of Typhoid Fever.

WAS OPERATED ON SUNDAY

Business Man of Prominence, Who Took A Deep Interest In City's Fire-Fighting Facilities.

Mr. George W. Gail, former president of the fire Boad and son of the late George W. Gail, founder of the tobacco establishment of Gail and Ax, which later became affilitated with the American Tobacco Company, died early yesterday morning at the Union Protestant Infirmary of typhoid fever.

Mr. Gail went to the hospital on July 10, and after an examination by the physicians it was seen that his condition was serious. He was under the care of Drs. T. B. Futcher, Julius Friedenwald and R. P. Bell, who exerted every effort known to medical science to stave off the fatal result. It developed a few days ago that an operation was necessary and Dr. Richard Follis, of Johns Hopkins University, was called in. He performed the operation at 3 o'clock Sunday afternoon. From that time until the time of his death at 4.20 A. M. the patient did not regain consciousness. His wife and their daughter, Miss Helen Gail, were at his bedside until the end came. The former was near him always from the time he was taken to the hospital. She is prostrated by his death.

Shortly after Mr. Gail's death the body was removed to his country home, Rose Hill, on the Old Pimlico road.

Mr. Gail was born at the family home on Barre street before the removal to the imposing home on Eutaw Place, Whitelock street and Linden avenue. As a child he evinced a fondness for firemen and became a frequent visitor to No. 2 Engine Company near his home. When the family removed to Eutaw Place he had a gong placed in his room upon which alarms were sounded.

It was that gong that awakend him on the morning of the big Hopkins Place fire in 1887, which was perhaps the largest this city had up to the time of the conflagration in 1904, and at which he acted as a volunteer at the nozzle the entire night.

Mr. Gail later became junior partner of the firm of Gail & Ax, under his father, and during this time he did not forget the members of No. 2. He superintended the introduction of the fire sprinkling system in the factory, which was the first to be introduced in this city.

He was made president of the Fire Board at the election of Mayor McLane and remained in this position until the beginning of the Mahool administration. During his term in office Mr. Gail fought for and obtained the general increase in salary for the firemen, and when later he failed to obrtain increases for the regular men who did not come under the general increase he divided his salary for the four years among them, which amounted to $4,000.

Mr. Gail is survived by his widow, who was formerly Miss Helen Baugh, of Richmond, three daughters and one son—Misses Helen Elizabeth and Nannie Gail and Mr. George W. Gail, Jr. He is also survived by his mother, who was formerly Miss Mary Felgner, daughter of E. L. Felgner, one of the pioneer tobacco manufacturers of this city, and four sisters, Mrs. Ernst Schmeisser, Mrs. Nannie Gail Mayer, Mrs. John Hinrichs and Miss Mary Gail—all of Baltimore. One stepbrother [half-brother], George Philip [sic] Gail, now in Germany, also survives him.

> Mr. Gail was born October 14, 1864. His father came to this country from Germany and settled on Barre street. He soon became president of the widely known firm of Gail & Ax and in 1883 his son became junior partner. He was a director of the Third National Bank and was more or less deeply interested in the finances of the city.
> As one of the sisters of Mr. Gail is in Denver, no arrangements for the funeral have been made and will not until word is received from her.
> Councilman West, of the Thirteenth ward, announced last night his intention of introducing a joint resolution of regret at the next meeting of the City council. On an order from the Fire Board flags on all engine houses, as well as the flag on the City Hall, have been placed at half mast.

A comparable obituary notice also appeared in the Baltimore American (20 July 1909, p. 16).

Another biography of George William Gail, Jr., appeared in Baltimore: Its History and Its People (Lewis Historical Publishing Co., New York and Chicago, 1912, Vol. II—Biography, pp. 246-248; authorship of the volume given only as "Various Contributors"):

> In the proud list of her citizens, known and honored throughout the business world for stability, integrity and fair dealing, Baltimore accords a high place to the late George William Gail, for many years one of her foremost business men, and one whose efforts for the improvement and welfare of the Monumental City, in many directions, have been of lasting effect.
> George William Gail, son of Georg Wilhelm and Mary Sophia (Felgner) Gail, was born October 14, 1864, in Baltimore. Through both his parents he was of German descent, his father being a native of Hesse-Darmstadt, and his mother a Baltimorean of German parentage. * * *
> Mr. Gail received a liberal education, attending the public and private schools of his native city, and also enjoyed the advantages of tutors at his own home. His health, not being very robust, it was thought advisable not to attempt a college or university course, and at the age of twenty he became a clerk in the wholesale tobacco house of Bendheim Brothers & Company, at that time of Baltimore. In February, 1885, he entered into the business which had been founded by his father, the famous firm of Gail & Ax, and speedily gave evidence of having inherited a large measure of the business ability for which not his father alone, but also his paternal grandfather had been so greatly distinguished. The excellent and progressive methods of young Mr. Gail tended largely to further the interests of the establishment, and in 1891, when the firm sold out to the American Tobacco Company, he became manager of the latter organization. This position he filled with credit to himself and benefit to the business for a period of nine years, resigning at the end of that time in order that he might be free to devote his attentions to other important matters.
> Chief among these was the fire department, in which, form earliest boyhood, Mr. Gail had shown an unusual amount of interest. The old home of the family was in Barre street, near Hanover, and just one block away stood the engine-house, occupied then, as now, by No. 2 Company. With the members of this company Mr. Gail made an early and a binding acquaintance, and so quickly did he grasp the details of the work, that from the position of "mascot" he rose in the estimation of the men to that of a really earnest pupil, and grizzly old fire-fighters took keen delight in coaching him. Meanwhlie, the boy continued to attend every fire within running distance, and after the family moved to the mansion in Eutaw place, far from the scene of his boyhood associations, his interest never flagged. He had a fire gong placed in his room and the alarms were sounded upon it. It was this gong which awakened him on the Sunday morning of the great fire of 1887, and he immediatley went to the scene of the conflagration and personally directed the streams of water during the entire night, serving with his old company, to which he belonged as a volunteer. When the firm with which he was connected installed a fire-sprinkler system and fire escapes he gave it his closest personal supervision. The escape, which was the spiral tube type, was the first of the kind erected here. Upon the election of Mayor McLane, Mr. Gail was made president of the fire board, and filled that office for four years, until the commencement of the Mahool administration. While serving in this capacity he was instrumental in obtaining a general increase in the salary of the firemen, and when later he failed to secure the increase for the men who did not come under this ruling, he divided among them his own salary of four thousand dollars, for four years' service.

Mr. Gail was a director of the Third National Bank and of the Mount Washington Electric Light and Power Company, and was connected more or less directly with many of the city's leading financial institutions. Forceful, sagacious and ready of resource, he was recognized as belonging to the innermost circle of those who are closest to the business concerns and financial interests which have mostly largely conserved the growth and progress of the city. He was a member of the Germania Club of Baltimore, the Maryland Bicycle Club, the Maryland Country Club, the Maryland Club, the Roland Park Country Club, and the Merchants' Club. His political affiliations were with the Democratic party.

Mr. Gail married, December 5, 1888, in Richmond, Virginia, Helen Christiana, a native of that city, daughter of Charles and Olga (von Bucholtz) Bauch [sic], both natives of Germany, who settled in Richmond, and after the death of Mr. Bauch, in the spring of 1897, removed to Baltimore. The following children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Gail: Helen Mary, George William, Nanny Louise, Olga Elise. While of a social disposition, greatly enjoying the companionship of his friends, Mr. Gail's highest joy was in the home circle, where he was a beloved and loving husband and father, and his beautiful residence—"Rose Hill"—on Old Pimlico Road, was a scene of the truest domestic happiness.

The death of Mr. Gail occurred July 19, 1909, in Baltimore, when he had scarcely more than entered upon the prime of life, having not yet completed his forty-fifth year. The feeling of sorrow was deep and widespread. It was felt that Baltimore had lost an invaluable citizen, one who was always ready to give his attention to the needs of city affairs, and whose shrewd common sense and excellent judgment, combined with remarkable foresight, had given the impetus to a number of greatly-needed city improvements. His friends were to be found in all classes of society, but especially was he mourned by his devoted and grateful comrades of the fire department who felt that they had lost their best friend, the one most enthusiastic in behalf of their work and most appreciative of their services. It is impossible to estimate the value of such men to a city, at least during their lifetime. We cannot measure results by what they are doing, or proportion them according to the extent of their specific business. Their influence ramifies all through the commercial and industrial sphere, extending itself to the whole social economy. Every man, from the toiling laborer to the merchant prince, receives benefit from them.

Among the many tributes offered to the character and work of Mr. Gail was the following editorial from The American:

> Mr. George W. Gail, whose death the city mourns, was a citizen of the highest principles, and during the time he was in office a public servant whose delight it was to do his work with honesty and fidelity. As President of the Fire Board his only thought was the good of the service, and his act in turning over his salary to the men was but indicative of his interest in their welfare. When he was a candidate for reappointment he had the backing of a large number of influential men who knew and appreciated his zeal for more efficient fire protection.
> Mr. Gail left the office with never a spot or blemish on his record, bearing the love of the men for whom he worked, and the admiration and respect of all irrespective of party affiliation. He was a successful business man and public-spirited at all times, and his death is one to be regretted.

Helen (Baugh) Gail (1866–)

At the time of the 1910 U.S. census, she resided on Old Pimlico Road, Baltimore city, Maryland.

On a passport application made by her daughter, Mary, in Baltimore, 4 October 1921, an affidavit was signed by Frederick Baugh, brother to Helen who at that time was a public accountant in Baltimore.

Additional Notes Pertaining to the Felgner Family

1. A newspaper item in The Sun (Baltimore) for 27 February 1861 (p. 1) notices the death by drowning on 26 February of one Stanislaus Felgner, U.S. Army. How he may be related to the Felgner family here discussed is unclear. His death took place during gunnery practice outside the walls of Fort McHenry, when a gun carriage overturned at the water's edge.

2. An obituary in the Richmond Times-Dispatch (Virginia) for 6 October 2008 notices the death on 3 October of one Edward Felgner Neal, Jr., aged 80, "son of the late Dorothy Meek Brockenbrough, Edward Felgner Neal, and Austin Brockenbrough"; survived by his wife, Rebecca Michie Neal and others. Note that in this collateral family genealogy, Helen (Baugh) Gail [see above] was from Richmond, Virginia. How E. F. Neal Sr. and Jr. may relate to the Felgners above mentioned has not been determined here, but this potential connection is brought to the attention of researchers.

Emendation
Although information relayed to Earle Spamer from a family source indicated that the "Wyckoff" family name was spelled thus, he has since found in U.S. censuses for 1880, 1900, 1910, and 1920 that the family name is spelled "Wycoff", which is also the common spelling of this surname. Thus by the inferential reliability of U.S. censuses—repeated in various locations over 40 years—the spelling, "Wycoff", is adopted in this genealogy. In addition, a newspaper item from The Tribune-Republican (Greeley, Colorado) for 6 Nov 1930 indicates that one J. Baird Wycoff and Mrs. Elizabeth W. Lugg were members of the Home Missionary Society of the Methodist Church in Colorado.

new to this genealogy

The genealogy of the Wycoff family, as it relates to the Lugg family lineage and as currently understood, is as follows.

Descendants of H. G. Wycoff

1. ‡ H. G. Wycoff[1] was born about 1834 in Kentucky.

Children of H.G. Wycoff are:

	2	i.	‡ Thomas C.[2] Wycoff, born about 1866 in Iowa.
+	3	ii.	‡ David T. Wycoff, born January 1867 in Iowa.
	4	iii.	‡ William N. Wycoff, born about October 1869 in Iowa.
	5	iv.	‡ Minnie A. Wycoff, born about 1872 in Iowa.
	6	v.	‡ Maud M. Wycoff, born about 1879 in Iowa.

NOTES

1. H. G. Wycoff (ca. 1834–)

He was a farmer. At the time of the 1870 and 1880 U.S. censuses, he resided in Lincoln Twp., Union Co., Iowa.

The parents and siblings of H. G. Wycoff are uncertain. However, in the 1860 census for Union Twp., Union Co., Iowa (post office Afton), the following family is noted:

Daniel Wycoff, 50, Farmer, born in Kentucky
M. C. Wycoff, 32, female, born in Indiana
Josiah Wycoff, 17, born in Indiana
John A. Wycoff, 15, born in Indiana
Mary S. Wycoff, 13, born in Indiana
Thomas A. Wycoff, 11, born in Iowa
Anne Wycoff, 3, born in Iowa
Sarah E. Wycoff, 1, born in Iowa

In 1860, H. G. Wycoff was aged about 26 years and thus may have had his own residence elsewhere, or was possibly in the employ of another farmer.

Generation 2

2. David T.[2] Wycoff (H.G.[1] Wycoff) was born January 1867 in Iowa. He married Jessie Baird. She was born February 1875 in Joliet, Illinois, daughter of Thomas Baird and Sarah Emily Barrett.

Child of David Wycoff and Jessie Baird is:

	7	i.	Elizabeth[3] Wycoff, born about 1903 in Colorado; died 05 April 1944.

See Lugg Family collateral genealogy (in the main Smith Family genealogy) for information relating to Elizabeth Wycoff.

3. Grace[2] Lamson (Frank H.[1]) was born July 1890 in New Hampshire. She married Henry Upham about 1926. He was born about 1868 in Canada.

Child of Grace Lamson and Henry Upham is:
7 i. Joyce[3] Upham, born between April 1930–August 1933.

NOTES

At the time of the 1910 U.S. census Grace Lamson was a music teacher.

Residences of Henry Upham (from U.S. census and other source):
1930 census: 7 Beach St., Warwick, Kent Co., Rhode Island
1933 Aug newspaper article: Providence, Rhode Island

At the time of the 1930 census, Henry Upham was employed in a real estate insurance company.

Henry Upham immigrated into the U.S. in 1890. By the time of the 1930 census he was a naturalized citizen. He apparently had a previous marriage, as in the 1930 census he indicated that he was 30 years of age at the time of his first marriage.

NOTES

The following newspaper item provided information pertaining to the Lamson family, not previously determined and now used in the present genealogy (Portsmouth Herald [New Hampshire], 12 Aug 1933, p. 6):

Visiting Here And Elsewhere

> Recent visitors at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Lamson are Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Summerfield of Philadelphia, parents of Mrs. Herbert Lamson; Mr. and Mrs. Charles Lamson and son, Kempton, of Mount Vernon, N. Y.; and Mr. and Mrs. Henry Upham of Providence. Mrs. Upham (Grace Lamson) and daughter, Joyce, are spending the month of August in Exeter. Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Lamson and son will remain in Exeter the remainder of the summer. For the past six years Mr. Lamson has been professor of sociology at the University of Shanghai.

Regarding the information in the newspaper item just quoted, Herbert and Rosalie Lamson had just returned from China. They and their son, Robert, are listed in the passenger list for the S.S. President Cleveland, which had sailed from Shangai, China, 27 June 1933, arriving in Seattle, Washington, 10 July. They indicated that their address in the U.S. was 83 Main St., Exeter, New Hampshire, which was the residence of Herbert's parents.

Herbert and Rosalie Lamson had previously been in China, too. They are listed in the passenger list for the S.S. President Pierce, which had sailed from Shanghai on 9 April 1927, arriving in Seattle, Washington, 25 April 1927.

Herbert D. Lamson was a professor of sociology at Boston University at least in 1946 (as noted from a newspaper article that mentioned him).

Allen Family
Collateral Genealogy
(7 descendants)

The genealogy of the Allen family, as it relates to our Smith lineage and as currently understood, is as follows.

Dorothea Allen married Edward Seville Smith; she was known as Dorothy and she seems to have been an only child. Smith elected to omit pertinent family information about the Allens in his "Smith Genealogy and Some Reminiscences", and accordingly no information was had of the Allen family other than the names of Dorothy's father and mother, which Smith gave as Alfred and Mamie Kinzler Allen. Only the following information has been determined for the parents of Dorothea Allen Smith. It is clear now that "Mamie" was the name by which Mrs. Allen went, but that Anna was her given name. The information provided below is taken from U.S. censuses and Philadelphia city directories.

1. James[1] Allen was born about 1820 in England; died about 1865. He married Anna. She was born about 1815 in England; died after 1889.

Referred page numbers pertain to the original, printed version of this genealogy. Occasional (but infrequent) one-page variations may be noted between the digital and printed versions, but this does not affect the proper function of hyperlinks within the digital version. This copy was printed on 8 June 2011.

Children of James Allen and Anna are:

2 i. Richard[2] Allen, born about 1849 in England.
\+ 3 ii. Alfred Allen, born June 1853 in Pennsylvania; died after 14 April 1930.
4 iii. Elizabeth Allen, born about 1853 in Pennsylvania.
5 iv. Margaret Allen, born about 1855 in Pennsylvania.

3. Alfred[2] Allen (James[1]) was born June 1853 in Pennsylvania, and died after 14 April 1930. He married Anna Kinzler about 1889. She was born January 1862 in Pennsylvania; died between 1920–1930.

Child of Alfred Allen and Anna Kinzler is:

\+ 6 i. Dorothea Kinzler[2] Allen, born February 1890 in Pennsylvania; died 13 June 1922. She married Edward Seville Smith.

NOTES

1. James Allen (ca. 1820–ca. 1865)

He was a baker. He immigrated into the U.S. with his wife and chlidren before 1847, settling in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania.

U.S. census and Phliadelphia city directory data provide the following information about James Allen:
Old street address scheme, prior to 1858:
1847–1849 city directories: Vine St. above Broad St.
1850–1857 city directories: 209 Spruce St.
New street address scheme:
1858, 1859 city directories: 707 Spruce St.
1860 census: 5th Ward, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania
Hereafter, notations become a bit more confused, which may or may not relate to the same James Allen:
1860 city directory: "late baker", 229 Union St.
1860 business directory: confectioner, 707 Spruce St.
1861 city directory: James Allen, Jr., baker, 707 Spruce St.
1862 city directory: not listed
1863 city directory: confectioner, 707 Spruce St.
1864 city directory: baker, 603 S. 9th St.
1865 city directory: baker, 603 S. 9th St.; James M. Allen, baker, 707 Spruce St.
1866 city directory: baker, 903 S. 9th St.

Anna Allen (ca. 1815–after 1889)
(wife of James Allen)

In the 1860 U.S. census for Philadelphia her age is given as 35; however, in the 1870 and 1880 censuses her age is given as 55 and 65, respectively.

U.S. census and Philadelphia city directory data provide the following information for Anna Allen, some of which may not relate to the Anna Allen the subject here [not all city directories seen]:
1869 city directory: Ann W. Allen, widow James, 408 S. 10th St. [residence]
1870 census: 7th Ward, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania (in the William P. Allen household) [see additional comments about W. P. Allen below]
1872 city directory: Ann Allen, widow James, 409 S. 10th St. [William P. Allen household]
1880 census: 409 S. 10th St., Philadelphia, Pennsylvania [Alfred Allen household]

3. Alfred Allen (1853–after 14 Apr 1930)

He worked in or operated a grocery during his entire adult life.

U.S. census and Philadelphia city directory data provide the following residential and business data for Alfred Allen; occupations other than grocer are noted [not all city directories seen]:

1869 city directory: clerk, 409 S. 10th St.
1870 census: 7th Ward, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania
1872, 1875 city directories: clerk, 409 S. 10th St.

1900 census: 127 [N.] 15th St., Philadelphia, Pennsylvania
1901–1904 city directories: 131 N. 15th St. [business], 127 N. 15th St. [residence]
1905, 1906 city directories: clerk, 3214 N. Carlisle St.[1357]
1910 census: 3214 [N.] Carlisle St., Philadelphia, Pennsylvania
1912 city directory: clerk, 3214 N. Carlisle St.
1920 census: 3214 [N.] Carlisle St., Philadelphia, Pennsylvania
1930 census: boarder at Luther Hospice, 20th and Race Sts., Philadelphia, Pennsylvania [i.e., Luther Hospice for Young Men, 157 N. 20th St.[1358]]; occupation still listed as grocer

At the time of the 1870 census, Alfred Allen, aged 17, was listed as a "Clerk Grocer" residing in the household of William P. Allen, aged 27, born in England, "Grocer"; with them was Ann Allen, aged 55, born in England, "Keeping House".

We do not know at this time what the relation of William P. Allen was to the other Allens here mentioned. W. P. Allen maintained a grocery with residence at 409 S. 10th St., Philadelphia, during at least 1872–1873, which property subsequently was used as a grocery by Alfred Allen, and a residence at various times to Alfred, William, and Anna Allen. W. P. Allen subsequently maintained a grocery with residence at 254 S. 15th St. during at least 1875–1910, during which time a W. P. Allen, Jr. is noted there during 1895–1899.

At the time of the 1880 census, Anna Allen resided with her son, Alfred. The only other person listed with them is a boarder, Lewis A. Houston, aged 30, born in Pennsylvania, salesman.

[1357] 3214 N. Carlisle St. is notably just two blocks west of 1218 W. Hilton St., where was the home of Elisabeth Drummond, whom Edward Smith's brother, Earle, married in 1912.

[1358] The Luther Hospice for Young Men was a Christian boarding home for students and businessmen operated (amongst numerous other similar institutions) by the United Lutheran Church in America. Despite the institution's name, note that Alfred Allen was 76 years of age at the time he was listed there during the 1930 census. At the time of the census, 26 boarders were listed at the home, ranging in age from 15 to 78; only Alfred and the elder man were listed as widowers. It is not known whether Edward S. Smith remained in touch with the Allen family after the decease of his first wife, Dorothy.

One description of the Luther Home notes that "The guests were mostly long stayers * * * Its policy, therefore, is to entertain a guest as long as he waishes to stay even if this period runs into years as it often does." In 1924 rates for room and board were $9.50–$12.50 per week, with a lower rate for those who could not afford the regular rate. "Our reading room and music room help to pass the time of guests profitably. Not the recreation, however, but the family prayer, the Bible study classes, and the personal work among the men are the special features of our work." (>>Minutes of the Third Biennial Convention of the United Lutheran Church in America, Buffalo, N.Y., October 17-25, 1922, p. 359; and Minutes of the Fourth Biennial Convention of the United Lutheran Church in America, Chicago, Illinois, October 21-29, 1924 (United Lutheran Publication House, Philadelphia), p. 382.)

At the time of the 1870 U.S. census, "Elizabeth A. Gonzalez" resided with her son, Joseph, aged 4, in the 2nd Ward, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. She remained in her son's household until her death.

The 1900 U.S. census lists Elizabeth Gonzalez, widow, as having been married 37 years, thus married in about 1863. She indicated there that she had had one child and that the child still was living; this, of course, was Joseph M. Gonzalez, Sr. [No. 2]. It seems probable that her husband died sometime between about 1865 and 1870, which would account for Elizabeth's presence alone (without a husband) in all censuses 1870–1920.

She was buried in the Silverbrook section of Arlington Cemetery, Drexel Hill, Pennsylvania. (Note: There are no other members of this Gonzalez family buried at this cemetery.)

Thus far little is known of Louis Phillip Ade's family. He seems to have been an only child, and his mother, Nellie, was widowed not long after her marriage. We do not yet know the name of Louis Ade's father; his marriage and death took place between censuses, through which these people have been traced. The following information has been gleaned from U.S. censuses and other sources:

- 1910 census: Neither Louis nor Nellie Ade are located, even under numerous variant spellings.
- 1920 census for Peoria, Peoria Co., Illinois: Louis Ade, aged 13, born in Iowa, resided with his widowed mother, Nellie Ade, aged 37, born in Iowa; she was the proprietor of a boarding house at 106 Fourth St. No other children are listed.
- 1930 census for Hammond, Lake Co., Indiana: Louis P. Ade, aged 23, born in Iowa, resided with his mother, Nellie Sowell, aged 48, born in Iowa; her first marriage is indicated to have been at age 22 [ca. 1905]. Louis Ade was employed as a proofreader for a newspaper (and note that the Social Security Death Index indicates that the Louis Ade noted above registered with Social Security in Indiana). Nellie was then the wife of Benjamin F. Sowell [misindexed as Bery F. Sowell], aged 48, born in Wisconsin [but see below], first marriage at age 43, employed as a pipe fitter at an oil refinery. No other children are listed. From this information we discern that he married Nellie Ade ca. 1925.
- The 1917 military draft registration for Benjamin Franklin Sowell gives his date of birth as 3 January 1881. His address at that time was Box 83, Fort Bayard, New Mexico. He was employed as a plumber with L. P. McChesney, in Fort Bayard. He gave his mother's name and address as Mrs. Apolonia C. Sowell, 1609 Gano St., Houston, Texas.
- The 1942 military draft registration for Benjamin Franklin Sowell reconfirms his birth date, but he indicated there that he was born in "Guadloupe Co., Texas". At that time he resided at 48 Williams St., Hammond Lake, Indiana; he was employed by the Hammond City Schools, with Waltham & Hahman. Most notably in the 1942 registration is his citation of the "name and address of person who will always know your address": "Louis Ade, Belvedere Apt., Hammond, Ind."

There is cirumstantial evidence that might point to the identity of the family of Louis Phillip Ade, whose parents were both born in Iowa according to the 1930 U.S. census. In the 1880 U.S. census for Maquoketa, Jackson Co., Iowa, the family of Joseph Ade (aged 39, born in Ohio) and Sophia F. Ade (aged 37, born in Vermont) includes one Louis P. Ade (aged 9, born in Iowa). The family of Joseph and Sophia Ade appear in the 1900 census for Davenport, Scott Co., Iowa, but by this time Louis does not reside with them, nor has he been located under the name, Louis, in this census. However, a Phillip Ade, aged 27, born April 1873 in "Ohio", is listed in the 1900 census in a rooming house in Chicago, Illinois; his occupation is listed as "Pressman", and an adjacent occupant of the rooming house is listed as "Newspaper". Note that Louis Phillip Ade of family (who could have been a son of the Lewis P. Ade/ Phillip Ade mentioned here) was likewise in the newspaper business as a proofreader, and further taking note that his uncle, George Ade (as mentioned in a couple of places in the main genealogy) was at this time a well-known humorist and dramatist at the Chicago Record.

No other satisfactory public records have been located that might reveal genealogical information about Louis Phillip Ade.

Descendants of William S. Wood

1. William S.[1] Wood was born June 1837 in Baltimore, Maryland. He married Anna A. Smart 1859 in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. She was born August 1838 in Leicestershire, England.

Children of William Wood and Anna Smart are:

2 i. Frank[2] Wood, born 1860.
3 ii. Ella Grace Wood, born 1862. She married William Russell ca. 1884.
\+ 4 iii. Malvern Hill Wood, born May 1864 in New Jersey.
5 iv. Annie Wood, born 1866.
6 v. Lillie Wood, born 1867.
7 vi. Alfred Wood, born 1870.
8 vii. W. S. Wood, born 1872.

10 ix. Ernest Wood, born 1875.
11 x. Lily May Wood, born 1877.
12 xi. Christopher Wood, born 1879.

NOTES

At the time of the 1900 U.S. census, William S. Wood [Sr.] (1837–) resided in the 5th District, Cecil Co., Maryland. He was a farmer.

In the 1900 U.S. census, Anna (Smart) Wood (1838–) indicated that she had had 11 children, 8 of whom were then living. The time of her immigration into the U.S. is there listed as "Un[known]", thus presumably she may have been an infant or young child at the time of her immigration.

Generation 2

4. Malvern Hill[2] Wood (William S.[1]) was born May 1864 in New Jersey; died before April 1910. He married (1) Gertrude Mahala Keatty 14 September 1886 in Wilmington, New Castle Co., Delaware, daughter of William J. Keatty and Rachel Gainor. She was born October 1869 in Cecil Co., Maryland; died after April 1910.

Children of Malvern Wood and Gertrude Keatty are:
13 i. Arthur[3] Wood, born April 1887 in Maryland.

Regarding Rev. Potts' extraordinary dual membership in the General Church and the General Convention of the New Jerusalem, the following report made by him concerning his Pacific Coast tour in 1908 will serve to document his itinerary and purposes of the visitation ("Reports of the General Pastors", Journal of the Eighty-eighth Annual Session of the General Convention of the New Jerusalem in the United States of America, held in Lakewood, Ohio, form Saturday, June 13, through Wednesday, June 17, 1908, Massachusetts New-Church Union, Boston, 1908, pp. 154-157):

Report of John Faulkner Potts, now General Pastor of the California Association

During the past year I have, with one exception, been steadily employed on the great Library Edition of the writings of Swedenborg now being prepared and issued by the American Swedenborg Printing and Publishing Society.

In last December I received an application to visit San Francisco with a view to the ordination of William de Ronden-Pos, in accordance with Minute 159 of the Session of 1905. This application was accompanied by documents from which I gathered that a very serious condition prevailed in the Pacific Coast Association in general, and the O'Farrell Street Society in particular. After some correspondence and a thorough examination of many documents I decided to visit the Pacific Coast, first to revive the Pacific Coast Association, which had not met for thirteen years, and secondly to investigate on the spot the conditions existing in the O'Farrell Street Society. I then issued a circular letter to the five ministers in California, informing them of my intention to make a general pastoral visitation of all of their societies, and on receiving an encouraging reply from them all, I requested the President of the Association, the Rev. B. Edmiston, to call a general meeting of the Association at Los Angeles at an early date.

On my way to California I visited the little society at New Orleans, preached to them, and was greatly pleased with the love and intelligence they showed, and with their successful unity of purpose under the fine leadership of Mr. Frank M. Miller.

In California I first made a pastoral visitation of the Riverside Society, which I found to be in a healthy and united condition owing to the long and wise ministry there of the venerable B. Edmiston. I preached in the admirable little church morning and evening, Sunday, April 12, to good and deeply interested congregations, and had many profitable conversations with the people, both at a social meeting and in private, on the objects of my visitation.

On April 15 I arrived in San Francisco, and during the four following days I was incessantly busy with the investigation of the causes and results of the trouble there, which I probed to the bottom by personal call and careful talk with all who had in any way become dissatisfied and malcontent. On Sunday, April 19, I preached in the afternoon at the O'Farrell Street Church—large and almost imposing premises—to a numerous and most intelligent audience, and during the preliminary service I baptized four little children, including the infant daughter of the Pastor, the Rev. Wm. de Ronden-Pos, and also the infant daughter of Mr. Cavalho, a Brazilian gentleman who received the doctrines through the instrumentality of Mr. Castro de Lafayette, of Rio Janeiro [sic]. On the same occasion I assisted at the reception into the O'Farrell Street Society of eight new members, all of whom were manifestly filled with a spirit of earnestness and love. The day was Easter Sunday, and altogether these afternoon services were memorable to me, and to all present. I was deeply impressed with the evidences of warm life and excellent progress in the doctrines of the church prevailing among the people and in the Pastor there.

I had previously attended a meeting of the Doctrinal Class, at which thirty were present, and at which appeared a remarkably active interest, amounting to thirst for instruction in the more interior teachings of the New Jerusalem.

I also attended a social meeting of the O'Farrell Street Society, at which I delivered an address on the meaning of the descent of the New Jerusalem.

From San Francisco I proceeded to Saratoga, to visit Mr. Archibald B. Brolly, a former very intelligent and attached member of the Cathedral Street Society of Glasgow, and after two days returned to Southern California in order to attend the proposed general meeting of the Pacific Coast Association at Los Angeles, being accompanied on the journey of nearly five hundred miles by nine members of the O'Farrell Street Society, who composed the delegation to the meeting from that society.

The meeting was announced for April 24, 25, and 26, but it was found impossible to hold a legal meeting of the Association in question. A preliminary meeting of all members of the New Church there present was then called together in the beautiful little church of the Los Angeles Society, at which it was decided to form an entirely new association, to be called "The California Association of the New Jerusalem," and at which also a Constitution and By-Laws were adopted. The preliminary meeting was then turned into the first annual meeting of the new association, and officers were at once appointed, consisting of the Rev. J. S. David, President; the Rev. J. E. Collom, Vice-President; together with the Treasurer, Secretary, and Board of Directors of the Association. The Rev. J. F. Potts was then elected the General Pastor of the Association, he having been first admitted a member of it. The Rev. J. S. David was appointed a missionary for California.

On Sunday, April 26, I preached morning and evening in the church at Los Angeles, and during the morning service, before a crowded congregation, I inaugurated William de Ronden-Pos into the first degree of the ministry, thereby conferring upon him the right to teach and preach the doctrines, and to officiate at funerals, in accordance with the provisions of the Constitution of the General Convention, he meanwhile consenting to await inauguration into the second degree before he administered the sacraments, and I undertaking as the General Pastor to provide for the administration of the sacraments in his society in the interim.

On this occasion I made use of the truly magnificent Ordination Service contained in the Liturgy of the General Conference of the New Church in Great Britain, and I afterward heard a universal expression of delight with this most impressive and instructive service. It is in itself an education in the theology of the New Church to every hearer. Mr. de Ronden-Pos was presented for ordination by three ministers of the Association and three lay members of his own society.

At the close of the morning service I administered the Holy Supper to a full church, being assisted therein by the Rev. J. S. David and the Rev. J. E. Collom.

In the evening I preached on "Love Truly Conjugial" to a full house.

The subject of the morning sermon was "The Great Multitude That No Man Can Number."

From Los Angeles I went to Ontario, to visit there the devoted Frankish family, who keep the banner of the New Church flying in that beautiful place; and after two days I proceeded one hundred and twenty miles further south to make a pastoral visitation of the Society of San Diego, on the border of Mexico and the shore of the Pacific. I attended a social meeting of this earnest little society, and on Sunday, May 3, I preached morning and evening in the new place of worship of that society, of which the well-known devoted minister of the New Church, Rev. J. S. David, is the able Pastor. After a busy time at this most southerly point of my work on the Pacific Coast, during which I visited and made the close acquaintance of some most loving and devoted and old members of the New Church—never to be forgotten by me—I travelled fourteen hundred miles north to visit the society at Portland, Ore. This excellent society I found to be in a healthy and progressive state under the leadership of our devoted friend, Mr. Charles W. Cottell. I preached in the beautiful hall where the society meets on Sunday morning, May 10, to a deeply interested audience, after which I administered the Holy Supper to about forty communicants.

On Monday and Tuesday, May 11 and 12, I visited my brother, Rawlinson F. Potts and his family of wife and four children, at Tualatin, a country place twelve miles from Portland to the south; and on Tuesday night started for Spokane, a city five hundred and forty miles to the north-east in the state of Washington, in order to visit the earnest circle of our New-Church friends there.

> I found this very interesting and intelligent circle of New-Church people well kept together and united under their excellent and judicious leader, Mr. Emil Hansen, in whose house I attended two delightful evening meetings of the friends, and at which I was ably assisted by Mr. Hansen, whose kind and efficient aid was needed in view of the fact that here for the first time after almost incessant usage for six weeks my voice showed signs of failing me.
> I arrived at home in May after a truly great and incessantly busy journey of about nine thousand miles, during which I passed through all the border states of our country on its southern, western, and northern sides, except Florida, and through the whole course of which I felt myself to be led and protected by the Divine Providence of the Lord in every possible way, so that my health and vigor never failed or flagged, and to Him who loves His Church and all who work for it with devotion I desire to here render all honor, glory, and power with a deeply thankful heart.

Emendation
In this genealogy it was supposed that Rev. Potts when in Portland, Oregon, had visited his brother, Rawlinson, in nearby Tualatin. The supposition is corroborated in the above quotation.

Rawlinson Potts conducted a typical country store in which also was the post office; hence his position as Postmaster in Tualatin. The following news item appeared in The Morning Oregonian (Portland), 17 February 1912 (p. 9), which provides this information. Interestingly, although the event occurred two months after the death of Rawlinson Potts, the news item is written as though he were still alive:

> TUALATIN POSTOFFICE ROBBED.—The store of R. F. Potts, postmaster at Tualatin, in Washington County, was robbed Thursday night and $100 and goods worth that amount were taken. As the funds of the postoffice and store were kept together the crime is looked upon as a postoffice robbery, although the postal department loses nothing by the theft. Inspector Durand investigated the case yesterday.

The store's location seems to have been directly at the train station. Several months after his death, the store was noted for sale in The Morning Oregonian (Portland), 18 March 1912 (p. 7):

> FOR SALE—The R. F. Pott's [sic] store and property, at Tualatin. Fine business chance, good location, in growing town surrounded by rich farming district; two railroads, 14 miles from Portland; take S. P. [Southern Pacific] train at Jefferson st. and get off at the door. Call or write for full information. E. D. Mort, Tualatin, Or.

Samuel Warren Potts and his sister, Lucy Potts, arrived in Glasgow, Scotland, on 12 August 1905, when they began their year-long visit to their homeland [see more under Lucy Emma Potts (no. 23) in the Potts Family collateral genealogy]. Although they are registered elsewhere as having sailed aboard the S.S. Caledonia, the cover sheet of the United Kingdom incoming-passengers list, signed by the ship's master, indicates S.S. Pretorian in his hand; but records inexplicably seem to more consistently indicate Caledonia. In the incoming-passengers list it is noted that the Pottses travelled as Saloon (i.e. first class) passengers; he is listed only as "S. Potts".

The passenger list for the S.S. La Savoie, arriving in New York 23 November 1920, having sailed from La Havre, France, 13 November, lists Valerie Potts with her children, John and Florence. Valérie's passport number is given as W. 139290. Their residence is listed as 178 Yonkers Ave., Yonkers, New York. Interestingly, the line item for John has the remark under place of birth, "Parotiditis" [sic] crossed out and "Bklyn NY" [Brooklyn, New York] written in. Presumably, the crossed-out comment refers to peritonitis; why it was crossed out is unclear, as in other places on the passenger manifest an individual's affliction may be noted in this space.

Another item of interest from the La Savoie passenger list is an individual listed on another page, who may be a relation to Valérie (or more properly, Valérie's adoptive parents): Lydie Zolotnitzky, aged 18, single, a Russian citizen of Jewish extraction, then residing in Paris, France, is listed as enroute to Yonkers, New York. She listed for the name and address of her nearest relative in the country from which she had come, "aunt Van der steen 81 av. de la Bourdonnais Paris" (sic, as typed in the clerk's manifest). The aunt could be Valérie's adoptive mother, known to this genealogy only as "Madame van der Steen"; and if so, this provides a residential address for her, perhaps the same address at which Valérie had lived.

Family historical notes indicate that Valérie died when her youngest child was about three years old. However, the child, Florence Potts, was four years of age when she arrived with her mother in New York aboard the S.S. La Savoie in November 1920 [see above]. (Valérie and her children were not included in the 1920 U.S. census with Samuel Warren Potts as apparently they were overseas at the time, although they nonetheless should have been recorded.)

Correction
For
It is not clear exactly what jobs Earle Smith worked on at this time; his résumé indicates only that he was employed by the Salt Lake Basin Office of the U.S. Bureau of Reclamation. The 1930 U.S. census indicated that he was a dam inspector. (The present-day Rockport Reservoir, near to Coalville, was not built until 1957.

Read
As noted farther below (see p. II-458), Earle Smith was listed in the 1930 U.S. census for Coalville, Summit Co., Utah, in error as "Earl E. Covington". His occupation was listed there as "Inspector ~~Echo Dam~~ Dam" (other men in this census of Coalville were similarly indicated to have worked at Echo Dam, but the entries were likewise crossed out and modified). Although the original information did not conform to the style that the census taker should have used, and was later modified to read only "dam", we fortunately have in the original entry an indication where Earle Smith was working at the time while with the U.S. Bureau of Reclamation. Echo Dam was built 1927-1931 as part of the Weber Basin Project. It is a zoned earthfill structure 158 feet high, one mile upstream on the Weber River from Echo, Utah, six miles from Coalville. The dam impounds Echo Lake.

Regarding the work for the U.S. Bureau of Public Roads in Yellowstone National Park, I contacted the Yellowstone Research Library in 2010 to ascertain whether some indication might be had as to what roads or surveys might have been done at the time when Earle Smith worked there. September–December due to the weather and snow cover. According to the Superintendent's Annual Report for 1927, quite a bit of road maintenance was conducted, although surely during the summer months.

Chapter 8 of the Historic Resource Study on "The History of the Construction of the Road System in Yellowstone National Park, 1827-1966 and the History of the Grand Loop and Entrance Roads" focuses on "The Bureau of Public Roads and the National Park Service". The year 1926 brought to a close a three-year program of projects in the park, when the park began planning for a five-year program "based upon a survey of all of the roads in Yellowstone with the exception of Cooke City and Mount Washburn roads". Funding restrictions, however, dictated that "only the very worst road sections in the Park would be reconstructed and that most of the old Army bridges would have to be retained". Roads of greatest concern were identified, but it seems that lack of funding did not allow work on them for several years more.

The history just cited does not provide any substantive information regarding the 1927 work in the park, beyond an experiment oiling program as a means to reduce dust, which was conducted during the summer months. It is possible that preliminary surveys were conducted on roads of highest concern with regard to public safety, but inasmuch as many of these are in high passes in or approaching the park it seems unlikely that the work in which Earle Smith participated would have worked in these locations. Thus, aside from determining from exact records, such as those of the U.S. Bureau of Roads in the national archives, it may not be possible to determine what work was conducted at this time.

Emendation

Delete the following paragraph:

In all probability, Earle Smith resided in the bachelor engineers' quarters in Boulder City, which were reasonably comfortable accommodations compared to the crowded barrack dormitories where lived thousands of dam workers. Although many workers brought their wives and families to live in hasty government housing under often sweltering summer conditions in Boulder City, Earle Smith did not bring his wife, Dorothy; she probably returned to her native Denver while Earle was at Hoover Dam, although we have no record of that now. His daughter, Elisabeth, remained in Philadelphia, where she was in the care of her maiden aunt, Mabel Smith, as she had been since soon after her birth.

Replace with the following:

Many Hoover Dam workers brought their wives and families to live in hastily constructed government housing in Boulder City, under often sweltering summer conditions. Previously it had been thought that Earle Smith's wife did not accompany him to the dam project, but evidence to the contrary has been found that indicates that Dorothy Smith was present during the entire time (or nearly so) that her husband was on the construction project. Rustic living conditions during the earliest phases of the Boulder Canyon Project would not have been a deterrent to Dorothy, as her proclivity for such activities is noted elsewhere in this genealogical entry for Earle Smith. Earle's daughter by his first marriage, Elisabeth, then of school age, did remain in Philadelphia, where she was in the care of her maiden aunt, Mabel Smith, as she had been since soon after birth.

"Op Stoneman" may refer to Operation Stoneman, a series of military investigations into the effects of radiological contamination on humans. Exposure tests with volunteer human subjects were conducted in many locales, including Camp Stoneman in Pittsburg, California. Some sources indicate that the Camp Stoneman investigations began in 1956 under the U.S. Navy, but it is possible that WO Smith referred to other, preliminary tests in 1950 that may be overlooked in summaries of radiation experiments involving humans. Note specifically that she was assigned to a "Casual O[fficer] Co.", which normally refers to personnel enroute between assignments or working without specific designation. 18 ii. Dorothy Drummond, born about 1935 in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. She married Jarvis.
19 iii. Robert K. Drummond, born about 1939 in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania.

Notes

At the time of the 1930 U.S. census, Robert W. Drummond was an investment broker, single, then residing with his parents.

At the time of the death of Winslow Drummond, II (2005), Robert K. Drummond resided in Milwaukee, Wisconsin; and Dorothy Drummond Jarvis in West Palm Beach, Florida.

Generation 4

17. Winslow[4] Drummond, II (Robert W.[3], Winslow[2], George[1]) was born about 1933 in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania; died 2005. He married Katherine Pace.

Children of Robert Drummond and Dorothy are:

20 i. Judith Louann[5] Drummond. She married Covert.
21 ii. Kathryn Winslow Drummond. She married Brown.
22 iii. Mary Katherine McCarthy Drummond.
23 iv. Kevin McCarthy Drummond.
24 v. Sean McCarthy Drummond.
25 vi. Winslow Shaw Drummond, II.
26 vii. Michael McCarthy Drummond.

Winslow Drummond, II (ca. 1933–2005) earned a degree in history from Wooster College, and a degree in law from Duke University where he was editor of the Law Review and graduated at the top of his class. He practiced for 48 years, 25 years with the firm of Wright, Lindsey and Jennings, in Arkansas. His obituary notice indicated that he also had nine grandchildren and two great-grandchildren, but at this time the parents and marriages have not been determined in this genealogy.

At the time of the death of Winslow Drummond, Judith Louann Covert resided in Wichita, Kansas; Kathryn Winslow Brown in Stoke Ferry, Norfolk, England; Mary Katherine McCarthy Drummond in Jacksonville, Florida; Kevin McCarthy Drummond in San Francisco, California; Winslow Shaw Drummond, II, in Charleston, South Carolina; Michael McCarthy in Sarasota, Florida.

Greenlee Family Collateral Genealogy

Addition

The quarrystone business of Greenlee and Sons is cited in several newspaper accounts during 1900-1901 for having won the contract for the stone and brickwork on the El Paso County Court House, in Colorado Springs, Colorado. The accounts follow the discovery of stone supply that was mechanically and aesthetically unsuited for the courthouse and how it delayed completing the structure. The white building stone was supplied by the Kerr Stone Company from quarries along the Arkansas River and the Denver and Rio Grande Railroad. However, it was discovered to quickly and inconsistently weather due to the quarrying methods and the nature of the stone itself. (>>"Greenlee Has the Court House Contract", Gazette-Telegraph [Colorado Springs], 7 Dec 1900; "Greenlee's Contract Should Now Be Done", 19 Jun 1901; "Will Put Up Money. People Willing to Pay the Price of Good Stone for Court House and Don't Want Anything Else", 23 May 1901.)

In addition, one article adds an historical note relating to the firm of Greenlee and Sons ("Greenlee Has the Court House Contract", Gazette-Telegraph [Colorado Springs], 7 Dec 1900):

> While this firm has its headquarters in Denver it is practically a Colorado Springs institution the red rock quarries between Colorado City and Manitou in what is known as Red canon, having been opened by Mr. Greenlee 13 years ago and still being owned and operated to some extent by the firm.

Correction and Addition

Robert Greenlee is noted as "Robert C. It also notes that his will had not been located, but "which was found a few days ago by Mrs. Greenlee, in the pocket of an overcoat worn by her husband." (>>"Greenlee Inherits Money. Addition

A newspaper account in 1901 notes injuries to John R. Greenlee while riding a bicycle. He was an uncle to Dorothea Greenlee (later the wife of Earle C. Smith). The newspaper reported (Gazette-Telegraph [Colorado Springs], 2 Jul 1901):

> J. R. Greenlee Was Badly Injured
> While riding a bicycle past the corner of Cascade avenue and Huerfano street last evening, J. R. Greenlee, of No. 307[?] South Weber street, collided with a team, was knocked fromhis wheel and run over. He was seriously, but not fatally injured.

rapidly at the time. The team was driven by A. P. Gregory. As the collision occurred Greenlee fell under the wheels of the vehicle, a tourist carriage. He was run over before the driver could stop the horses.

When the injured man was picked up he was unconscious. The police ambulance was summoned and he was conveyed to his home. Two doctors who were sent for to attend him found that his right arm was broken above the wrist, the wrist was dislocated and he had an ugly scalp wound, besides many bruises.

Policeman Shelby arrested the driver of the team which ran over the wheelman. He will be given a hearing today, charged with reckless driving.

5. James S. Greenlee (ca. 1868–)

Addition

A newspaper account several months after the death of his father gives his name as James G. Greenlee, with a residence at 922 Monroe Ave., Colorado Springs, Colorado. (>>"Greenlee Inherits Money. Local Man Will Get Part of Estate Left by His Father", Gazette-Telegraph [Colorado Springs], 29 Feb 1908.)

A newspaper account in 1900 briefly notes a quarry accident in which James Greenlee was severely injured. He was an uncle to Dorothea Greenlee (later the wife of Earle C. Smith). The newspaper reported (Gazette-Telegraph [Colorado Springs], 17 Aug 1900):

Jas. S. Greenlee Dangerously Hurt

While operating a drill in the quarry of the Kenmuir Quarry company west of Colorado city, yesterday morning at 8 30 [?] o'clock, James S. Greenlee, a member of the company, was severely injured about the head by the drill becoming disconnected. He lapsed into unconsciousness immediately and was in that condition most of the day yesterday and last night having only a few rallying spells. Dr. Campbell of this city and Dr. Winternits of Colorado City dressed the wounds and last night the latter reported that the injured man had a chance to live but there was a fear in the other direction. The physician stated that the injuries were of a very serious nature.

Addition

James Greenlee apparently survived the accident noted above. A newspaper account in 1917 indicates that he was once mayor of Colorado City and that he was running for office as Commissioner of Public Works. (>>"Greenlee For Commissioner", Gazette-Telegraph [Colorado Springs], 25 Jul 1917.)

Montgomery Family
Collateral Genealogy
(3 descendants)

The genealogy of the Montgomery family, as it relates to our Smith lineage and as currently understood, is as follows:

Descendants of Herbert R. C. Montgomery

Generation No. 1

1. Herbert R. C.[1] Montgomery was born December 1855 in England. He married Bertha Angeline Tesson, daughter of Frank Tesson and Emily Barncastle. She was born February 1860 in Illinois.

Children of Herbert Montgomery and Bertha Tesson are:

2 i. Eva Angeline[2] Montgomery, born April 1882 in Illinois; died 08 April 1952 in Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania. She married Rev. Gaston.

3 ii. Herbert Frank Montgomery, born 23 June 1883 in Alton, Illinois; died 30 July 1934 at 4951 Walton Ave., Philadelphia, Pennsylvania.

Generation No. 2

3. Herbert Frank[2] Montgomery (Herbert R. C.[1]) was born 23 Jun 1883 in Alton, Illinois, and died 30 July 1934 at 4951 Walton Ave., Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. He married Elouise Smith 09 June 1915 at 820 South St. Bernard Street, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, daughter of John Smith and Ella Seville. She was born 03 May 1891 at 520 Greensborough St., Easton, Talbot Co., Maryland, and died 31 August 1979 at 24 Halcyon Dr., Garfield Park, New Castle, New Castle Co., Delaware.

Corrections
Two revisions, as follows.

[Revision 1, page II-512]

1. Frank[1] Tesson was born October 1834 in Missouri. He married Emily Barncastle, daughter of John Barncastle. She was born June 1838 in Pennsylvania.

Children of Frank Tesson and Emily Barncastle are:

+	2	i.	Bertha Angeline[2] Tesson, born February 1860 in Illinois.
	3	ii.	John Tesson, born about 1862 in Illinois.
	4	iii.	Frank Barncastle Tesson, born 14 January 1866 in La Crosse, Wisconsin; died 07 May 1915 in sinking of R.M.S. Lusitania in the Irish Sea. He married Alice E. Lowe; born 1853, from Venice, Madison Co., Illinois; died 07 May 1915 in sinking of R.M.S. Lusitania in the Irish Sea.
	5	iv.	Lillian Duncan Tesson, born about 1872; died after February 1924.

NOTES

1. Frank Tesson (ca. 1832–)

Occupations of Frank Tesson (from U.S. censuses):
1860: River pilot
1870: Steamboat pilot
1880: Mississippi River steamboat pilot
1900: River pilot

Residences of Frank Tesson (from U.S. censuses):
1880, 1900: Alton, Madison Co., Illinois

At the time of the 1880 U.S. census, the Frank Tesson household included an 8-year-old niece, Mary Tesson, who parents are indicated to have been born in Missouri.

At the time of the 1900 U.S. census, the Tesson family also had residing in their household their daughter and son-in-law, Bertha and Herbert R. C. Montgomery, and their children Herbert and Eva Montgomery. Also residing in the household were daughter and son-in-law Lillian and James McKinney. See the Montgomery Family collateral genealogy for information about this family. James McKinney is listed in the 1900 census as a glass blower.

Generation No. 2

2. Bertha Angeline[2] Tesson (Frank[1]) was born February 1860 in Illinois. She married Herbert R. C. Montgomery about 1880. He was born December 1855, from Lancashire, England, and died between 1900-1910.

Children of Bertha Tesson and Herbert Montgomery are:

	7	i.	Eva Angeline Montgomery, born April 1882 in Illinois; died 08 April 1952 in Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania. She married Rev. Gaston.
+	6	ii.	Herbert Frank[3] Montgomery, born 23 June 1883 in Alton, Illinois; died 30 July 1934 at 4951 Walton Ave., Philadelphia, Pennsylvania.

[Children originally listed out of order.]

NOTES

The middle name of Bertha Tesson (ca. 1859–) [No. 2] has also been given as “Angelic”.

Hebert R. C. Montgomery (1855–1900/1910), husband of Bertha Tesson, immigrated to the U.S. in 1869. Thus far he has not been located in the 1870 or 1880 U.S. censuses.

Munger Family
Collateral Genealogy

The genealogy of the Munger family, as it relates to our Smith lineage and as currently understood, is as follows:

Descendants of Charles P. Munger

Generation No. 1

1. Charles P.[1] Munger was born about 1841 in Wisconsin. He married Vestella P. Poindexter (widow Ridgway). She was born in 1844 in Massachusetts; died 1877.

Children of Charles Munger and Vestella Poindexter are:

	2	i.	Edward[2] Munger, born about 1870 in Kansas.
+	3	ii.	Louis P. Munger, born about 1872 in Kansas.
	4	iii.	Leroy Munger, born about 1875 in Kansas.
	5	iv.	Sarah Munger, born about 1877 in Indiana.

NOTES

At the time of the 1870 U.S. census, Charles P. Munger resided in Arvonia, Osage Co., Kansas; at the time of the 1880 census he was in Orleans, Orange Co., Indiana. He was a carpenter.

Generation No. 2

3. Louis P.[2] Munger was born about 1872 in Kansas. He married about 1895 Edith. She was born about 1867 in Michigan.

Child of Louis Munger and Edith is:

6 i. Robert Cushway[3] Munger was born 20 February 1904 in Hart, Michigan; died 12 November 1960 in Hart, Michigan. He married Elizabeth Mack.

[1361] The format of this report differs from the genealogical report style previously used in this genealogy. The Family Tree Maker software used to generate all previous reports was upgraded without realizing that the manufacturer had redesigned its report structures, offering no means by which to revert to that earlier version. The new report structure cannot be imported into a word processor without also bringing with it unsatisfactory and faulty formatting. The format presented here includes adept and repetitive editing to remove some of the unappealing features of the automatically generated file. Also take note that the new format does not separately enumerate every descendant; rather, only those individuals who themselves have children are given a continuing number, which is in discord with the format of the main part of this genealogy. The manufacturer gives no reasons for the changes nor offers a resolution that restores the breadth of previously available functions. —Earle Spamer

In the genealogical data for the first three individuals (77. Clinton James Van Zyverden; 78. Edith Van Zyverden; 79. Margaret Van Zyverden), the marriage individuals are mistakenly duplicated. In each occurrence, one entry has sparse or uncertain data, while the other (correct) entry has fuller data. Thus the following names should appear only once: Mary Ann Grove (m. Clinton James Van Zyverden), Stephen Rose (m. Edith Van Zyverden), Calvin Acton Odhner (m. Margaret Van Zyverden).

Doushkess Family
Collateral Genealogy

1. Jacob Doushkess was born September 1865 in Kowna, Russia [Kovna, Lithuania]. He married (1) Annie about 1889 in Russia [Lithuania?]. She was born April 1872 in Russia [Lithuania?]; died between 1910–1920 in New York. He married (2) Esther Gordow[?] between 1910–1920. She was born about 1875 in Minsk, Russia [Belarus].

Children of Jacob Doushkess and Annie are:

2 i. Victor Hugo Doushkess, born 27 June 1895 in New York; died 14 November 1966; he married Ruby Margaret Graham 28 December 1920 in Chestertown, Maryland.

3 ii. William Doushkess, born March 1898 in New York.

Child of Jacob Doushkess and Esther is:

4 i. Florence E. Doushkess, born 16 March 1903 in Springfield, Massachusetts; died 23 February 1993 in New York. [Adopted child of Jacob Doushkess.]

NOTES

Jacob Doushkess (1865–)

Jacob Doushkess and his relatives were Yiddish.

Residences of Jacob Doushkess (from U.S. censuses and other sources):
1900 census: 158-160 Attorney St., Manhattan, New York, New York
1920 census, and 1923 passport application: 611 W. 152nd St., Manhattan, New York, New York

Jacob Doushkess was a printer.

Jacob Doushkess immigrated to the U.S. in 1891 (according to the 1900 U.S. census), or August 1893 (according to his 1923 passport application), or 12 September 1892 (according to the passport application of his daughter, Florence, in 1924). (Also, according to the 1910 census, the record for Annie Doushkess indicates that she had immigrated in 1890.

Jacob Doushkess has not been located in the 1910 census despite numerous exhaustive searches. It is not clear where he might have resided when his wife was hospitalized and the children were with the woman he would later marry.

According to the application for a U.S. passport issued 6 April 1923 (and likewise according to a passport application made by his daughter, Florence, in 1924), Jacob Doushkess became a naturalized citizen on 24 April 1903.

A U.S. passport was issued to Jacob Doushkess on 6 April 1923. He expected to depart from New York on 1 May 1923 to visit England, France, Austria, and Poland, apparently to visit relatives in Poland.

Annie Doushkess (1872–1910/20)
(wife of Jacob Doushkess)

At the time of the 1910 U.S. census, Annie Doushkess is listed as a patient in the Montefiore Home and Hospital for Chronic Invalids, Broadway and 138th St., New York, New York. She indicated in this census that he had had three children, two of whom were then alive. The identity of the deceased child is not known to this genealogy. Inasmuch as she was a patient in a long-term or end-of-life care facility, and that Jacob Doushkess was in 1920 married to the divorcée Esther Gordow[?], it is presumed that Annie Doushkess died during 1910–1920.

Esther Gordow[?] Doushkess (ca. 1875–)
(wife of Jacob Doushkess)

She is listed in the 1910 U.S. census as Esther Gordow[?], divorced; presumably Gordow[?] is her married name. Residing with her at that time were her daughter, Florence, and the brothers Victor Doushkess and William Doushkess. Together they all resided in the household of John and Annie Finkes[?]; he was an apartment house janitor.

Referred page numbers pertain to the original, printed version of this genealogy. Occasional (but infrequent) one-page variations may be noted between the digital and printed versions, but this does not affect the proper function of hyperlinks within the digital version. This copy was printed on 8 June 2011.

She indicated that she had immigrated into the U.S. in 1890.

Florence E. Doushkess (1903–1993)

Florence E. Doushkess, daughter of Esther who was the second wife of Jacob Doushkess, seems to have been given, or took, the surname of her stepfather. She refers to him as her father on a passport application in 1924.

A U.S passport was issued to Florence E. Doushkess on 6 June 1924. She expected to depart from New York on 9 July 1924 aboard the S.S. Aquitania to visit England, France, Switzerland, Germany, Italy, Austria, and Latvia on tour. At that time she resided with her father at 611 W. 152nd St., New York, and she was a teacher.

At the time of her death, Florence E. Doushkess resided in New York, New York.

NEW EDITION

Containing Additions & Corrections to June 2011
and with* Illustrations

Earle E. Spamer

2008 / 2011

Note

The "New Edition" includes hyperlinks embedded in boxes throughout the main genealogy. They will, when clicked in the computer's web-browser environment, automatically redirect the user to the pertinent additions, emendations and corrections that are compiled in the separate "Additions and Corrections" section.

Boxed alerts look like this: Also see Additions & Corrections [In the event that the PDF hyperlink has become inoperative or misdirects, refer to the appropriate page number as listed in the Additions and Corrections section.]

The "Additions and Corrections" document is appended to the end of the main text herein and is separately paginated using Roman numerals. With a web browser on the user's computer the hyperlinks are "live"; the user may switch back and forth between the main text and pertinent additions, corrections, or emendations. Each part of the genealogy (Parts I and II, and Appendices 1 and 2) has its own "Additions and Corrections" section.

The main text of the New Edition is exactly identical to the original edition of 2008; content and pagination are not changed. The difference is the presence of the boxed "Additions and Corrections" alerts, which are superimposed on the page and do not affect text layout or pagination. The reason why the text itself was not updated is because the Comprehensive Index, more than 300 pages, is keyed to the original edition.

The alert notices will print if you print from the main genealogy, which you may then use with a printed copy of the "Additions and Corrections".

The CD (or DVD) containing digital copies of this genealogy also includes documents that were not originally available when the genealogy was prepared in 2008. See the Disk Content Guide.

Special Note Regarding Pagination*: The boxed "Also see Additions & Corrections" alerts are placed where they are needed in the main text. Upon reading the "Additions and Corrections", however, the page number indicated for the emendation may (very infrequently) be off by one page as compared to where the boxed alert is placed. For example, a text comment in the "Additions & Corrections" may refer to page 58, but the corresponding alert box, in its proper place in the text, may be on page 59.

The cause of these minor offsets, when they do occur, is due to the fact that different versions of one word processing programs were used to create some of the new additions and corrections. These different versions occasionally altered page breaks and footnote placements that affected the page layout. The effect is not cumulative through the document; occurrences of offset page notations are very infrequent.

In similar fashion, the "Comprehensive Index" that was created from the original edition of 2008, for use principally with the printed versions of this document, likewise may experience infrequent one-page offsets between page numbers cited and actual page numbers.

Illustration pages in this document were originally prepared for placement within the printed version, which was produced on double-sided sheets. In repositioning them in this digital document, pagination for these illustration pages may not follow perfectly in order; for example, illustration page 28A may precede page 28. The illustration pages appear in proper positions in this digital document.

Introduction to Appendix 1

Our MARTEL AND BLOUIN FAMILIES emigrated from Québec, Canada, to the New England section of the United States during the late 1800s and early 1900s. Of the Blouin family, nothing has been determined regarding its origins, presumably in France. The Martel family, from France, traces its American origins to Honoré Martel dit Lamontagne and Marguerite Mireault, both of France, who married in Québec in 1668.

The early part of the Blouin lineage, and all of the Martel lineage up to the late 1800s, as listed in these genealogies, are from the genealogical work of André Martel of Montréal, who provided this information in 2004. Information about some of the more recent Martel relations, including the Labrie family, were sent to me by Sharon (Martel) Latture of Dover, New Hampshire. Also see Additions & Corrections

While Blouin is not a too common surname, still relatively little is known about them in our family. This is due to the few number of Blouins who seem to have come to the U.S. at the time when Arthur Blouin (my grandfather) arrived, and the fact that he died young. Martel, on the other hand, is a common name. Many of the modern Martels, particularly of Québec, can trace their ancestry to 17th century progenitor and immigrant, Honoré Martel dit Lamontagne, whose extensive descendancy is widely acknowledged.

Despite a broad understanding of some lineages, like the Martels, the current sketches depend upon the inferential reliability of previously researched data, and thus they must be treated as a working document, which future genealogists and historians can use as a baseline for further scrutiny. This is a tool, not gospel. Much of it is reliable, but inasmuch as portions of it rely upon data that may not necessarily have been correct, or perhaps adopted from an unwitting misstep in the research of public records, the user should be alert to the possibility of error.

At the other end of genealogical research—the tips of the branches—there is a profusion of living individuals about whom only names and dates (and sometimes only names) are given here. The modern generations are the most troublesome for a current genealogy; they constantly grow, and the tree is forever outdated. The children, grandchildren, even great-grandchildren of living individuals are so numerous and far-flung that the very existence of some of them are not known to a genealogy's compiler. The task of making the genealogy "current" by ensuring that the present generations are complete, and by adding the next generations, will have to be another person's work. The current genealogy is more useful for understanding the individuals and structure of the family tree about through the mid-20th century.

That much said, I feel that it is necessary to insert subjective comments about the reliability of some of the data presented here; these will be found throughout the genealogy. My comments on the data provided by the family genealogists are based on my understanding of their relationship to their family sources and the capability of the researchers who provided details from archived public records. My own additions, which take up a large portion of the genealogy, are based on records searches made in publications but taken substantially from Internet websites, which include public records as well as personal data provided by independent genealogical researchers. I discuss my sources of data more fully in the Introduction.

Genealogical research, especially in the years prior to the development of the Internet that made available tremendous resources of the World Wide Web, was a painstaking process. It required exhaustive correspondence with relations and descendants, in addition to public records searches with the benefit only of published and card file indices.

Finally, a note about Lowell, Massachusetts is in order here, rather than at an arbitrary place in the explanatory notes in the genealogy that follows. The city is important in the history of New England, for its position as an important commercial center as a heavily industrialized textile mill town and for its cultural position in the rights of laboring workers. Henry David Thoreau called Lowell the "Manchester of America", referring to the hugely prosperous (and equally polluted and enslaving) mill town of England. So much American history revolves around Lowell, its merchant magnates and teeming mills, that it will suffice to point out that now a large portion of the downtown area of Lowell is administered by the National Park Service as the Lowell National Historical Park. The Park Service's museum exhibit depicts the eras of change in Lowell, which serve here as a superficial summary of the city's development:[1]

> Dawn of an Era (1790–1823). This exhibit portrays the factors which contributed to the transformation of East Chelmsford into the industrial city of Lowell.
> Wheels of Change (1790–1893) . . . tracing the 19th century development of the United States economy form an agrarian, decentralized system to an industrial capitalist system, and the conflicts that ensued.
> Lowell's Heyday (1823–1924). This large section features machinery, products, and profiles of mill workers as it interprets Lowell's golden era . . . . View original machines that interpret the cotton manufacturing process form raw cotton to finished cloth.
> Lowell in Decline (1924–1974) . . . the decline and closing of Lowell's textile mills.
> Lowell Today (1980–).

Almost every family member who is noticed here as having worked in the mills labored in one or more of several huge mills that lined the Merrimack River, the so-called "Mile of Mills". They were here during the peak of the "heyday", and their migration away from Lowell or move to farming occupations is noticeably coincident with the end of that era in the 1920s. However, in just which mills an individual worked is not now known.

[1] Quoted from "Boott Cotton Mills Museum Guide", Lowell National Historical Park brochure, acquired 2005.

Ironies abound in comparing or imagining the differences between the mill town of a century ago to today. Some of the mills, including the historic Boott Cotton Mills, have been converted into condominiums, commanding costs that would have been unimaginable to the workers who toiled and were sickened in what now are living rooms and bedrooms with views of the Merrimack River. The National Park Service operates the Boott Cotton Mills Museum in a part of the old mill, which includes a raucous operating weave room. Ear plugs are offered to visitors, unlike anything even considered for our ancestors. Even so, only a few looms work at a time; the cacophony and racket of a century ago remain out of reach of our senses. The air has none of the fine mist of cotton fibers that mill workers breathed during long days. In the museum's gift shop a few woven products of the Park Service looms are sold—trinkets as compared to the huge bolts woven by the ton a century ago. The sight of a few uniformed National Park Service workers operating the looms (where once had worked hundreds) caps the incongruous nature of this working museum. Despite the pared down correspondences, the Park Service's museum is a fair way to imagine a little bit of the conditions under which our ancestors worked.

Family photo albums and boxes of loose photos (now organized and cataloged) have documented many of the people, places, and times of the Martel and other families who immigrated to the environs of the mill town of Lowell, Massachusetts, where they resided also in nearby New Hampshire. Although efforts were made by Earle Spamer to identify some of these photos with his mother and grandmother during the 1960s–1970s, many of the identifications were by then lost to memory. Yet the photos still record times and places that are long gone, and they are of historical and cultural interest. Some of the unidentified photographs—all of which once had significance to members of the family and are now forgotten—are shown on the following pages.

[2] Data for Martel Generations 2-9 were provided by André Martel based on records searches made by him in Québec in 2004 (correspondence, A.M. to E.E.S.). I have added a few extraneous facts from research conducted since then. Extended genealogies of most of the individuals of the early generations are omitted so as to provide the direct lineage in a more concise fashion. The ancestral connection to Jean Martel [No. 1] of France is from "Descendants of Jean Martel of Paris", located at website http://www.geocities.com/fraserclangeo/nti01128.htm (accessed 8 Mar 2004). Numerous sources in addition to the data provided by André Martel also partly corroborated this genealogy, including the website http://www. grandesfamilies.org/martel (accessed 8 Mar 2004).

Generation No. 3

3. Honoré[3] Martel dit Lamontagne (Jean[2], Jean[1] Martel) was born about 1632 in St-Eustache, Paris, France, and died 28 July 1710 in Québec. NOTES

Honoré Martel dit Lamontagne (ca. 1632–1710) [No. 3] was a soldier who emigrated from France to Gaspé aboard the ship La Brézé, sailing from La Rochelle 26 February 1664, to Guadeloupe 25 April 1665, arriving in Gaspé 30 June 1665.[3] He is generally considered to be the progenitor of many of the Martels now living in America.

Marguerite Mireault (also spelled Lamirault or L'Amirault) (ca. 1645–1706), wife of Honoré Martel dit Lamontagne, was a Fille du Roi[4], a marriageable woman sent from France to Québec.

NOTES

87. Isaïe Martel (1856–1935)
and his wives Amanda Méthot (ca. 1854–) and Philomène Beaulieu (1859–1932)

Roland Chretien pronounced his great-grandfather's name, Isaïe, as like "E.C." [6]

Another possible birth date for Isaïe Martel is about 1848 in Saint-Nicolas, Levis Co., Québec. His death notice gives his age as 79 years and 2 months. His Americanized name is given as Isiah, but thus far the only place this has been seen is in the death notice of his son, Joseph I. Martel [No. 90].

The 1881 Canadian census lists "Isai" Martel at the census place for Ste-Fortunat-de-Wolfestown, Richmond and Wolfe, Québec; his occupation is listed there as "forgeron" (blacksmith). The marriage certificate of Isaïe Martel and Amanda Méthot shows his signature as "Isai Martel", but a clerk has written it "Isaïe Martel".

According to family notes, Isaïe Martel had three sons and four daughters by Amanda Méthot (ca. 1854–) and two sons and one daughter by "Mrs. Beauliau" [sic].

All that is understood at this time regarding the parentage of Amanda Méthot, daughter of Nöel Méthot and Amanda Demers, is a direct lineage to her paternal and maternal grandparents, as follows:

> Paternal lineage:
> Nöel Méthot married Bacilice Paquet. They had one son who is now known:
> i. Nöel Méthot. He married Amanda Demers 15 July 1848 in St-Nicolas, Lévis, dio. Québec.

(Spamer 2912)

Maternal lineage:
Abraham Demers married Genevieve Carrier. They had two children who are now known:
i. Amanda Demers. She married Nöel Méthot.
ii. Pierre Demers.

Isaïe and Philomène (Beaulieu) Martel (1859–1932) emigrated from Canada to the U.S. in 1890.

The 1900 U.S. census registers this Martel family as "Martelle" and lists Isaïe Martel's birthdate as June 1854. He is indexed in this census as "Isa Martelle", but there are some census notations written over the name "Isaie" that probably led to the error.

At the time of the 1930 census, In 1930 census Isaïe and Philomene are residing with their son, Wilfred, in the same home as which they owned earlier.

Occupations of Isaïe Martel (from Canadian and U.S. censuses):
1881 Canadian census: Blacksmith
1900 U.S. census: Corder in cotton mill
1910 U.S. census: Laborer in cotton mill
1920, 1930 U.S. censuses: no occupations listed

Residences of Isaïe Martel (from U.S. censuses and other sources):
1900: New Market, Rockingham Co., New Hampshire
1910: 1 Young St., Dover, Strafford Co., New Hampshire
ca. 1918, and 1920, 1930 censuses: 7 Roosevelt Ave., Dover, Strafford Co., New Hampshire

In the 1930 census, Isaïe and Philomène Martel reside in the household of son Wilfred Martel. Isaïe's name is listed there as "Isaac".

According to Isaïe Martel's great-grandson, Roland Chretien [No. 143], Isaïe was a "master railroad boss".[7]

Isaïe Martel is buried in St. Charles Cemetery, Dover, Strafford Co., New Hampshire.

The 1900 U.S. census lists the birthdate of Philomène (Beaulieu) Martel as February 1859.

Children of Isaïe Martel

In the 1900 U.S. census, the following children are residing with Isaïe and Philomene Martel: Emma, Delina, Adelard, Leontine, Marie, Maryanne, Wilfred, and Donat.

Oliva Martel [No. 89] hired himself out as a farmhand all his life; he never married. At one time he had boarded at the Baer Farm, in Rollinsford, New Hampshire.

At the time of the 1900 U.S. census, Emma Martel (1880–) [No. 93] and Délina Martel (1881–) [No. 94] worked in cotton mills.

[7] Via telephone with Earle Spamer, 2004.

In the 1900 U.S. census, Adélard Martel (1884–) [No. 95] is listed as daughter, "Adelia". In the 1900 and 1920 censuses he is working in cotton mills. At the time of the 1920 census he is residing at home with his parents and is single. The Maine State Archives records the death of one Adelard D. Martel, 19 November 1966, in Waterville, aged 76 years (born about 1890).

At the time of the 1910 and 1920 U.S. censuses, Marianne Martel (1894–) [No. 97] was working as a spinner in a cotton mill.

88. Evelina[10] Hamel (Cleophas[9], Therese[8] Martel, Modeste[7], Paul[6], Paul[5], Paul[4], Honoré[3] Martel dit Lamontagne, Jean[2], Jean[1] Martel) was born after 1868. She married Firmin Desrochers 14 August 1899 in Ste-Croix de Lotbiniere, dio Québec.

Child of Evelina Hamel and Firmin Desrochers is:

+	100	i.	Alice[11] Desrochers.

Generation No. 11

90. Joseph Isaïe[11] Martel (Isaïe[10], Godfroi[9], Jacques[8], Joseph[7], Jacques[6], Paul[5], Paul[4], Honoré[3] Martel dit Lamontagne, Jean[2], Jean[1] Martel) was born 26 November 1876 in Québec, and died July 1962 in Mitchell Memorial Hospital, Brentwood, New Hampshire. He married Joséphine N. Arnold 25 July 1898 in Dover (St. Charles dio.), New Hampshire, daughter of Pierre Arnold and Damathilde Joyal. She was born between March-April 1877 in Ste-Edwidge-de-Clifton, Mégantic Co., dio. Sherbrooke, Québec, and died March 1948 probably near Deerfield, New Hampshire.

Children of Joseph Martel and Joséphine Arnold are:

+	101	i.	Palmina Marie[12] Martel, born 26 February 1901 in Dover, New Hampshire; died 07 February 1987 in a nursing home in Sewell, New Jersey.
	102	ii.	Lena Marie Martel, born 04 March 1902 in Dover, New Hampshire; died 22 January 1990 in St. John's Hospital, Lowell, Middlesex Co., Massachusetts. She married Eugene C. Boucher 1925 probably in Lowell, Middlesex Co., Massachusetts; born 01 August 1898 in Québec, Canada; died 05 November 1999 at Blairehouse of Tewksbury (hospice), Tewksbury, Massachusetts.
+	103	iii.	Odina Martel, born 10 July 1904; died 16 June 2000.

+	105	v.	Olia Martel, born 28 July 1908; died 22 December 2000 in Salem, Massachusetts.
	106	vi.	Dorila Martel, born 02 October 1909; died 10 January 1910.
+	107	vii.	Eva Beatrice Martel, born 04 April 1912 in Massachusetts; died 12 December 1994 in Lowell, Middlesex Co., Massachusetts.

NOTES

90. Joseph Isaïe Martel (1876–1962)

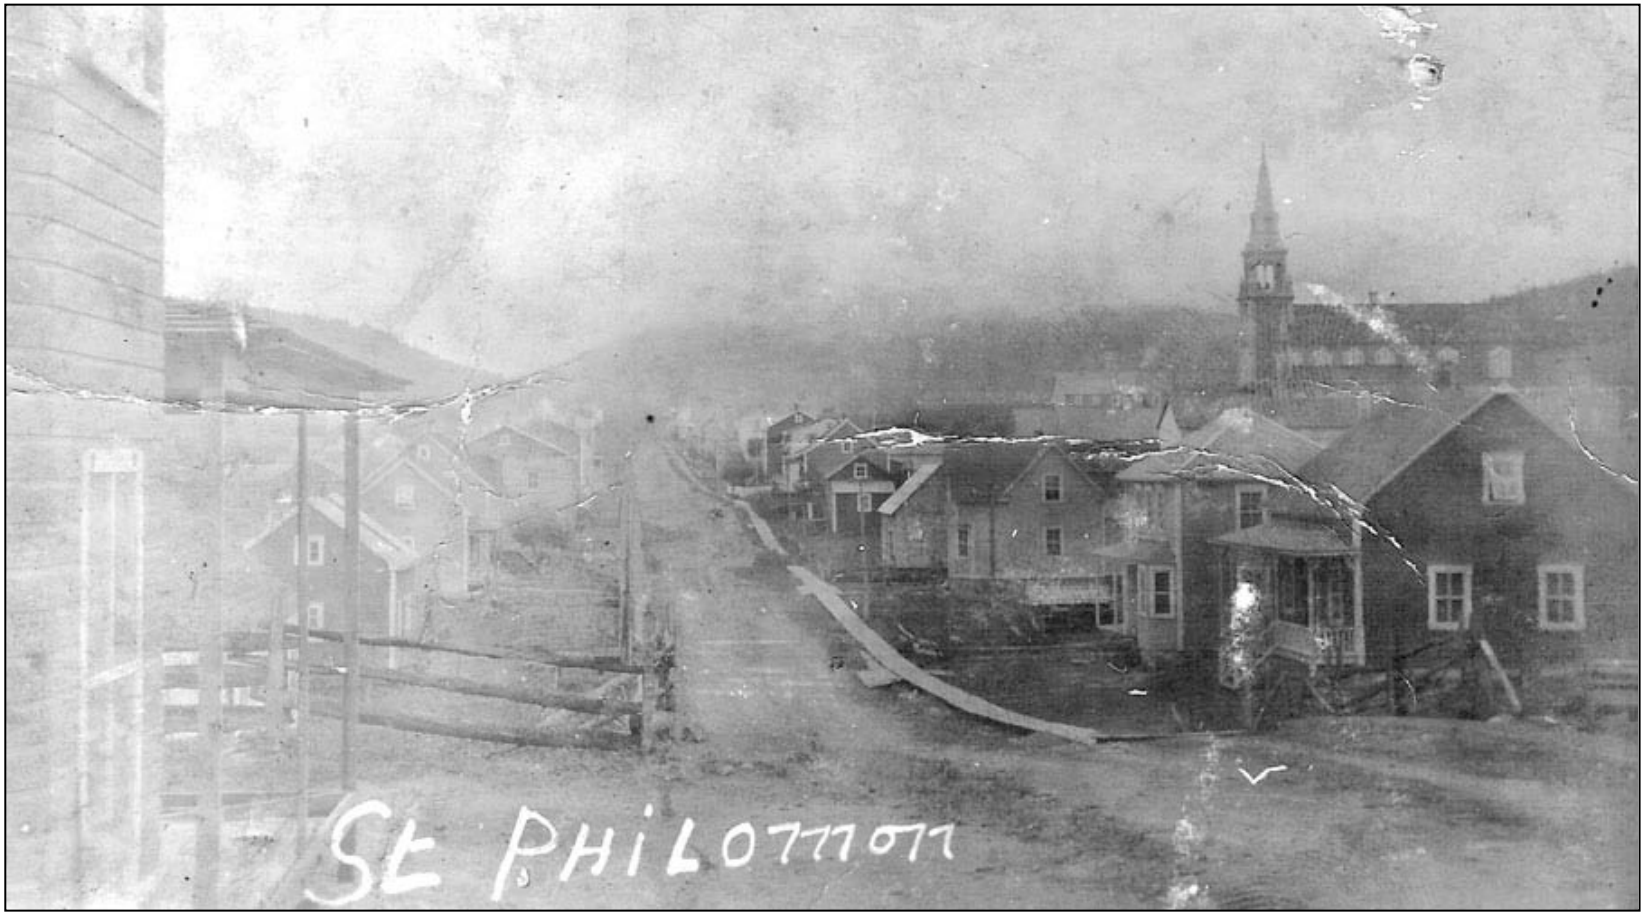
Joseph Isaïe Martel was baptized in Windsor Mills, St. Philippe parish, Richmond Co., Québec. He emigrated from Canada to the U.S. in 1894. He became a naturalized U.S. citizen in 1901.



(Spamer 1100)

St-Philémon, Bellechasse, Québec

This is the only contemporary view in family records that depicts one of the towns of Québec in which some of our Martel ancestors resided. This is presumably a commercially produced view, which was found in an album of photographs once held by Palmina Martel Kears (Earle Spamer's maternal grandmother).

A few fragments of information about Joseph Martel are known now. According to his grandson, Roland Chretien [No. 143], while still in Canada Joseph Martel and other family members ran a sawmill in the mountains near St. Julien, Québec. Chretien also mentioned that his "grandfather" ran Windsor Mills[8], but it was not clear as to which of his grandfathers he referred. Joseph Martel's mills were washed away in a flood and rebuilt. The Martels also had a store in Québec. Relatives lived in St-Philémon, Bellechasse.[9]

Occupations of Joseph Martel (from U.S. censuses and other sources):

1910: Box maker
1920: Box maker, Lamson Co. [Lowell, Massachusetts]
1942: Retired as foreman in the U.S. Mailing Case Co., Lowell, Massachusetts [from his death notice]
After 1942: Produce farmer [from his death notice]

Residences of Joseph Martel (from U.S. censuses and other sources):

1910: Lilley Ave., Lowell, Middlesex Co., Massachusetts
1920: Wollaston St., Lowell, Middlesex Co., Massachusetts
1942-ca. 1950: East St., Tewksbury, Middlesex Co., Massachusetts
ca. 1950-?: Deerfield, New Hampshire (with son, Odina)
At time of death: 189 South Rd., Deerfield, New Hampshire

The Social Security Death Index indicates that Joseph Martel was issued his Social Security card in New Jersey before 1951. He probably registered for Social Security during a trip to visit his daughter, Palmina, in Vineland, New Jersey; Earle Spamer holds photographs of Joseph and Josephine Martel while there.

The death notice for Joseph I. Martel notes that he was a former member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows. Also see Additions & Corrections

Joséphine (Arnold) Martel (1877–1948)
(wife of Joseph I. Martel)

Her given names might be Josephine Marie. She emigrated from Canada to the U.S. in 1894 and became a naturalized U.S. citizen in 1901.

Her sister, Rosanna, married Joseph Labrie; their daughter, Pauline, married Wilfred Joseph Martel [No. 98]. See the Labrie Family collateral genealogy, following the entry for Wilfred Martel [No. 98]. Of the generation of Josephine and Rosanna, only their parents and siblings are known, as follows:

[8] The locale of Windsor Mills was first known for its black-powder production; the first such plant in Quebec, established on the Watopeka River in 1864 by three American entrepreneurs. The powder plant operated until a violent explosion occurred there in 1922. The water sources attracted mills, including paper mills that continue in operation there today.

I am uncertain what Roland Chretien meant when he said that his grandfather "ran" Windsor Mills; probably that he had a mill there, but as to what kind that, too, is unknown now. (Teste Roland Chretien, via telephone conversation with Earle Spamer, 2004.)

[9] All this information received by Earle Spamer via telephone conversation with Roland Chretien, 2004. The reference to St. Philemon was in response to Spamer's inquiry regarding a commercially produced photograph of St. Philemon found in the collection of family photographs (Spamer Family Historical Photos, Group 41B, no. 1100).

Pierre[1] Arnold was born about 1831 in Québec. He married Damathilde Joyal. She was born about 1831 in Québec.

Children of Pierre Arnold and Damathilde Joyal are:

i. Charles[2] Arnold, born about 1862 in Québec.
ii. Frederick Arnold, born about 1864 in Québec.
iii. Dilima Arnold, born about 1866 in Québec.
iv. Elmira Arnold, born about 1870 in Québec.
v. Albert Arnold, born about 1872 in Québec.
vi. Joséphine N. Arnold, born between March–April 1877 in Ste-Edwidge-de-Clifton, Mégantic Co., dio. Sherbrooke, Québec; died March 1948 probably near Deerfield, New Hampshire.
vii. Rosanna Arnold, born 31 January 1880 in Prince Edward Island, Canada; died 07 February 1953 in Dover, New Hampshire.

Pierre Arnold was also known as Firmin Arnold. At the time of the 1881 Canadian census in Clifton West, Crompton, Québec, he was a farmer.

Joseph and Joséphine Martel are buried in Westlawn Cemetery, Lowell, Massachusetts (lot 102, section 5, near intersection of cemetery's F and Swan Aves.).

1930: Seamstress

The Lowell Marriage Intentions list Eugene Boucher and Lena Martel on 10 October 1925; her given name is spelled there as "Lina". Various other sources have spelled her given name as "Lina". However, my mother was raised with the Martel families when her mother left the Lowell area, and I was always intructed to write to her aunt as "Aunt Lena". Correspondence from Lena Boucher to my mother also was signed, "Lena".

She is buried in Tewsksbury Cemetery, Tewksbury, Middlesex Co., Massachusetts.

Also see Additions & Corrections

Eugene C. Boucher emigrated from Canada to the U.S. in 1919; the 1930 U.S. census indicates he immigrated in 1923, which may be in error.

Only sparse information is had regarding the parental family of Eugene C. Boucher, as follows:

The parents of Eugene C. Boucher were Napoleon Boucher (ca. 1871–) and Aurore Blie (ca. 1881–after 1956); both were born in Canada. They had only one other child who is known at this time: Edward P. Boucher (ca. 1918–), born in Canada.

Napoleon and Aurore Boucher, and their son, Edward, emigrated from Canada to the U.S. in 1923. At the time of the 1930 U.S. census, they resided at 72 Cedar St., Lynn, Essex Co., Massachusetts, in the same household with another family.

Edward P. Boucher may be the same Edward P. Boucher who is listed in the Massachusetts Death Index (who is listed as having been born in Canada on 29 October 1917; died 6 January 1996 in Rockland, Plymouth Co., Massachusetts). Also see Additions & Corrections Occupations of Eugene C. Boucher (from U.S. censuses and personal information):

ca. 1925: A photograph of him taken about 1925, but certainly after his marriage (he wears a wedding ring), shows him in a naval uniform, apparently with a Petty Officer's insignia. There is no family recollection of him having served in the Navy. His death certificate (1999) indicates under "Military Service", "None Reported". (It is possible that the photograph was taken for another reason; for example, as dressed for an acting part in a play.)

1930 U.S. census: "anything"

Most of his working career he was a chicken farmer

Residences of Eugene C. Boucher (from U.S. censuses and other sources):

1920: 24 Cabot St., Lowell, Middlesex Co., Massachusetts (he is one of seven roomers in the household of "Alphonce Thibault")

ca. 1925-1999: 893 East St., Tewsksbury, Massachusetts

Eugene C. Boucher lived to age 101. There were no children from his marriage to Lena Martel. He was buried 8 November 1999 in Tewsksbury Cemetery, Tewksbury, Middlesex Co., Massachusetts.

The Bouchers had a farm northeast of Tewksbury on East St., at the intersection of the (former) Boston & Maine Railroad track. The farm was inside the eastern, acute angle of the intersection. In addition to some crops, Eugene Boucher's principal business was chicken raising. The farm no longer exists and has been subdivided by development. At the rail crossing today (2006), a gasoline station and liquor store occupy the site of the Boucher residence; a truck dealer occupies the former farm area where the barns had stood, between the road and the railroad track. The electrical high-tension line that crossed the property in the early 1950s is still present, supplemented also by a larger, more modern line. Also still present is a line of trees that Boucher had planted along the railroad track, to help shield the house from some of the noise and soot; these trees are behind the present gas station and liquor store.

A la douce mémoire de

JOSEPH LABRIE

Epoux de Rosanna Arnold

Décédé à Dover, N. H., le 2 mai 1932 à l'âge de 55 ans, 1 mois et 26 jours.

Quand je me verrais au milieu des ombres de mort; je n'appréhenderais aucun mal, Ô mon Dieu parce que vous êtes avec moi. Ps. XXII, 4.

Nous l'avons aimé pendant sa vie, ne l'abandonnons pas à la mort jusqu'à ce que nous l'ayons conduit par nos prières dans la maison du Seigneur. S. Ambroise.

Miséricordieux Jésus, donnez lui le repos éternel. (300 jours d'ind.)

Doux coeur de Jésus, soyez mon amour. (300 jours d'ind.)

Doux coeur de Marie, soyez mon salut. (300 jours d'ind.)

Une communion, une prière, s'il vous plait.

Rosanna (Arnold) Labrie (1880–1953)
(wife of Joseph Labrie)
"Rose"

She emigrated from Quebec to the U.S. in 1892. At the time of the death of her son, Maurice, she resided at 12 Essex St., Dover, New Hampshire.

She is buried in St. Charles Cemetery, Dover, New Hampshire.

Her sister, Josephine, married Joseph Martel [No. 90 in the main Martel family genealogy]. Of the generation of Rosanna and Josephine, only their parents and siblings are known, as follows:

Pierre[1] Arnold was born about 1831 in Québec. He married Damathilde Joyal. She was born about 1831 in Québec.

Children of Pierre Arnold and Damathilde Joyal are:

i. Charles[2] Arnold, born about 1862 in Québec.
ii. Frederick Arnold, born about 1864 in Québec.
iii. Dilima Arnold, born about 1866 in Québec.
iv. Elmira Arnold, born about 1870 in Québec.
v. Albert Arnold, born about 1872 in Québec.
vi. Joséphine N. Arnold, born between March-April 1877 in Ste-Edwidge-de-Clifton, Mégantic Co., dio. Sherbrooke, Québec; died March 1948 probably near Deerfield, New Hampshire.
vii. Rosanna Arnold, born 31 January 1880 in Prince Edward Island, Canada; died 07 February 1953 in Dover, New Hampshire.

Pierre Arnold (ca. 1831–) was also known as Firmin Arnold. At the time of the 1881 Canadian census in Clifton West, Crompton, Québec, he was a farmer.

14. Albert Labrie (1901–1971)

At the time of the 1920 U.S. census he was a ship hand in a shipyard.

During World War II he served in the U.S. Army, TEC4 593rd Signal AW Battalion.

18. Rose Labrie (1909–)

At the time of the 1930 U.S. census she was a presser at the American Dye Works.

25. Maurice J. Labrie (1920–1944)

He was in the U.S. Naval Reserve, Motor Machinist's Mate 3rd Class (Service No. 7053212).

Maurice Labrie was killed in action during the Allied invasion of France on D-Day, 6 June 1944. He is buried in the Normandy American Cemetery, St. Laurent-sur-Mer, Colleville-sur-Mer, Normandie, France (Plot I, Row 24, Grave 14).[11]

[11] The Normandy American Cemetery is situated on a cliff overlooking Omaha Beach and the English Channel just east of St-Laurent-sur-Mer and northwest of Bayeux in Colleville-sur-Mer. It is administered by the American Battle Monuments Commission. Nearby, on D + 1 (7 June 1944), the first temporary American World War II cemetery in France was established by the American Graves Registration Service. After the war, when the temporary cemeteries were disestablished by the Army, the remains of the American military Dead whose next-of-kin requested permanent interment overseas were moved to a permanent cemetery site; usually it was the one that was closest to the temporary cemetery. NOTES

101. Palmina Marie Martel (1901–1987)
"Pauline"

Palmina Martel was baptized by Rev. J. J. Richard on 26 February 1901 in St. Charles Parish, Diocese of Manchester, Dover, New Hampshire. According to the baptismal record (a copy signed by Rev. Alphiri Lanzure, 21 April 1919), her godparents were Joseph Labrie and Roanna Arnold.

She was known as Palmina, but by the time she had moved to Vineland, New Jersey, with her husband, Leo Sylvester, she was using the name "Pauline". When, after the death of her third husband, Bert Kears, she resided with her daughter's family, after encouragement from family members she returned to using her given name, Palmina.

The Lowell, Massachusetts, Marriage Intentions for 1919 list Arthur Blouin and Palmina Martel during the week ended 23 August 1919. At the time of the 1920 U.S. census, Arthur and Palmina Blouin are residing at her parents' home in Lowell, Massachusetts. At the time of the 1930 census, Arthur and Palmina resided in Lowell with their daughter, Jeannette.

Occupations of Palmina (Martel) Blouin (from U.S. censuses):

1920: Twister in cotton mill

1930: Mail sorter for the [Gillette] carbonizing plant

After Arthur Blouin's death in early 1930, Palmina Blouin resided at 249 Westford St., Lowell; she is listed in the city directory then as Pauline Blouin.[13] This is the first record of her being called "Pauline", a name that she used for most of her adult life, returning to "Palmina" in the 1970s. Pauline Blouin is not listed in Lowell city directories after 1931. Just when she married Leo Sylvester is not known at this time. Leo and Pauline Sylvester lived in New York City during part of the Depression. Her daughter, Jeannette, remained in Lowell, raised by her mother's relatives. In 1935, Leo and Pauline moved to Vineland, Cumberland Co., New Jersey, where the two of them operated a tavern (Leo's Lobster House was one name) and one or two motels named "Pauline's Motel". All of these businesses were on adjacent corners at the intersection of Delsea Drive (New Jersey Rt. 47) and Sherman Ave. (Cumberland County Rt. 552), in South Vineland—the tavern on the northeast corner, the motel on the southwest corner. The motel had individual small cabins along an "L"-shaped driveway opening both to Delsea Drive and Sherman Ave., and a row of about eight connected small, one-bedroom rental apartments parallel to Delsea Drive. The apartments were a later construction, but just when they were added is not known. In the early 1950s, when the adjacent property to the west was acquired, some of the cabins were taken down, and part of a wooded area to the west was used to construct a three-sided block (open to the east) of modern motel rooms.

The Sylvesters lived in a block-shaped, single-story house on the motel property, which was elevated over a tall, enclosed basement level. By the early 1950s they had built a new ranch house on an adjacent property to the west of the motel, along the south side of Sherman Ave. The ice machine at the newer block of motel rooms was a novelty to me as a small boy. And taking the trash out to a small, open cinderblock enclosure—the incinerator—was likewise eventful for a city boy.

After Leo Sylvester's death, Pauline married Bert Kears, an electrical contractor, and continued to operate Pauline's Motel. When they retired, about 1965, they moved into one of the small apartments adjacent to the motel, until Bert Kears' death. Pauline then moved to her daughter's home at 637 Hunter St., Gloucester City, Camden Co., New Jersey, where she lived until placed in a nursing home in Sewell, New Jersey, about 1985. She died in the nursing home two years later.

Palmina (Martel) Kears is buried in Bethel Cemetery, Delsea Drive, Hurffville, Gloucester Co., New Jersey (section G, lot 2, grave 3 or 4). As of 2007 there was no marker on her grave.

The motel had been run by Palmina since after World War II, but by the mid-1960s the Kearses had retired and moved from the motel residence to the nearby small apartments that were part of the same property.

After the death of Palmina's first husband, Arthur Blouin, in 1930, Palmina married Leo Sylvester, a native of Lowell, Massachusetts, and they eventually moved to Vineland, New Jersey. Bert Kears was a native of Millville, but how he came to know the Sylvesters is not known at this time. Sometime after Leo died in 1958, Palmina married Bert Kears. After Bert's death in 1968, she moved to live with her daughter, Jeannette Spamer, in Gloucester City, New Jersey.

Original and later configurations of the restaurant and tavern operated by Leo and Palmina Sylvester on the northeast corner of Delsea Drive and Sherman Ave.

It was here that Jeannette L. Blouin met her future husband, Edward L. The engineers unit was building the Millville Army Air Station. (See Part I: Spamer Family).

The advertisement on the reverse reads, "Leo and Pauline's Lobster House Sherman Avenue, Delsea Drive Half Way between Vineland and Millville — New Jersey — Tel. 147-R-1 Route 47 If it Swims We Have It".

(Spamer 752)

(Spamer 1420)

After World War II, Leo and Palmina Sylvester built a new motel on the southwest corner of Delsea Drive and Sherman Ave., which Palmina ran as Pauline's Motel. It first was a series of small, individual cabins (at left, seen under construction, and in the two center photos seen in use). The motel continued in operation until Palmina and her third husband, Bert Kears, sold it and retired ca. 1965. (Center, left, view westward from in front of the motel office.)

After Palmina and Bert Kears retired ca. 1965 and sold Pauline's Motel, they moved into one of the small apartments adjacent to the motel. At right is their apartment, in a photo taken 30 December 1967. It may be the third doorway as seen in the center photo.

Carol Spamer and her brother, Earle, sit on the fence at the home of their grandmother and step-grandfather, Palmina and Leo Sylvester, ca. 1955. The small rancher (which no longer stands) was built on property immediately to the west of Pauline's Motel, on the south side of Sherman Ave. Sometime after the death of Leo Sylvester in 1958, Palmina moved to the residence on the motel property, where she lived with her third husband, Bert Kears.

Joseph Leo Sylvester (1895–1958)
(husband of Palmina Martel)
"Leo"

In the 1900 U.S. census, his name is given as Leorder Sylvester. He is buried in the Veterans Plot, Mount Pleasant Cemetery, Millville, Cumberland Co., New Jersey. His grave has a military marker: "Joseph L. Sylvester, Massachusetts, PVT HQ Co 326 Infantry, WWI, April 5, 1895-February 15, 1958".

Thomas Bert Kears (1905–1968)
(husband of Palmina Martel)
"Bert"

He was an electrician and electrical contractor during most of his working years. At the time of the 1920 U.S. census, he and his father, a widower, are residing in the household of his brother, Charles P. Kears, Jr.; he is listed there as "Bert T. Kears". In the 1930 census he is listed as "Michael B. Kears", but coincidental data with him indicate that this is Bert: "Michael B. Kears", aged 25, resided at 318 Foundry St., Millville, Cumberland Co., New Jersey, employed as an electrician in an electric-light company; also residing with him is his father, Charles P. Kears, aged 70, a laborer in a glass factory.[14]

[14] Millville was a glass-making center, turning out not only large-scale commercial glass productions but also specialized laboratory equipment. The city today hosts the Museum of American Glass. The town originated probably in the early 1700s when a sawmill is believed to have existed around 1720. Lumbering advanced later in the century when investors acquired what is now known as the Union Mills Tract, establishing lumber mills on the Maurice River and building a dam to store water for the mills' use. James Lee, an Irish immigrant, moved to the area in 1806 and established a glass factory, using the rich supplies of sand that occur in southern New Jersey. The expanding industry attracted immigrant workers through the 19th century. A bleachery and dye house was also founded during this time, as was an iron foundry. The records of one such pipe-manufacturing company, Cumberland Furnace, are in the papers of R. D. Wood & Co., now in the Historical Society of Pennsylvania (Collection 1176). The city was economically depressed by the middle of the 20th century, although today it seems some revival in cultural areas. (>>Wikipedia informational website, http://en.wiipedia.org; City of Millville website, http://millvillev2.Qscend.com; and "Museum of American Glass" in Wheaton Arts website, http://www.wheatonarts.org/museumamericanglass/aboutmuseum; all accessed 1 Nov 2006.) The conditions of the Millville factories by the turn to the 20th century inspired the development of child labor laws in New Jersey, where in 1900 it was common for children under the age of 15 were in meager, unhealthful employment and not in school. As noted in a 1902 report, "Many of the children in the glass works and in worsted mills are said to have been employed on 'night shifts.' If the children in state reformatories were worked half as hard as the children in the factories, there would be a perfect storm of indignation." While this referred to factories statewide, the Millville sites were certainly a portion of the statistics. (Hugh F. Fox, Hollingshead Sayres (1875–) [No. 8] was known as "Hollie".

Generation No. 4

14. Margaret[4] Sayres (Hollingshead Thomas[3], James L.[2], James[1]) was born 1907 in New Jersey. She married (1) Thomas Bert Kears about 1925, son of Charles Kears and Anna. He was born 09 March 1905 in New Jersey, and died May 1968 in Vineland, Cumberland Co., New Jersey. She married (2) Al Collingswood after 1933.

See Kears Family collateral genealogy for information relating to Margaret (Sayres) and Thomas Bert Kears and their descendants.

End of Sayres family lineage

Kears Family collateral genealogy continues:

20. Thomas Bert Kears, Jr. (1933–1985)

He, like his father, was known as "Bert".

Generation No. 3

8. Reba[3] Kears (Charles P.[2], Charles P.[1]) was born about 1913 in New Jersey. She married Otley Norbury about 1928.

Child of Reba Kears and Otley Norbury is:
21 i. Otley[4] Norbury, Jr., born about December 1928 in New Jersey.

NOTES

At the time of the 1930 U.S. census, Reba (Kears) Norbury (ca. 1913–) [No. 8] and her son were residing with her father. She was at the time a presser in a clothing plant.

In the 1930 census, Otley Norbury (Sr.), husband of Reba (Kears) Norbury, does not seem to be registered. There is an Otley Norbury, father-in-law, aged 54, widower, occupation machinist, residing in the John Moore household at 310 Maple Ave., Millville, Cumberland Co., New Jersey.

NOTES

2. Augustin Blouin (ca. 1855–after 1917) and his wife Célina (Boutin) Blouin (ca. 1856–before 1917)

At the time of the 1881 Canadian census, Augustin Blouin was a farmer.

Augustin and Célina Blouin were apparently residing in the U.S. when their 18th child, Marie Ange Yvonne Blouin, died on 10 September 1903. They may have returned to Québec.

Children of Augustin and Célina Blouin

Marie Célina Blouin (1878–1878) [No. 4] was baptized on 12 February 1878 in St-Gervais, Bellechasse Co., dio Québec. She was known as "Célina". She is buried in St-Gervais.

Marie Florida Blouin (1879–) [No. 5] was baptized on 18 May 1879 in St-Gervais, Bellechasse Co., dio Québec. She was known as "Florida". She may have emigrated to Lowell, Massachusetts, and married as Deslauriers (as noted in the 1930 U.S. census).

At the time of the 1881 Canadian census, Joseph Augustin Blouin (1880–) [No. 6] is listed as 11 months of age, born in May.

Marie Almanda Blouin (1881–) [No. 7] was baptized 23 August 1881 in St-Gervais, Bellechasse Co., dio Québec.

Joseph Omer Gaudiose Blouin (1885–) [No. 10] was baptized 23 November 1885 in St-Gervais, Bellechasse Co., dio Québec.

Marie Elise Blouin (1889–1889) [No. 13] was baptized 21 September 1889 in St-Gervais, Bellechasse Co., dio Québec.

François Xavier Blouin (1890–1969) [No. 14] was buried 28 December 1969 in St-Gervais, Bellechasse Co., dio Québec.

Joseph Napoléon Henri Blouin (1895–1895) [No. 17] was buried on 7 August 1895 in St-Gervais, Bellechasse Co., dio Québec.

The unnamed baby Blouin (1897–1897) [No. 19] was buried 27 February 1897 in St-Anselme, Bellechasse Co., dio Québec.

Joseph Léon Louis Wilfrid Blouin (1898–1898) [No. 20] was buried 14 May 1898 in St-Anselme, Bellechasse Co., dio Québec.

Marie Ange Yvonne Blouin (1899–1903) [No. 21] was buried 12 September 1903 in St-Anselme, Bellechasse Co., dio Québec.

Generation No. 3

18. Joseph Armand Arthur[3] Blouin [Arthur Blouin] (Augustin[2], François Xavier[1]) was born 15 May 1896 in St-Anselme, Bellechasse Co., dio. Québec, and died 17 July 1930 in Lowell Corporation Hospital, Lowell, Middlesex Co., Massachusetts. He married Palmina Marie Martel 31 August 1919 in Lowell, Middlesex Co., Massachusetts, daughter of Joseph Martel and Joséphine Arnold. She was born 26 February 1901 in Dover, New Hampshire, and died 07 February 1987 in a nursing home in Sewell, New Jersey.

Child of Joseph Blouin [Arthur Blouin] and Palmina Martel is:

\+ 22 i. Jeannette Leda[4] Blouin, born 12 August 1920 at 21 Hancock Ave., Lowell, Middlesex Co., Massachusetts; died 01 November 1987 at Underwood Memorial Hospital, Woodbury, Gloucester Co., New Jersey.

NOTES

18. Joseph Armand Arthur Blouin (Arthur Blouin) (1896–1930)

Arthur Blouin was baptized 15 May 1896 in St-Anselme, Bellechasse Co., dio. Québec. He emigrated from Canada to the U.S. in 1915. He apparently made his first (and only) American residence in Lowell, Massachusetts, as his death certificate (1930) indicates that he had resided in the community for 14 years.

The 1920 U.S. census indicates that Arthur Blouin was then a carpenter at a cotton mill; but the Lowell city directories list him first as a carpenter, and later as a millwright. His death certificate in 1930 indicates that he had been a machinist for the Gillette Carbonizing Plant for 12 years. This attribution of his employer may have been confused by the fact that his wife at that time worked as a mail sorter in the Gillette plant.

He died at the Lowell Corporation Hospital, which originally was founded in 1839 for the employees of the textile mills.[18] The cause of death on Arthur Blouin's death certificate is given as chronic mastoiditis, from which he had suffered since 1 April 1930, complicated by prevalent meningitis since 15 July 1930. His death certificate indicates he was buried in Westlawn Cemetery, Lowell, where he is in fact. Later family records indicate he is buried in the adjacent Edson Cemetery, an error, although the two cemeteries are adjacent and both are administered by the Lowell Department of Cemeteries. Funeral arrangements were made by the Saunders Funeral Home, 90 Westford St., Lowell.

[18] The hospital remained in the control of the Corporation until 1 Nov 1930, when the deed was transferred to the Archdiocese of Boston and the hospital was renamed St. Joseph's Hospital, under which name it operated until 1992

At the time of his death, Arthur Blouin was a member of the Lowell lodge of the Loyal Order of Moose.

Generation No. 4

22. Jeannette Leda[4] Blouin (Joseph Armand Arthur[3], Augustin[2], François Xavier[1]) was born 12 August 1920 in Lowell, Massachusetts, and died 01 November 1987 in Underwood Memorial Hospital, Woodbury, Gloucester Co., New Jersey. She married Edward Lawrence Spamer 15 March 1942 in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, son of John Spamer and Lora Smith. He was born 25 December 1909 at 1234 N. 54th St., Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, and died 10 November 1955 at "Hospital of the University of Pennsylvania", Philadelphia, Pennsylvania.

[19] The birth record of Jeannette Leda Blouin, born 12 Aug 1920, indicates that she was born at 21 Hancock Ave., thus Arthur and Palmina Blouin were residing there at that time. Arthur's occupation as listed on the certificate is "Carpenter".

Children of Jeannette Blouin and Edward Spamer are:

23 i. John Edward[5] Spamer, born 22 January 1943 at Millville Hospital, Millville, Cumberland Co., New Jersey; died 23 January 1943 at Millville Hospital, Millville, Cumberland Co., New Jersey.

24 ii. Carol Ann Spamer, born 04 July 1946 at Hahnemann Hospital, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania.

25 iii. Earle Edward Spamer, born 28 July 1952 at Hahnemann Hospital, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. He married (1) Donna J. Alvin 06 December 1977 at Church of God, Gloucester City, Camden Co., New Jersey; born 31 March 1954 at Cooper Hospital, Camden, Camden Co., New Jersey. He married (2) Jane Lou Anderson 11 February 2005 at The Franklin Institute, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania; born 17 December 1958 in New Philadelphia, Tuscarawas Co., Ohio.

NOTES

The address at which Jeannette Blouin was born was a mill workers' tenement. As noted in the Lowell city directory, the Blouins then resided at "7 rear 21 Hancock Ave."

Additions and Corrections

Hyperlinks embedded in the main genealogy will, when clicked in the computer's web-browser environment, redirect the user automatically to the pertinent additions, emendations and corrections that are compiled in this "Additions and Corrections" section.

Additions apply newly found information to particular parts of the main genealogy. Emendations rewrite parts of orginal texts. Factual errors and errors that may misconstrue meanings are corrected. Inconsequential typographical errors are not corrected.

All additions, emendations, and corrections are in order by page numbers to which they apply in the main text.

The pagination of the "Additions and Corrections" section begins with Roman numeral "i". Footnotes within this section continue the enumeration from the last number used in the main genealogy.

Bear in mind that the pagination and the enumeration of footnotes within the "Additions and Corrections" section will change from revision to revision as new material is continually added here. The content, pagination, and footnote numbers of the main part of the original genealogy do not change.

If the "Additions and Corrections" section is printed out to accompany a printed version of the main genealogy, these pages may be kept either as a separate document or they may be interleaved where appropriate within the main text of the genealogy.

Addition

Late in 2010 I came into contact with Clermont Blouin, who is working on a Blouin genealogy. At that time he provided me with a direct-line ancestry of the Blouins in our family here; and as like the Martels, the Blouins trace their American origins to one immigrant, Mery Mederic Blouin (or Bellouin dit Laviollette), who arrived in Canada in 1664 and here married Marie Carreau on 30 November 1669.

Page 19

Addition
In September 1922 two properties on Wetherbee Ave., Lowell, were transferred from Fred W. Wood to, respectively, Joseph Martel and Arthur Blouin (The Lowell Sun, 16 Sep 1922, p. 20).

As noted in Section B of this Appendix (page 62), Arthur Blouin (Joseph's son-in-law) is listed in the 1924 Lowell city directory as residing at 39 Wetherbee Ave., and in the 1926-1930 directories at 45 Wetherbee Ave. Illustrations shown in this genealogy on page 63D show the house at 45 Wetherbee Ave. under construction in 1924; one of these photos includes both Joseph Martel and Arthur Blouin in the view. It is the house at 45 Wetherbee Ave. that Arthur's daughter, Jeannette Blouin Spamer, recalled as that one built by her grandfather.

Although corroborative information is lacking at this time, one may assume that the property at 39 Wetherbee Ave. may have been that property conveyed by Fred Wood to Joseph Martel. It might have been the first property to be improved with the construction of a house, and where Arthur Blouin and family may have resided with Joseph and Josephine Martel. In 1924, the property at 45 Wetherbee Ave. then was improved, which became Arthur Blouin's home. Later, Joseph Martel removed to Tewksbury, where he became a farmer. Although the circumstances of the residences of the mid-1920s just described are conjectural (other than the real estate transfers and the addresses known for Arthur Blouin), they seem to be reasonable assumptions, given the additional evidence conveyed in family photographs and personal recollection.

Funeral services for Mrs. Josephine Martel of East street were held yesterday afternoon at 2.30 o'clock at the Farmer and Son funeral home, Lee street. Rev. Hugo Bourdeau, pastor of the Tewksbury Congregational church, officiated.

The bearers were Napoleon Chretien, Leo Myskowski, Frederick Wilkins, Arnold Martel, Roland Chretien and Eugene Boucher.

Burial was in Westlawn cemetery, Lowell, where Rev. Mr. Bourdeau conducted the committal service. Arrangements were in charge of Funderal Director H. L. Farmer and Son.

Referred page numbers pertain to the original, printed version of this genealogy. Occasional (but infrequent) one-page variations may be noted between the digital and printed versions, but this does not affect the proper function of hyperlinks within the digital version. This copy was printed on 8 June 2011.

Addition and Correction

Eugene C. Boucher (1898–1999)
(husband of Lena Martel)

A typewritten U.S. immigration record for Eugene Boucher's parents, Napoleon and Aurore Boucher, is noted at the St. Albans, Vermont, border station in 1923 (no specific date indicated). Eugene is supposed to have immigrated in 1919, although as already noted in this genealogy the 1930 U.S. census indicates that he had immigrated in 1923. In any case, Eugene did not immigrate with his parents. No pertinent immigration record has thus far been located for Eugene Boucher in any year.

The following information further emends the present genealogical entry:

In the immigration record cited above, Napoleon Boucher's "calling or occupation" is listed as "sawmill". His latest residence was in Canada, although apparently the town is listed as "NA" (confused partly by the entry from the line above, which cites a partly illegible address in New Hampshire, and about which more is noted below). The name and given for Napoleon's nearest relative in country of origin is "bro[ther] Alphonse [Boucher]", residing on Elgin Road. Napoleon and those traveling with him were enroute to Lowell, Massachusetts. Accompanying him were:

Aurore Blier Boucher, whose nearest relative in country of origin is listed only as "bro. law"
Paul Eddy Boucher, aged 5 years, 6 months, whose nearest relative in country of origin is listed only as "uncle"
Jeanette Boucher, aged [20 or 30], occupation domestic; no additional information
Blanche Boucher, aged 16; no additional information

Note that Aurore's maiden name is in this record spelled Blier, whereas in the present genealogy it is given as Blie based on information provided from another source. Either spelling may be correct.

Paul Eddy Boucher is likely to be the boy, Edward Boucher, previously noted in this genealogy as having immigrated with his parents in 1923, who is identified farther below as Edward Paul Boucher. (Note that in many French Canadian families of Catholic denomination given and baptismal names often are interchanged.)

Of note in the immigration record is the person listed immediately prior to Napoleon Boucher: Leon Beaulieu, aged 19, occupation mill hand, from Nashua, New Hampshire, enroute to Nashua. Beaulieu is the maiden name of Lena Martel's step-grandmother, the second wife of Isaïe Martel [No. 87]. This may be a coincidental name, but it is mentioned here as a possible family connection and that this Leon Beaulieu may have accompanied Napoleon and Aurore Boucher on their immigration into the U.S.

LOWELL—Mrs. Alyce C. Murphy of 1107 Middlesex street has announced the engagement of two of her daughters, Geraldine Jane and Helen Louise. Miss Geraldine has become engaged to Edward Paul Boucher, son of Mrs. Aurore Boucher of Wamesit.

She attended Lowell high, Lowell Commercial college and is employed at the works engineers department of the Lowell Ordnance plant.[20]

Mr. Boucher attended Lynn English high, Bradshaw Businss school and McGill university in Montreal. He is employed by a local concern.

The wedding will take place in June.

Miss Helen Murphy has become engaged to Frank B. Sykes, son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Sykes of 1286 Lawrence street. She attended Lowell high school where she was an adjutant in the Girls Regiment. She also attended Bradshaw Business school and is employed in the mail department at the Lowell Ordnance plant. Mr. Sykes attended Lowell high and Lowell Evening Textile school. He is employed by the Lowell Ordnance plant. Their wedding is planned for early in September.

(From The Lowell Sun, 3 Mar 1943)

Regarding the Murphy family, the following collateral lineage has been determined from U.S. census records:

Richard Murphy was born November 1867 in Ireland. He married Eliza Jennie about 1892. She was born February 1871 in Ireland.

Children of Richard Murphy and Jennie are:

\+ i. Parker F. Murphy, born November 1893 in Rhode Island.
ii. Joseph R. Murphy, born September 1896 in Rhode Island.
iii. Agnes F. Murphy, born June 1899 in Rhode Island.
iv. Ellen J. Murphy, born about 1901 in Massachusetts.

NOTES

Richard Murphy and Eliza Jennie Murphy, wife of Richard Murphy, both immigrated into the U.S. in 1889 (according to the 1900 U.S. census); or he immigrated in 1889 and she in 1891 (according to the 1910 census). By the time of the 1900 census, Richard Murphy was a naturalized U.S. citizen.

Residences of Richard Murphy (fromU.S. censuses):
1900: Lincoln, Providence Co., Rhode Island

[20] According to Wikipedia online, "The Lowell Ordnance Plant was a small arms plant operated under contract from the Remington Arms Company between 1942 and 1943. The only ordnance it produced was for caliber 50 guns." [No further information given there.]

1910: 1089 Gorham St., Lowell, Middlesex Co., Massachusetts

Occupations of Richard Murphy (from U.S. censuses):
1900: Day laborer
1910: Packer in bleachery

At the time of the 1900 census, the Richard Murphy household included his mother, Nellie Murphy, widow, born June 1846 in Ireland. She then indicated that she had had ten children, five of whom were then living.

In the 1910 census, Murphy is misindexed as "Murphey", but is spelled "Murphy" on the census sheet.

Eliza J. Murphy was known as "Jennie".

Generation 2

Parker F. Murphy was born November 1893 in Rhode Island. He married Alyce. She was born about 1897 in England.

Children of Parker Murphy and Alyce are:
+ i. Hazel Murphy, born about June 1917 in Massachusetts.
ii. Helen Louise Murphy, born about February 1920 in Massachusetts. She married Frank B. Sykes 1943 [see below]
iii. Geraldine Jane Murphy, born about 1923 in Massachusetts. She married Edward Paul Boucher 1943 [see main genealogy, above]

NOTES

Residences of Parker F. Murphy (from U.S. censuses):
1920: 53 London St., Lowell, Middlesex Co., Massachusetts
1930: 74 Commonwealth Ave., Lowell, Middlesex Co., Massachusetts

Occupations of Parker F. Murphy (from U.S. censuses and other sources):
1920 census: Machinist, U.S. Cartridge Co.
1930 census: Machine shop foreman
1943 newspaper notice: Lowell Ordnance plant

End of Murphy collateral lineage

Regarding the Sykes family, the following collateral lineage has been determined from U.S. census records:

Richard Sykes was born May 1859 in England. He married Elizabeth A. about 1885. She was born July 1867 in England.

Children of Richard Sykes and Elizabeth are:
i. Gertrude Sykes, born February 1887 in England.
ii. Edith Sykes, born October 1888 in England.
iii. George J. Sykes, born August 1890 in England.
+ iv. Richard O. Sykes, born May 1894 in Massachusetts.
v. William W. Sykes, born June 1896 in Massachusetts.

NOTES

Residences of Richard Sykes (from U.S. censuses):
1900: Tewksbury, Middlesex Co., Massachusetts
1910: 11 Rockingham St., Lowell, Middlesex Co., Massachusetts
1930: 17½ Rockingham St., Lowell, Middlesex Co., Massachusetts

Occupations of Richard Sykes (from U.S. censuses):
1900: Carder in bunting mill

1910: Carder in woolen mill
1930: no occupation

Richard and Elizabeth Sykes, with their English-born children, immigrated into the U.S. in 1890. At the time of the 1900 U.S. census, Richard Sykes was a naturalized U.S. citizen.

At the time of the 1910 U.S. census, Edith Sykes was employed by the electrical utility [specific occupation is illegible on the census sheet].

At the time of the 1910 census, George H. Sykes was employed as a machinist in a bleaching mill.

Generation 2

Richard O. Sykes was born May 1894 in Massachusetts. He married Catherine. She was born about 1893 in Massachusetts.

Children of Richard Sykes and Catherine are:

i. Richard O. Sykes, Jr., born about March 1918 in Massachusetts.
ii. Frank B. Sykes, born about October 1919 in Massachusetts. He married Helen Louise Murphy 1943 [see above]
iii. Isabel L. Sykes, born about 1921 in Massachusetts.
iv. Thomas W. Sykes, born about 1925 in Massachusetts.
v. Henry G. Sykes, born about April 1927 in Massachusetts.

NOTES

Residences of Richard O. Sykes (from U.S. censuses):
1920: Wright St., Chelmsford, Middlesex Co., Massachusetts
1930: 9 Rockingham St., Lowell, Middlesex Co., Massachusetts

Occupations of Richard O. Sykes (from U.S. censuses):
1920: Foreman in worsted mill
1930: Carder in cotton mill

The parents of Catherine Sykes, wife of Richard O. Sykes, were born in Scotland.

Addition
Two days after Wilfred and Pauline Labrie were married they were hosted at the home of his brother, Joseph Martel, in Lowell, Massachusetts. The following news item appeared in the newspaper there (The Lowell Sun, 21 Jul 1921, p. 30):

> RECEPTION TO VISITORS

> Mr. and Mrs. Wilfrid Martel, who were married Monday at Dover, N. H., are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Martel of Wetherbee avenue. Last-evening the couple were tendered a reception at the home of their hosts and there was a large gathering present to extent [sic] their congratulations and best wishes. Luncheon was served and an entertainment program was given, those participating being Miss Lena Martel, Mrs. Blouin, M. Blanchette and Mrs. Arnold Morin.

"Mrs. Blouin" was Palmina Martel Blouin. She and her sister, Lena, were nieces of Wilfred.

Addition

Descendants of Mery Mederic Blouin / Bellouin dit Laviollette (fl. 1669)

Late in 2010 I came into contact with Clermont Blouin, who is working on a Blouin genealogy. At that time he provided me with a direct-line ancestry of the Blouins in our family here; and as like the Martels, the Blouins trace their American origins to one immigrant, Mery Mederic Blouin (or Bellouin dit Laviollette), who arrived in Canada in 1664 and here married Marie Carreau on 30 November 1669.

Rather than emend the entire genealogy to reflect this straight-line lineage, below is that lineage to the sixth generation descendant, François Xavier Blouin (1812/13–1886), who begins the current genealogy of Appendix 1. Should one wish to account for the entire range of generations, add five (5) to each of the generations represented herein.

1. Mery Mederic Blouin (or Bellouin dit Laviollette) (fl. 1669) married Marie Carreau, 30 November 1669

2. Jacques Blouin
   married Genevieve Plante, 2 September 1715

3. Jacques Blouin
   married Marie-Catherine Gosselin, 14 January 1745

4. Charles Blouin
   married Marie-Charlotte Thivierge, 27 October 1783

5. Jacques Blouin
   married Marie-Anne Delage, 23 November 1812

6. François Xavier Blouin (1812/13–1886)

2. Augustin[2] Blouin (François Xavier[1]) was born 08 May 1855 in Anselme, Québec, and died 7 March 1931 in Anselme, Québec.

Revised information received from Clermont Blouin, 4 December 2010.

Addition
[This is an older addition; later corroborated when Augustin's dates were determined. The identity of the man in the photo is, however, still uncorroborated.]
If the man shown in the photograph at the bottom of page 63C (photo Spamer 784) is in fact Augustin Blouin, as here postulated, the apparent age of his granddaughter, Jeannette Leda Blouin, who is also shown in the photograph at about six years of age, helps corroborate that Augustin was still alive ca. 1926.

Addition

In September 1922 two properties on Wetherbee Ave., Lowell, were transferred from Fred W. Wood to, respectively, Joseph Martel and Arthur Blouin (The Lowell Sun, 16 Sep 1922, p. 20).

As noted, Arthur Blouin (Joseph's son-in-law) is listed in the 1924 Lowell city directory as residing at 39 Wetherbee Ave., and in the 1926-1930 directories at 45 Wetherbee Ave. Illustrations shown in this genealogy on page 63D show the house at 45 Wetherbee Ave. under construction in 1924; one of these photos includes both Joseph Martel and Arthur Blouin in the view. It is the house at 45 Wetherbee Ave. that Arthur's daughter, Jeannette Blouin Spamer, recalled as that one built by her grandfather.

Although corroborative information is lacking at this time, one may assume that the property at 39 Wetherbee Ave. may have been that property conveyed by Fred Wood to Joseph Martel. It might have been the first property to be improved with the construction of a house, and where Arthur Blouin and family may have resided with Joseph and Josephine Martel. In 1924, the property at 45 Wetherbee Ave. then was improved, which became Arthur Blouin's home. Later, Joseph Martel removed to Tewksbury, where he became a farmer. Although the circumstances of the residences of the mid-1920s just described are conjectural (other than the real estate transfers and the addresses known for Arthur Blouin), they seem to be reasonable assumptions, given the additional evidence conveyed in family photographs and personal recollection.

Note

The "New Edition" includes hyperlinks embedded in boxes throughout the main genealogy. They will, when clicked in the computer's web-browser environment, automatically redirect the user to the pertinent additions, emendations and corrections that are compiled in the separate "Additions and Corrections" section.

Boxed alerts look like this: Also see Additions & Corrections [In the event that the PDF hyperlink has become inoperative or misdirects, refer to the appropriate page number as listed in the Additions and Corrections section.]

The "Additions and Corrections" document is appended to the end of the main text herein and is separately paginated using Roman numerals. With a web browser on the user's computer the hyperlinks are "live"; the user may switch back and forth between the main text and pertinent additions, corrections, or emendations. Each part of the genealogy (Parts I and II, and Appendices 1 and 2) has its own "Additions and Corrections" section.

The main text of the New Edition is exactly identical to the original edition of 2008; content and pagination are not changed. The difference is the presence of the boxed "Additions and Corrections" alerts, which are superimposed on the page and do not affect text layout or pagination. The reason why the text itself was not updated is because the Comprehensive Index, more than 300 pages, is keyed to the original edition.

The alert notices will print if you print from the main genealogy, which you may then use with a printed copy of the "Additions and Corrections".

The CD (or DVD) containing digital copies of this genealogy also includes documents that were not originally available when the genealogy was prepared in 2008. See the Disk Content Guide.

Special Note Regarding Pagination*: The boxed "Also see Additions & Corrections" alerts are placed where they are needed in the main text. Upon reading the "Additions and Corrections", however, the page number indicated for the emendation may (very infrequently) be off by one page as compared to where the boxed alert is placed. For example, a text comment in the "Additions & Corrections" may refer to page 58, but the corresponding alert box, in its proper place in the text, may be on page 59.

The cause of these minor offsets, when they do occur, is due to the fact that different versions of one word processing programs were used to create some of the new additions and corrections. These different versions occasionally altered page breaks and footnote placements that affected the page layout. The effect is not cumulative through the document; occurrences of offset page notations are very infrequent.

Introduction to Appendix 2

This appendix provides information for genealogical lines that are strongly interconnected through numerous marriages. The main purpose of including these collateral families is to document the distant genealogical connections and to provide interesting historical notes about them. Except for personal comments, one should consider that the information I present here may be superseded by more recent, and more reliable, work about which I am not familiar.This is an informational guide only, not a work of authoritative genealogy on my part.

I hope that by examining the historical aspects of our extended family it invokes a greater sense of appreciation for the history of our nation and how our far-flung relations participated in civic affairs from the local scene to the national stage. These collateral genealogies also document just how closely intertwined these many families were, during the period especially of the 18th and 19th centuries. It is impractical to list these collateral genealogies in Part II (Smith Family) because some lineages relate to several different family groups; and there is little use in repeating the collateral lineages in several places. In addition, many of the collateral genealogies in this Appendix are cross-connected even between themselves. By coincidence only, all of these collateral genealogies figure into the Smith family genealogy, not the Spamer family.

Many of the collateral genealogies here embrace families with significant historical connections, particularly in the political affairs of Maryland and Pennsylvania, but extending also into the affairs of the young Republic. The information in these collateral genealogies is offered for its historical interest more so than for its genealogical significance, recognizing that it pertains mostly to very distant relations. In the few cases where families are historically very significant, there exists a profound body of biographical information that is mostly ignored here. Rather, the reader can turn to any number of historical, biographical, and genealogical treatments for much more information. That, of course, will entail work in libraries, perhaps with the assistance of the librarians there.

Collateral genealogies in this Appendix are, by necessity, not comprehensive genealogies of these families; not even for the generations that are represented here. They are by no means meant to compete against authentic biographical sketches and proper genealogies; they are provided here in limited context for their informational value as it relates to our family and its extended heritage. This appendix is a tool, not gospel. Most of the lineages focus on the 18th and 19th centuries, leading approximately to the time of the marriage that connects it to the Smith family genealogy, or to one or more marriages that connect it to one of the other collateral genealogies.

The collateral genealogies here are arranged alphabetically by surname. Individuals who connect to the main Smith family genealogy, or to one of the other collateral genealogies, are highlighted. Care should be taken to be aware of which collateral genealogy is being examined at any given time. The enumeration scheme of descendants is unique within each separate collateral genealogy. Because of numerous family intermarriages, many individuals appear in more than one collateral genealogy, and in each case their associated descendant number is different.

The genealogies follow the same ancestor-to-descendant order of the Spamer–Smith family genealogy; see the Introduction to the overall genealogy for explanations. Each collateral genealogy begins with the earliest ancestor thus far collated for the genealogical database in use. Some of them conclude with the generation of the person who connects the collateral lineage to the Smith genealogy. Some families are nevertheless overlooked, and they do not appear as collateral genealogies anywhere in this compilation. Although such families may be frequently married into—for example, Goldsborough—common ancestors are not identified nor are there significant numbers of generations recorded here for their descendants.

Although I have collected genealogical data for more individuals than those shown here—that is, even more distantly removed relations—I think they are too far beyond the scope even of these collateral genealogies to include them here. The database from which these reports have been compiled contains the extended data.

One may consider why this Appendix is important to the Spamer–Smith family genealogy overall. As indicated the Introduction, this is an informational document, one prepared first for the use of the family. The principal parts of the genealogy are the most useful portions for the family and genealogical researchers alike. The collateral genealogies are included more for the information of the family; they help place the main branches in historical perspective. Thus they are less useful to genealogists in general; and historians will of course already have better access to sources that record much more comprehensive genealogies for these family groups. In the case of collateral branches that include famous individuals, the collateral lineages provide some answers to questions that may come up in the course of conversation or correspondence but for which corroborative documentation is lacking.

In the relations that are farther removed from the main branches of the family, some individuals played important roles in the history of our nation or in regional or local affairs. One must also keep in mind that these individuals were known to our earlier, contemporary family members as “distant family” of their day, if indeed they were not directly related, and thus they may well have met or were known to them in some familiar terms. The accomplishments of some of these individuals are noted here to place these people and their work in the context of what was—then—current affairs or recent history. It is a manner of reviewing national or local history through the eyes of our extended family members. It also is a means by which family claims to genealogical ties can be checked—determined either to be unfounded, corroborated, or uncertain. The directness of genealogical relations can likewise be ascertained.

The historical information that is included in these collateral genealogies focuses on the places and times of our early extended family members. For the most part, it takes place during the 18th to 20th centuries in the Chesapeake Bay region of Maryland (particularly the Eastern Shore) and in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, where many of our family members came to live from the bay country. For many of the historical individuals cited here, much more biographical information is available in many sources. What is provided here is simply in the manner of illustration, to indicate to the reader the scope and breadth of the work of these individuals. As a sample, I hope to inspire the reader to investigate more about these people and their times.

This page has not been further updated since the main genealogy was completed in 2008. The "Additions and Corrections" appended to this text includes all newly added individuals up to the date indicated on the separate title-page for the "Additions and Corrections".

Continued Updates

As described in the Introduction, all descendants in a family lineage are enumerated consecutively, as generated by Family Treemaker Software. A few additional individuals have been added since this numerical sequence was generated, and these individuals have been added here. They have been enumerated using alphabetical suffixes; the numbers and genealogical relationship will be found in order. The additions are as follows:

10	vii.	Anna Bayard, born 1779; died 1869.

See the Hodge Family collateral genealogy for information about that lineage.

NOTES

The family of Col. John Bubenheim Bayard (1738–1807) [No. 2] were French Huguenots who escaped from France through Holland, where his ancestor, Samuel Bayard, married Ann Stuyvesant. It was Ann who, after Samuel's death, brought her four children to New Netherland with her brother, Peter Stuyvesant, in 1647. A grandson, Samuel Bayard (1675-1721), moved to Maryland and established “Bohemia Manor” in Cecil County.

He moved to Philadelphia in 1755, establishing a merchant business there. He was probably of the firm of Hodge and Bayard, Philadelphia, who furnished arms for the Continental Army. He was a member of the Sons of Liberty in 1766 and the Provincial Convention of 1774. He was a Delegate to the Pennsylvania General Assembly, 1776-1785, its Speaker during 1777-1780 and 1784-1785. As Speaker during 1779-1780, he was an ex officio trustee of the University of Pennsylvania, a position in which he served again when he was elected by the board in 1785. He was a member of the Continental Congress, 1785-1786. During the Revolutionary War he was a Colonel in the Second Regiment, Philadelphia Volunteers, serving in the Battles of Brandywine, Germantown, and Princeton; with the Council of Safety visited Gen. Washington during the encampment at Valley Forge during the winter of 1777. He moved to New Brunswick, New Jersey, in 1788, and was mayor there in 1790, and later a judge of the Court of Common Pleas of Somerset County. [1]

He is buried in the First Presbyterian Church yard, New Brunswick, New Jersey.

NOTES

46. John Cadwalader (1741/42–1786)

He is known as General John Cadwalader. He was elected to the American Philosophical Society 18 November 1768. He kept a pew in St. Peter's Anglican Church at 3rd and Pine Sts., Philadelphia. [11]

In 1772, John Cadwalader and his wife, Elizabeth Lloyd, with their daughter, Anne, were portrayed by artist Charles Willson Peale.

During the British occupation of Philadelphia in the Fall of 1777, his house was requisitioned first by Gen. William Howe, and later by Gen. Knyphausen of the Brunswick troops. Trustee of the University of Pennsylvania, 1779. Elected representative for Kent Co., Maryland, in the Lower House, 1777; but he never served and resigned 1 March 1778; elected again during 1780-1783. Elected to Maryland State Senate for Eastern Shore, 1783, but declined.

R. Hamersley and Co., Philadelphia, 1894), p. 107.

John Cadwalader was commissioned Colonel, 3rd Battalion, Pennsylvania Associators. Ice precluded his unit's participation in the Battle of Trenton, December 1776. Gen. George Washington's orders to him on that historic night read:[12]

> McKonkey's Ferry, 25th Decem. 1776,
> Six o'clock P. M.
> Dear Sir: Notwithstanding the discouraging accounts I have received from Col. Reed of what might be expected from the operations below, I am determined, as the night is favorable to cross the River, and make the attack upon Trenton in the morning. If you can do nothing real, at least create as great a diversion as possible. I am sir,
> Yr. most obt. servt.,
> G°. Washington.
> Col. Cadwalader

He was elected Brigadier General, 21 February 1777, but declined the appointment. George Washington asked him in September 1777 to raise a militia on the Eastern Shore of Maryland to assist in thwarting Gen. William Howe's invasion at the head of Chesapeake Bay. He fought as a volunteer at the Battles of Brandywine and Germantown. On the recommendation of George Washington, Congress on 10 September 1778 offered him an appointment as Brigadier General and a commander of cavalry in the Continental Army, which he declined, believing the war nearly at an end; and he returned to his plantation in Maryland where he spent most of his time.

John Cadwalader resided on South 2nd St. between Spruce and Pine Sts., Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. The house is described as follows:[13]

> ". . . not long after 1770 Dr. Cadwalder's son, General John, elder brother of Colonel Lambert Cadwalader, according to Graydon[14], erected there a very large double house. It stood on the west side of Second below Spruce, and opposite to Little Dock Street, surrounded by a fine garden that extended to Third Street. At this establishment, as Graydon says, the whole of the 'Silk Stocking Company,' raised by the gallant and chivalric Cadwalader, were often entertained with lavish hospitality. Upon the occupation of the city by the British, Sir William Howe made it his quarters, but soon removing to the well-known house in Market Street, where Washington resided while President[15], he was succeeded in the occupancy by General Knyphausen[16], who had been previously quartered at the house of Henry Lisle, on the east side of the street near Dock."

[15] On the south side of Market Street, just east of 6th Street. Here also President John Adams resided during his presidency, prior to the removal of the capital to Washington, D.C. The President's House, on Market Street, was the subject of an archaeological excavation in the first half of 2007, which exposed architectural evidence of some of the foundations of the house, including a passageway connecting the basement kitchen (where worked slaves) with the main house, and part of the foundation of the bow window that Washington had had installed in the dining room and reception hall.

[16] Gen. Knyphausen "appreciated and protected his elegant quarters, and he made a careful inventory of its furnishings–which, needless to say, has been of no small use in detailing the history of the place" (Whitfield J. In 1777, John Cadwalader was elected to the Lower House of the Maryland legislature for Kent Co., but he did not attend and resigned on 1 March 1778. However, when he was elected again in 1780,and in 1783 elected to the State Senate for the Eastern Shore, but again did not serve.

His will, dated 29 April 1785, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, was probated 5 October 1762 in Kent Co., Maryland.[17]

He is buried at Shrewsbury Church, Shrewsbury, Kent Co., Maryland.

Elizabeth (Lloyd) Cadwalader (1741/42–1776)
(wife of John Cadwalader [No. 46])

Wye House is the seat of the Lloyd family of Talbot County, having remained in the family for nearly three centuries. (See in Appendix 2 for most of the Lloyd family connections to this genealogy.) The house and its occupants are of great historical significance in the history of Maryland.[18]

She was buried 17 February 1776 in St. Peter's Church graveyard, 3rd and Pine Sts., Philadelphia, Pennsylvania.[19] Her grave marker was designed by her husband and ordered from London. The notice of her death and funeral appeared in a local newspaper:[20]

> "On Thursday last departed this life, in the thirty-fifth year of her age, Mrs. ELIZABETH CADWALADER, wife of John Cadwalader, Esq; of this city, and only daughter of the late Col. Edward Lloyd, of Maryland; and on Saturday her remains were interred in St. Peter's Churchyard, attended by a great number of the most respectable citizens."

[19] St. Peter's Church, on the south side of Pine St. and with its cemetery occupying that side of the block between 3rd and 4th Sts., is a colonial-era building listed as a National Historic Landmark. It first was used for worship in 1761, built on land given in 1757 by the Proprietors of Pennsylvania, Thomas and Richard Penn. The church was designed by Robert Smith [no relation to our Smith family], notable building designer whose other works include historic Carpenters' Hall in Philadelphia. The steeple was designed by William Strickland, erected in 1842 to house a gift of eight bells from Benjamin Chew Wilcocks, which were cast at Whitechapel Foundry, London, where the Liberty Bell was also cast. Also in this church yard is a row of Osage Orange trees along the southern boundary of the cemetery, said to have been raised from seeds returned by Lewis and Clark. 13 iii. Catherine Carroll. She married Robert Goodloe Harper.

NOTES

Charles Carroll (1737–1832) [Genealogy No. 6] [historically = Charles Carroll no. 4], in order to distinguish himself from the several other Charles Carrolls, began to sign his name "Charles Carroll of Carrollton", by which name is eventually became even formally known.

He was elected to the Continental Congress, 4 July 1776, serving until 1778. He arrived in Philadelphia too late to vote on the matter of independence, but was a signer of the Declaration of Independence. He was the only Signer of the Declaration of Independence who practiced the Catholic faith.[24]

> "[He] attended the Jesuits' College of Bohemia at Hermans Manor, Md., and the College of St. Omer in France; studied civil law at the College of Louis le Grand in Rheims, and common law in London; returned to Annapolis, Md., in 1765; delegate to the revolutionary convention of Maryland in 1775; Continental commissioner to Canada in 1776; member of the Board of War 1776-1777; Delegate to the Continental Congress 1776-1778; again elected to the Continental Congress in 1780, but declined to serve; was a signer of the Declaration of Independence; member, State senate 1777-1800; elected to the United States Senate in 1789; reelected in 1791 and served from March 4, 1789, to November 30, 1792, when, preferring to remain a State senator, he resigned because of law passed by the Maryland legislature disqualifying the members of the State senate who held seats in Congress; retired to private life in 1801; involved in establishing the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Company in 1828; died in Baltimore, Md., November 14, 1832; at the time of his death was the last surviving signer of the Declaration of Independence; interment in the chapel of Doughoregan Manor, near Ellicott City, Howard County, Maryland."[25]

The Charles Carroll house, where he was born and lived, still stands at 107 Duke of Gloucester St., Annapolis, Maryland.

Mary (Darnall) Carroll, wife of Charles Carroll [No. 6], was known as "Molly".

Catherine (Carroll) Harper [No. 13] was known as "Kitty".

Charles Carroll the Barrister resided at Mount Clare, which today is the Mount Clare Museum in Carroll Park in southwest Baltimore. It was built in 1760 and was designated a National Historic Landmark in 1971. It is overseen by the National Society of the Colonial Dames of America in the State of Maryland.[31] Slavery was especially prominent at Mount Clare, as demonstrated by more than two hundred slaves who worked not only on plantation work but in industrial jobs in the Baltimore Iron Works.[32]

Charles Carroll and his wife, Margaret (Tilghman) Carroll (1741/42–1817), are buried at St. Anne's Episcopal Church Cemetery, Church Circle, Annapolis, Anne Arundel Co., Maryland.

Margaret (Tilghman) Carroll was known as "Peggy".

Generation No. 5

16. Charles[5] Carroll [Charles Carroll no. 8; Charles Carroll of Belle Vue] (Charles[4], Daniel[3], Charles[2], Daniel[1]) was born 07 November 1767 in "Carrollsburg", Maryland (now Washington, D.C., S.E.), and died 28 October 1823 in Genesee Valley of New York. He married Ann Sprigg, daughter of Joseph Sprigg and Hannah Lee. She was born about 1769, and died 07 April 1837 at "The Hermitage", Williamsburg, New York.

Children of Charles Carroll and Ann Sprigg are:

	18	i.	Henry[6] Carroll, born 04 January 1792; died 1820 in Missouri.
+	19	ii.	Jane Maria Carroll, born about 1793; died 1833.
+	20	iii.	Charles Holker Carroll, born 04 May 1794 at "Belle Vue", Hagerstown, Virginia; died 20 July 1865.
	21	iv.	Hanna Lee Carroll, born about 1797; died 31 May 1836 at "The Hermitage", Williamsburg, New York.
	22	v.	Daniel Joseph Carroll, born about 1801; died 10 May 1860.
+	23	vi.	William Thomas Carroll, born 02 May 1802 in Maryland; died 13 July 1863.
+	24	vii.	Ann Rebecca Carroll, born about 1803; died 17 August 1846 in St. Louis, Missouri.
+	25	viii.	Elizabeth Barbara Carroll, born 1806; died 1866.

NOTES

16. Charles Carroll (1767–1823) (historically = Charles Carroll no. 8)

A notable family story pertaining to Maj. Charles Carroll is apparently not correct. His children related that they were told that their father cut down the Gilbert Stuart portrait of George Washington when Dolley Madison evacuated the White House on 24 August 1814 upon the advance of the British army into Washington, D.C. When contradictory stories about the event were publicized in 1847 and 1848, Mrs. Madison testified that the Carroll story was not true. While Carroll had been present in the White House that day, he had left earlier to join President Madison. Mrs. Madison supervised White House servants removing the portrait, and entrusted the painting to Jacob Barker and Robert G. L. DePeyster, two men from New York who were also at the White House.[33]

Charles Carroll, his wife, Ann (Sprigg) Carroll (ca. 1769–1837), Hanna Lee Carroll (ca. 1797–1836) [No. 21], and Daniel Joseph Carroll (1801–1860) [No. 22] are buried in Williamsburg Cemetery, Groveland, New York.

18. Henry Carroll (1792–1820)

He was appointed as the private secretary to Henry Clay, and it was Henry Carroll who delivered the signed Treaty of Ghent (24 December 1814) to President Madison. He was killed by Maj. Gentry and is buried in (old) Franklin, Missouri, a site probably obliterated by flooding.

22. Daniel Joseph Carroll (1801–1860)

Dr. Daniel J. Carroll never married.

Residences of Daniel Joseph Carroll:
1830: Rochester, New York
1850s: 97 Chambers St., New York, New York

His will is dated 25 January 1830.

Generation No. 6

19. Jane Maria[6] Carroll (Charles[5], Charles[4], Daniel[3], Charles[2], Daniel[1]) was born about 1793, and died 1833. She married Moses Tabbs. He was born about 1780, and died 1836.

Children of Jane Carroll and Moses Tabbs are:

	26	i.	Mary Carroll[7] Tabbs, born 19 April 1819 in Vincennes, Knox Co., Indiana; died 1884. She married Thomas Tasker Gantt 29 May 1845; born 1814 in Georgetown, D.C.; died 17 June 1889.
+	27	ii.	Alida Tabbs, born 1823; died 28 April 1872.
	28	iii.	Ann Tabbs.
	29	iv.	Sarah Tabbs, born 1833; died September 1833.

NOTES

Mary (Carroll) Tabbs (1819–1884) [No. 19] had no children. She is buried in Bellefontaine Cemetery, St. Louis, Missouri.

Thomas Tasker Gantt (1814–1889), husband of Mary Carroll, is buried in Bellefontaine Cemetery, St. Louis, Missouri.

The marriage of Mary Tabbs and Thomas Gantt was officiated by Rev. Henry B. Bartow, rector of St. Michael's Episcopal Church, Genesee, New York.

36 v. Charles H. Carroll, born about 1841 in Washington, D.C.
37 vi. Caroline A. Carroll, born about 1842 in Washington, D.C. She married Matthew Bolles; died about 1875.
38 vii. Alida C. Carroll, born about 1844 in Washington, D.C. She married Gen. John M. Brown.

NOTES

23. William Thomas Carroll (1802–1863)

Occupations of William Thomas Carroll (from U.S. censuses):
1850: "Clerk Supreme Court"
1860: Lawyer

At the time of the 1850 and 1860 censuses, he resided in the 1st Ward, Washington, D.C. In the 1850 U.S. census he is indexed as William Cassatt [sic], but the census sheet is clearly written Carroll.

[34] Biographical Directory of the United States Congress.

He had not moved to New York State with his family, but was placed in the care of his half-uncle, Judge Samuel Sprigg, a future governor of the state. He became a member of the bar by 1826, and he was a co-professor with Judge William Cranch[35] (District of Columbia Circuit Court) in the short-lived law school of the Columbian College (now George Washington University). In 1826 he was appointed clerk of the U.S. Supreme Court; retired 1862. He purchased Lot 292 in Oak Hill Cemetery to receive his young son, William Jr.; here also was interred William Wallace Lincoln, 11-year-old son of President Abraham Lincoln who died 20 February 1862, but who was reinterred in Springfield, Illinois, when the president's remains were sent there in 1865.

William Thomas Carroll, Clerk of the Supreme Court, had purchased the Bible upon which Abraham Lincoln took the oath of office at his first presidential inauguration (4 March 1861, on the East Portico of the U.S. Capitol). The Bible was opened at random.[36]

William and Sarah Sprigg received as a wedding present from her father his home at 1801 F St., N.W., Washington, which for six decades thereafter was known as the Carroll House. The house has a historic history and residents alike, including Supreme Court Chief Justice John Marshall (1831-1833) and (after the Carrolls sold the house in 1896) Chief Justice Melville W. Fuller, and Congressman Robert Low Bacon of New York (1924-1938). The house today is the headquarters of DACOR (Diplomatic and Consular Officers, Retired).[37]

He is buried in Oak Hill Cemetery, Washington, D.C. (lot 292).

Sarah (Sprigg) Carroll (1812–1893)
(wife of William Thomas Carroll)
"Sallie"

In the 1870 U.S. census, Sarah Carroll's household included son-in-law Thomas Mercer and Violetta Mercer, their sons, Carroll and John Mercer; Nathanial and Caroline Binney(?) or Kenney(?), who may be Sarah's daughter and son-in-law; and daughter Sarah Griffin (presumably a widow at this time).

She is buried in Oak Hill Cemetery, Washington, D.C. (lot 292).

34. William Thomas Carroll, Jr. (ca.1834–1857)

He is buried in Oak Hill Cemetery, Washington, D.C. (lot 292).

35. Sarah V. Carroll (ca. 1840–)

She was known as "Sally".

Charles Griffin (–before 1870)
(husband of Sarah V. Carroll [No. 35])

Gen. Griffin was a Captain in the U.S. Army at the time of his marriage. President and Mrs. Lincoln were present at the marriage ceremony in home of the bride's father at 1801 F St., N.W., Washington, D.C. (today the DACOR Bacon House), a short distance from the White House.

37. Caroline (Carroll) Bolles (ca. 1842–)

In the 1870 U.S. census for Washington, D.C., the Sarah Carroll household includes two of her married or widowed children, and Caroline, aged 28, born in D.C., who is listed with the same surname as Nathanial Binney(?) or Kenney(?), aged 40, retired Army officer born in New Jersey. It is not clear if this is Sarah Carroll's daughter, Caroline.

Matthew Bolles (–ca. 1875)
(husband of Caroline Carroll [No. 37])

He was a Lieutenant in the U.S. Navy.

NOTES

12. Benjamin Chew (senior) (1722–1810)[39]

He was Speaker of the House in the Delaware legislature, 1753-1758. He moved to Philadelphia in 1754 and was Attorney General of Pennsylvania during 1754-1769. He was Register of General Wills, 1765-1776; Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania, 1774-1776; and Judge and President of the High Court of Errors and Appeals, 1791-1806. He was a trustee of the University of Pennsylvania, 1757-1791, and was elected to the American Philosophical Society.

About him the Philadelphia Bar Association notes that he "had an unsurpassed knowledge of common and statutory law and was known for his solid judgment, superior memory and a remarkable work ethic. Chew was also known for his precision and brevity in making legal arguments, as contrasted with the many verbose lawyers who practiced in his time."[40]

He was the last owner of the Chew family estate, Maidstone, in Calvert Co. (originally in Anne Arundel Co.), Maryland.[41]

During 1761-1767 he built the now-historic home, Cliveden, in Germantown, Pennsylvania (today 6401 Germantown Ave., Philadelphia). It was the focal point of the Battle of Germantown in October 1777, when the structure was known as the Chew House; some of the physical scars of battle remain on the house today. British forces had occupied the Chew House, which was attacked with musketry and cannon. The Continental Army was repulsed by British forces, and the Chew House was finally left heavily damaged. Benjamin Chew sold the property in 1779, but repurchased it in 1797.

Chew was a British sympathizer who, shortly before the British occupied Germantown and the Chew House, had been arrested for treason but paroled to the Union Iron Works in New Jersey. He was freed and returned to Philadelphia in 1778. For the next decade he left his legal practice and was active in the Philadelphia Common Council.

He is the attributed author of Laws of the Government of New-Castle, Kent, and Sussex upon Delaware; published by order of the Assembly (B. Franklin and D. Hall, Philadelphia, 1752).

His will, dated 1 April 1806, mentions unmarried daughters, Anna Maria, Henrietta, and Maria; but the mother of Anna Maria is (here) undetermined. The will was entered to probate 13 February 1810, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania.

He is buried in St. Peter's Church graveyard, 3rd and Pine Sts., Philadelphia, Pennsylvania.[42]

30. Benjamin Chew (junior) (1758–1844)

He was elected to the American Philosophical Society in 1787.

He is the attributed author of A Sketch of the Politics, Relations, and Statistics, of the Western World, and of Those Characteristics of European Policy Which Most Immediately Affect Its Interests: Intended to Demonstrate the Necessity of a Grand American Confederation and Alliance (R. H. Small, Philadelphia, 1827).

Generation No. 6

22. Philemon Lloyd[6] Chew (Richard[5], Samuel[4], Samuel[3], Samuel[2], John[1]) was born 23 July 1765. He married Anne Bowie. She was born 1767, and died 1827.

Child of Philemon Chew and Anne Bowie is:

37 i. Margaret Bowie[7] Chew, born 17 September 1791. She married Richard Ireland Jones after 1800; born in England; died 1844 in Maryland.

NOTES

Richard Ireland Jones (–1844)
(husband of Margaret Bowie Chew [No. 37])

He arrived in Maryland in 1784, representing the family of Robert Eden (1741-1784)[43], the last colonial governor of Maryland, to whom Jones was related by marriage. After having had returned to England at the time of the Revolution, Eden, who had been made a Baronet, returned to Maryland after the war to make claims for his properties, during which time he also worked on claims for Lord Baltimore. Jones had been appointed to continue Eden's work on reacquiring what was possible of the pre-Revolutionary wealth and belongings of Frederick, Lord Baltimore.

[42] St. Peter's Church, on the south side of Pine St. and with its cemetery occupying that side of the block between 3rd and 4th Sts., is a colonial-era building listed as a National Historic Landmark. It first was used for worship in 1761, built on land given in 1757 by the Proprietors of Pennsylvania, Thomas and Richard Penn. The church was designed by Robert Smith [no relation to our Smith family], notable building designer whose other works include historic Carpenters' Hall in Philadelphia. The steeple was designed by William Strickland, erected in 1842 to house a gift of eight bells from Benjamin Chew Wilcocks, which were cast at Whitechapel Foundry, London, where the Liberty Bell was also cast. Jones first settled in Annapolis, then joined his brother, Alfred, in Queen Anne's Co., where he married Susannah Carroll Tilghman, daughter of Edward Tilghman (1713-1785). Between 1785 and 1798, on property owned by Susannah, Richard Ireland Jones built "Kennersley", a manor on South East Creek west of Church Hill, Queen Anne's Co., Maryland (see below). Kennersley passed to Arthur Tilghman Jones upon Susannah's death, but soon after Arthur's marriage he fell in great debt, and Henry Hollyday of "Ratcliffe", a principal creditor, acquired Kennersley in 1827. The property descended in the Hollyday family until 1858, and thereafter through numerous hands to the present day.

In 1798, Richard Ireland Jones benefited from an Act of the Maryland Assembly passed 15 January on his behalf to acknowledge his purchases, sales, and contracts made prior to his naturalization through his oaths taken while he resided in Maryland.[44] In 1828, he again benefited by an Act of the Maryland Assembly passed 14 March on his behalf, to be allowed to import from Kentucky seven slaves—a man, Charles; women Jenny and Judy; boys Charles, Nat, and Ben; and a girl, Rhoda—"to have and to hold . . . in the same right and manner as if they had been born in this state", so long as "they shall have resided in this state for the term of three years".[45] And in 1830, he petitioned the U.S. Senate, through Senator Chambers, "praying to re remunerated for the loss of two vessels burnt by the enemy in 1813, in consequence of their having been used in transporting the mail".[46]

Kennersley

The Maryland Historical Trust's State Historic Sites Survey includes an architectural and historical survey of Kennersley, on the west side of Clabber Hill Road near Church Hill (site QA-3). The Statement of Significance indicates:[47]

> "Kennersley is one of the largest and grandest 18th century houses in Queen Anne's county. Constructed circa 1785-98 by Richard Ireland Jones, the five-part house is an excellent example of high style design with clear evidence of the influence of contemporary pattern books. The size and elegance of the house are a reflection of the aspirations and accomplishments of Richard Jones and his wife Susanna, daughter of Colonel Edward Tilghman, a leading figure in Queen Anne's County in the latter part of the 18th century.
> "In overall form, Kennersley is somewhat unusual in that the hyphens are set flush with the south facade of the main block and the flanking wings. As a result, the central block has a somewhat unusual plan, consisting of a wide stair hall stretching across the front or south facade, allowing ready access to the hyphens.
> "The principal first floor rooms open off the hall to the north, with a view of Southeast Creek, Island Creek, and Chester River. Particular details worthy of note include the gracefully curving stair in the southwest corner of the front hall, the superb mantels and the bold, crossetted architrave trim in the central block. It is also interesting to note that the flanking wings were constructed first and that the main house and the hyphens were then filled in, completing the five part plan."

25. Edward[6] Tilghman (Elizabeth[5] Chew, Samuel[4], Benjamin[3], Samuel[2], John[1]) was born 11 December 1750 in Wye, Queen Anne's Co., Maryland, and died 01 November 1815 in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. He married Elizabeth Chew 26 May 1775, daughter of Benjamin Chew and Mary Galloway. She was born 10 November 1751 in Dover, Kent Co., Delaware, and died after November 1815.

Children of Edward Tilghman and Elizabeth Chew are:

	38	i.	Anna Mary[7] Tilghman.
+	39	ii.	Benjamin Tilghman.
	40	iii.	Edward Tilghman.
	41	iv.	Elizabeth Tilghman.
	42	v.	Mary Tilghman.

NOTES

Edward Tilghman (1750–1815) [No. 25] was a Brigade Major at the Battle of Long Island during the Revolutionary War. During 1794-1807 he was a trustee of the University of Pennsylvania.[48]

In 1778, Edward Tilghman fell into a situation wherein he had visited Philadelphia during the British occupation. The Council of Maryland ordered his arrest, but he was later cleared:[49]

> "Whereas it Appears from a Deposition made before this Board that Edward Tilghman son of Edward Tilghman hath gone into Phil[a] then and now in the Possession of the Enemy and hath again returned into this State not having had any License from the Governor and Council for his going to Philadelphia. It is therefore Ordered that the Sheriff of Queen Annes County take the said Edward Tilghman the Son if in his County and him immediately bring before this Board that he may be dealt with according to Law.
> In Council 29th July 1778.
> Sir.
> Inclosed you will receive the Leave of the governor and Council to go at Large as you please, which, according to the Terms of your Bond takes away any further Operation of it, the Bond itself has not been transmitted hither, we suppose it was returned to the General Court where must properly remain.

> We are &[ca]
> Edward Tilghman Jun[r] Esq[r]
> Queen Ann's County

At the time of the 1790 U.S. census, Edward Tilghman was listed as "Atty at Law", residing at 116 Chestnut St. [old scheme], Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. The Philadelphia Bar Association recognizes him as one of the "Legends of the Bar", noting that he > ". . . was a superb jury trial lawyer who talked to jurors as if he was one of them. He mastered what was in his time the most intellectually difficult area of the law, contingent remainders and executory devises. A contemporary analysis of his capabilities noted that he was 'an advocate of great powers, purest integrity and brightest honor.'"[50]

33. Julianna[6] Chew (Benjamin[5], Samuel[4], Benjamin[3], Samuel[2], John[1]) was born 15 September 1767 in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, and died 11 August 1845. She married Philip Nicklin 01 April 1793 in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, son of Joseph Nicklin. He was born about 1760, and died 1806.

Children of Julianna Chew and Philip Nicklin are:

	43	i.	Elizabeth[7] Nicklin, born 18 February 1794.
	44	ii.	William Nicklin, born about 1796.
+	45	iii.	Sophia Chew Nicklin, born 25 June 1798 in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania; died 11 January 1869 in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania.
	46	iv.	Maria Nicklin, born 14 February 1800.
	47	v.	Susan Margaretta Nicklin, born about 1802.
	48	vi.	Juliana Catherine Nicklin, born 15 August 1805.

Generation No. 7

39. Benjamin[7] Tilghman (Edward[6], Elizabeth[5] Chew, Samuel[4], Benjamin[3], Samuel[2], John[1]) He married Anna Maria McMurtrie.

Children of Benjamin Tilghman and Anna McMurtrie are:

	49	i.	Benjamin Chew[8] Tilghman, born 26 October 1821 in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania; died 03 July 1901.
	50	ii.	Richard Albert Tilghman, born 24 May 1824 in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania; died 24 March 1899.

NOTES

Benjamin Tilghman [No. 39] was a lawyer; elected to membership in the American Philosophical Society, 1871.

Benjamin Chew Tilghman (1821–1901) [No. 49] was a graduate of the University of Pennsylvania, B.A., 1839. He was admitted to the bar but joined his brother, Richard, in business, invention, and manufacturing. In April 1861 he joined the 26th Regiment, Pennsylvania Volunteers, as Captain, rising to regimental commander in two years. He was wounded at Chancellorsville, 3 May 1863, after which he was appointed to command the 3rd Regt. U.S.

Colored Troops from Philadelphia. He was made Brevet Brigadier General two years later. Mustered out 9 June 1865. Member of the American Philosophical Society.[51]

Richard Albert Tilghman (1824–1899) [No. 50] was a chemist, graduate of the University of Pennsylvania, B.A., 1841. Among numerous accomplishments, he is known for his fat hydrolysis patents, which he and his brother, Benjamin, advanced. In addition, he produced a method to manufacture wood-pulp paper, which would not become commercially practical until later. Elected member of the American Philosophical Society, 1847.[52]

45. Sophia Chew[7] Nicklin (Julianna[6] Chew, Benjamin[5], Samuel[4], Benjamin[3], Samuel[2], John[1]) was born 25 June 1798 in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, and died 11 January 1869 in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. She married (1) Philips before 1816. She married (2) George Mifflin Dallas 23 May 1816 in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, son of Alexander Dallas and Arabella Smith. He was born 10 July 1792 in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, and died 31 December 1864 in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania.

Children of Sophia Nicklin and George Dallas are:

51 i. Alexander James[8] Dallas, born in Jamaica; died 30 September 1826.
52 ii. Julia Dallas, born about 1821 in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania.
53 iii. Sophia Dallas, born about 1823 in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania.
54 iv. Philip Nicklin Dallas, born 13 August 1825 in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania; died 14 March 1866.
55 v. Susan Dallas, born about 1830 in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania.
56 vi. Charlotte B. Dallas, born about 1836 in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania.

NOTES

45. Sophia (Nicklin) Dallas (1798–1869)

She is buried in St. Peter's Church graveyard, 3rd and Pine Sts., Philadelphia, Pennsylvania.

George Mifflin Dallas (1792–1864)
(husband of Sophia Chew Nicklin)

He graduated from Princeton with first-class honors, 1810.

In addition to numerous other accomplishments, he was Remitter of the U.S. Treasury (1814-1816), Mayor of Philadelphia (1828-1829), U.S. Attorney for Eastern District of Pennsylvania (1829-1831), U.S. Senator (Democrat, 1831-1833, filling vacancy caused by the resignation of Isaac D. Barnard and was Chairman of the Committee on Naval Affairs, and did not seek reelection), Attorney General of Pennsylvania (1833), Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary to Russia (1837-1839), declined position of Attorney General under President James K. Polk (1839), elected Vice President under James K. Polk in 1844 (serving 1845-1849), Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary to Great Britain (1856). The city of Dallas, Texas, and others, were named for him.

51. Alexander James Dallas (–1826)[55]

After his mother's second marriage and his exclusion from inheritance of his father's estate, he emigrated to Philadelphia in April 1783, arriving in Philadelphia 8 June 1783, where he became a lawyer. He was Secretary of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, 1791-1801, under Gov. Thomas Mifflin; United States Attorney, Eastern District of Pennsylvania, 1801-1814 (a position also later held by his son, George Mifflin Dallas[56]).

Alexander James Dallas was the first Reporter of the Supreme Court of the United States, a position he held 1790-1800 when the court sat in Philadelphia when that city was the U.S. capital. Interestingly enough, the first volume of the U.S. Reports as distributed by Dallas included as a matter of convenience the decisions of federal courts including district courts; this before the Supreme Court removed to Philadelphia in 1791, thus "1 U.S. (1 Dall.)" as it

Dallas Family Collateral Genealogy

(59 descendants)

The genealogy of the Dallas family, as it relates to the Bache and Franklin collateral genealogies herein, is as follows.

> "The family traces its descent from the Barons of Dallas through Sir William de Dolyes, Knight Lord of Dolyes (1289) and John de Dolas, chief of his name and first of Can tray (1442), down through William Dallas (1617), whose son, George Dallas, of Sant Martin's, Ross-shire (1630), was am eminent lawyer and the author of the Scottish law book known as 'St. Martin's Syles.' He was also keeper of the privy seal of Scotland during the reign of James VII. This seal afterward came into the possession of Lieut.-Gen. Sir Thomas Dallas, K.C.B. (1757), a cousin of Alexander James Dallas (1759), who, as an officer in the British army, distinguished himself in the Carnatic and later at the siege of Seringapatam." [69]

A guide to the Dallas burials in St. Peter's Church Yard at 3rd and Pine Sts., Philadelphia, from a more contemporary source when the original stones were more legible, may be had in the transcriptions of Rev. William White Bronson, published in 1879.[70]

11 vi. Trevanion Barlow Dallas, born about 1800; died 07 April 1841 in Pittsburgh, Allegheny, Pennsylvania. He married Jane Stevenson Wilkins; born 21 February 1802; died after 1841.

NOTES

5. Alexander James Dallas (1759–1817)[71]

After his mother's second marriage and his exclusion from inheritance of his father's estate, he emigrated to Philadelphia in April 1783, arriving in Philadelphia 8 June 1783, where he became a lawyer. He was Secretary of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, 1791-1801, under Gov. Thomas Mifflin; United States Attorney, Eastern District of Pennsylvania, 1801-1814 (a position also later held by his son, George Mifflin Dallas[72]).

Alexander James Dallas was the first Reporter of the Supreme Court of the United States, a position he held 1790-1800 when the court sat in Philadelphia when that city was the U.S. capital. Interestingly enough, the first volume of the U.S. Reports as distributed by Dallas included as a matter of convenience the decisions of federal courts including district courts; this before the Supreme Court removed to Philadelphia in 1791, thus "1 U.S. (1 Dall.)" as it is mnemonically cited in legal papers is the only volume that contains no Supreme Court decisions.[73] Interestingly enough, the Reporter who succeeded Dallas was William Cranch, who appears in the present genealogy in the Cranch Family collateral genealogy in Part II, Smith Family.

Later Dallas became the Secretary of the Treasury, 1814 (and briefly, acting Secretary of War, March 1815) during the administration of President James Madison. His work established the Second Bank of the United States and restored the finances of the U.S. government after the War of 1812. He retired in November 1816. He was a member of the American Philosophical Society (elected 1791) and a trustee of the University of Pennsylvania, 1794-1817.

A title attributed to Alexander James Dallas is An Exposition of the Causes and Character of the War, which refers to the War of 1812 that was conducted between the United States and Great Britain during 1812-1815. It was produced under numerous imprints in different cities.[74]

The Philadelphia Bar Association recognizes him as one of the "Legends of the Bar", noting that he > ". . . served as the secretary of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, U.S. attorney for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania under President Thomas Jefferson and finally as secretary of the Treasury under President James Madison. He took over the bankrupt treasury of the young republic and left it in a solvent state after two years in office."[75]

NOTES

7. Alexander James Dallas (1791–1844)

He was christened 20 April 1802 in St. Peter's Episcopal Church, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania.

In 1805 he was appointed Midshipman, U.S. Navy. He served as acting Lieutenant, 1810, aboard U.S.S. President. In May 1811 in action against H.M.S. Little Belt, he commanded the gun division that, without orders from his superior officer, returned fire on the Little Belt, which action initiated the War of 1812. He was commissioned Lieutenant on 4 March 1811, effective from 13 June 1810. On 23 June 1812, by order of Capt. Rodgers of the President, he fired the first gun of the declared war in an engagement with H.M.S. Belvidere. As Lieutenant Commander of the U.S.S. Spitfire, on 11 May 1815 he sailed with Commo. Stephen Decatur to Algiers. He was made Master Commandant on 5 March 1817, and on 24 April 1828 was made Post-Captain, at that time the highest naval rank. He planned and built the U.S. Navy Yard at Pensacola, Florida and commanded the West Indian Squadron; he later commanded the Pensacola Navy Yard. During his command of the Pacific Squadron, he died aboard ship at Callao Bay, Peru.

In the 1825 Philadelphia city directory Capt. Alexander James Dallas, U.S.N., is listed residing at 92 S. 8th St. [old style].

A portrait of a Alexander James Dallas as a young man, oil on canvas by an unknown artist, date unknown, was in 2005 in a private collection in Tennessee.[76]

He is buried in St. Peter's Church graveyard, 3rd and Pine Sts., Philadelphia, Pennsylvania.

Mary (Willis) Dallas (1813–after 1897)
(wife of Alexander James Dallas [No. 7])

She was the great-granddaughter of Col. Fielding Lewis and Betty Washington, the latter being the only sister of George Washington. Mrs. Dallas was living in Washington, D.C., in 1898.

Barnard and was Chairman of the Committee on Naval Affairs, and did not seek reelection), Attorney General of Pennsylvania (1833), Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary to Russia (1837-1839), declined position of Attorney General under President James K. Polk (1839), elected Vice President under James K. Polk in 1844 (serving 1845-1849), Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary to Great Britain (1856). The city of Dallas, Texas, and others, were named for him.

The Philadelphia Bar Association recognizes him as one of the "Legends of the Bar", noting that he > ". . . was one of the first generation of Philadelphia lawyer-leaders born in the post-Colonial, independent epoch. He seemed to move freely through local, state and federal office, something that happened frequently from Colonial times through the mid-twentieth century. He served as mayor of Philadelphia, attorney general of Pennsylvania, Vice President of the United States... and minister to Russia, and later Great Britain."[78]

One of the enduring claims to the vice presidency of the United States—at least by many of the office holders—is the relative lack of activity and contribution to the government. Alexander James Dallas offered a pointed commentary based on his experience:[79]

> "[Except that he is President of the Senate, the vice president] forms no part of the government:—he enters into no administrative sphere:—he has practically no legislative, executive, or judicial functions:—while the Senate sits, he presides, that's all:—he doesn't debate or vote, (except to end a tie) he merely preserves the order and courtesy of business . . . [When Congress is in recess] where is he to go? what has he to do? no where, nothing! He might, to be sure, meddle with affairs of state, rummage through the departments, devote his leisure to the study of public questions and interests, holding himself in readiness to counsel and to help at every emergency in the great onward movement of the vast machine:—But, then, recollect that this course would sometimes be esteemed intrusive, sometimes factious, sometimes vain and arrogant, and, as it is prescribed by no law, it could not fail to be treated lightly because guaranteed by no responsibility."

"John Register Emory was a member of the Queen Anne's County Board of Justices of the Peace, in 1777. He inherited from his father 'Poplar Grove' in Queen Anne's County, originally known as 'Brampton'. In addition to 'Brampton' the estate was at that time made up of 'Conquest,' 'Corsica' and 'Cintra' (Cintra, a town in Portugal, which up to about 1640 had been a dependency of Spain), the total consisting of approximately two thousands acres, covering all of that section known as Spaniards Neck at the junction of the Corsica and Chester rivers. 'Poplar Grove' is one of the very few colonial estates in America which has been continuously owned by the same family and inherited from generation to generation up to the present time. It is the only one now [1928] remaining in possession of the Emorys in Maryland. The original section of the brick manor house was built about 1700 according to tradition and the formal terraced gardens of boxwood on the rear lawn are known to be the oldest gardens in this country."[92]

Poplar Grove

Poplar Grove is the homestead of the Emory family, situated on Emory Creek, which with the Corsica River to which it is a tributary forms the southern side of Spaniard Neck, west of Centreville, Queen Anne's Co., Maryland. The main house is an 18th-century two-story brick structure with two flanking wings; the main building has been added to perhaps eight times. The property has additional historical and architectural significance in also preserving the18th century slave quarters, one of two such small frame dwellings known in the county. Even with some modern renovations, the slave quarters preserve sufficient evidence to allow insights into slave housing. The site also has been used as a field school in archaeology from Washington College.[93]

Generation No. 6

39. Thomas Lane[6] Emory, Jr. (Thomas Lane[5], Thomas[4], Arthur (the elder)[3], Arthur[2], John[1]) was born 1789, and died 05 February 1835. He married Eliza Harwood Grant 13 June 1815. She was born 14 August 1795, and died 15 June 1852.

65 ix. Frederic Emory, born 09 September 1829. He married undetermined wife.

\+ 66 x. Blanchard Emory, born 22 November 1831 of "Poplar Grove", Queen Anne's Co., Maryland.

NOTES

With the marriage of Thomas Emory to Anna Maria Hemsley the Smith family genealogy is accorded a link to an astonishing number of connections to historical American families. Her father was William Hemsley (1737–1812), member of the Continental Congress, 1782-1783; earlier Provincial Treasurer of Eastern Shore, Maryland, 1773, surveyor of Talbot Co., Maryland, Colonel of the Twentieth Battalion, Queen Anne's County Militia, 1777, Justice of the Peace for Queen Anne's Co., 1777, member of the Maryland State Senate, 1779-1881 and terms of 1786, 1790, 1800.[94] Anna Maria Hemsley's mother was Anna Maria Tilghman (1749/50–1817), and great grandparents in her paternal and maternal lineages (both) were Anna Maria Lloyd (1676–1748) and Richard Tilghman (1671/72–1737/38). Two of the brothers of Anna Maria Hemsley, William and Matthew, married Tilghman sisters, Margaret and Anne.

[94] Biographical Directory of the United States Congress, 1774-Present, website http://bioguide.congress.gov.

Cousins of various kinds, and their own marriages, include numerous individuals of the Tilghman and Lloyd families, as well as others whose names are among the historical ranks both in Maryland and in Philadelphia, such as Bache, Cadwalader, Chew, Coursey, Dallas, Foulke, Hodge, Hollyday, and McCall. Indeed, Anna Maria Hemsley Emory provides a genealogical reconnection with our own Smith family through Elizabeth Wilkinson, fourth wife of Joseph Moore Smith (1782–1863) [see main Smith family genealogy, No. 34] and their descendants.

Of the children of Thomas and Anna Maria Hemsley Emory, marriages reaffirmed genealogical connections with the Tilghman families, and, as noted elsewhere herein, son William Hemsley Emory married Matilda Bache, a great granddaughter of Benjamin Franklin. And through other descendants again the families interconnect through Anna Maria Hemsley Emory's grandson, Edward Bourke Emory (1849–1924), who married Henrietta Tilghman (1855–1953) and Susannah Watson (1873–after 1929) [No. 356 in the main Smith genealogy] who was the great granddaughter of Katharine W. (Smith) Watson (ca. 1801–1881) [see main Smith family genealogy, No. 47] whose second husband was John H. Covington (1789–ca. 1861) who took in orphaned John Edward Smith (1848–1930) [No. 92].

49. Thomas Emory (1782–before 1850)

> "General Thomas Emory was a member of the Maryland House of Delegates, the State Senate and Executive Council of the governor under the old Constitution. He was an officer in the war of 1812, serving as a major in the 9th Cavalry District and took active part in the defense of Queenstown against the attack of the British. He was also first president of the Eastern Shore Railroad and one of the Commissioners to negotiate an internal loan for the state of Maryland, visiting England for that purpose in 1838."[95]

62. Robert Emory, Jr. (1815–)

He never married.

65. Frederic Emory (1829–)

He "was the Emory genealogist and the author of the early history of the Emory family, [and] he married and died leaving no children." [96]

Generation No. 7

53. Thomas Lane[7] Emory III (Thomas Lane[6], Thomas Lane[5], Thomas[4], Arthur (the elder)[3], Arthur[2], John[1]) was born 25 November 1825, and died 28 October 1863 in New Orleans, Louisiana. He married Mary Campbell. She was born of Portland, Oregon.

Children of Thomas Emory and Mary Campbell are:

67 i. Thomas Lane[8] Emory IV.
68 ii. Jerry Emory.
69 iii. Elizabeth Emory.

54. Daniel Grant[7] Emory (Thomas Lane[6], Thomas Lane[5], Thomas[4], Arthur (the elder)[3], Arthur[2], John[1]) was born 14 February 1828, and died 14 February 1885. He married (1) Mary Virginia Fulton. He married (2) Emma Rosalie Ward 02 October 1855 in Glencoe, Baltimore, Maryland, daughter of William J. Ward. She died 24 October 1858.

Children of Daniel Emory and Mary Fulton are:

+	70	i.	Edith Grant[8] Emory.
	71	ii.	Lucretia Van Bibber Emory. She married Fred. Sampson.
+	72	iii.	Mary Emory.
	73	iv.	Thomas Lane Emory.
+	74	v.	Isabel Neilson Emory.

Children of Daniel Emory and Emma Ward are:

75	i.	Emma Rosalie[8] Emory, born 27 July 1856; died 18 February 1858.
76	ii.	Lillian Grant Emory, born 20 October 1858.

55. Mary[7] Emory (Thomas Lane[6], Thomas Lane[5], Thomas[4], Arthur (the elder)[3], Arthur[2], John[1]) was born 24 October 1831, and died 19 December 1899. She married John Sanderson Price 13 October 1859 in St. Paul's Church, Baltimore, Maryland, son of Joseph Price and Matilda Sanderson.

Children of Mary Emory and John Price are:

+	77	i.	Thomas Emory[8] Price, born 22 December 1860.
+	78	ii.	Eliza Grant Price, born 28 August 1864.
	79	iii.	Matilda Price.
	80	iv.	John Sanderson Price. [Died in infancy.]
	81	v.	Isabel Emory Price, born 19 June 1869. She married Joseph Woodley Richardson.

NOTES

The marriage of Mary Emory (1831–1899) [No. 55] and John Price was officiated by Rev. Charles C. Grafton.

Matilda Price [No. 79] never married.

Isabel (Price) Richardson [No. 81] had no children.

---

56. John[7] Emory (Robert[6], John[5], John[4], John[3], Arthur[2], John[1]) was born 11 April 1789 in Queen Anne's Co., Maryland, and died 17 December 1835 in Reisterstown, Maryland. He married Ann Wright, daughter of Thomas Wright.

Child of John Emory and Ann Wright is:

82	i.	Robert[8] Emory II, born 1814 in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania; died 18 May 1848 in Baltimore, Maryland.

NOTES

Bishop John Emory (1789–1835) [No. 56] was "the noted bishop of the M. E. Church, founder of Emory University in Georgia, etc. . . . With the exception of Bishop Emory the Emorys from the earliest times have been associated with the history of the Anglican and afterwards the Protestant Episcopal Church."[97]

He attended Washington College, Chestertown, Maryland., and was admitted to the bar in 1808. In 1810 he entered the Methodist Episcopal ministry and was elected to the general conference in 1816 and reelected all but once for sixteen years. In 1824 became editor of the Christian Advocate. He founded the Methodist Quarterly Review (originally separate as the Methodist Review and Methodist Magazine). He was ordained Bishop in 1832. He was the author of The Divinity of Christ Vindicated and A Defence of "Our Fathers" (New York, 1827), among other titles.

Robert Emory, II (1814–1848) [No. 82] graduated from Columbia in 1831. He was Chair of Ancient Languages at Dickinson College, 1834-1839, and resigned to become a Methodist Episcopal minister. He returned to Dickinson as a professor in 1842, and was later president pro tempore of the college, and elected president in 1845-1848. He was conferred the S.T.D. degree by Columbia in 1846. He was the author of Life of Bishop Emory (1841) and History of the Discipline of the Methodist Episcopal Church (1843).

NOTES

60. William Hemsley Emory (1811–1887)

Maj. Gen. William Hemsley Emory saw significant military service during his lifetime, retiring at the rank of Brigadier General on 1 July 1876. He was in charge of the U.S.–Mexico boundary survey.

> "General Wm. Hemsley Emory, a graduate of [the U.S. Military Academy at] West Point, was commissioned a second Lieut. in the U.S. Army 1831; attained rank of Major General in 1865. He had extensive active service in the Mexican and Civil Wars and was decorated for gallantry in the battles of San Pasqual 1846, and San Gabriel 1747 [sic]."[98]

He graduated from the U.S. Military Academy 1 July 1826, 14th in his class. Bvt. 2nd Lt. 1 July 1831; 2nd Lt. 1 July 1831; resigned 30 September 1836; 1st lt. Topographical Engineers 7 July 1838; Capt. 24 April 1851; Maj., 2nd Cavalry, 3 March 1855; transferred to 1st Cavalry 26 May 1855; Lt. Col. 31 January 1861; resigned 9 May 1861; Lt. Col., 3rd Cavalry, 14 May 1861; 6th Cavalry 3 August 1861; Brig. Gen. of Volunteers 17 March 1862; Maj. Gen. of Volunteers 25 September 1865; honorably mustered out of volunteer service 15 January 1866; Col., 5th Cavalry, 27 October 1863; retired with rank of Brig. Gen. 1 July 1876; Bvt. Capt. 6 December 1846 for gallantry and meritorious conduct in the battle of San Pasqual; Maj. 9 January 1847 for gallantry and meritorious conduct n the battles of San Gabriel and the Plains of Mesa; Lt. Col. 19 October 1857 for meritorious and distinguished service as Commissioner for running the boundary line between the U.S. and Mexico[99]; Col. 27 May 1862 for gallantry and meritorious service in the battle of Hanover Court House, Virginia; Brig. Gen. for gallantry and meritorious service in the battle of Fisher's Hill and in the Shenendoah Valley campaign; Maj. Gen. of volunteers 23 July 1864 and Maj. Gen. U.S. Army 13 March 1865 for gallantry and meritorious service in the battle of Cedar Creek, Virginia.[100]

The publications of the U.S.–Mexico boundary survey are numerous and extensive, for which researchers should consult standard bibliographies and library databases.

One of Emory's early works of military exploration is his well-known Notes of a Military Reocnnoissance from Fort Leavenworth, in Missouri, to San Diego, in California.[101] For his early survey of the Colorado River delta in the American Southwest, see Lieutenant Emory Reports.[102]

NOTES

87. William Hemsley Emory, II (1846–1917)

William Hemsley Emory, II, graduated from the U.S. Naval Academy in 1866. On 12 March 1868 he was promoted to Ensign; Master, 26 March 1869; Lieutenant, 21 March 1870; Lieutenant Commander, 26 May 1887; Commander, 29 December 1895.[110] He was promoted to his final grade, Rear Admiral, on 5 November 1906 and was commander of the 2nd Division of the North Atlantic Fleet during the world cruise of the Great White Fleet. "Admiral Emory had a distinguished career and was in command of the cutter 'Bear' during the famous Greely Relief Expedition in Alaska and for several years [four years including 1891] was Naval Attaché at the American Embassy in London."[111] He commanded the U.S.S. Yosemite during the Spanish-American War, with her single-handedly blockading the port of San Juan, Puerto Rico.[112] He downed his flag in Hong Kong, 18 November 1908, and retired 7 December 1908 after 56 years of service.[113]

[112] The U.S.S. Yosemite was a refitted cargo ship (S.S. El Sud) built in 1892 commissioned as an auxiliary cruiser armed with deck guns and fitted with armor plate athwart her engine compartment and a berm of coal around her boilers. Nonetheless, the 6,179-ton cruiser, acquired by the U.S. Navy in 1898 in response to the outbreak of war, stood off of San Juan, Puerto Rico, on 25 Jun 1898 to participate in the blockade of the port. When the S.S. Antonio Lopez attempted to run the blockade into port, the Yosemite attacked the vessel even while under heavy fire from shore batteries and gunboats. During the engagement, the Antonio Lopez was nearly destroyed. After a world cruise in various duties, she was blown from her anchorage–first ashore and then to sea–during a hurricane on 13 Nov 1900

The world cruise of the Great White Fleet was the brainchild of President Theodore Roosevelt, a demonstration of American naval prowess in sending a fleet of battleships more than 43,000 miles on a world circumnavigation from 16 December 1907 to 22 February 1909. Although a couple of ships were assigned and reassigned to the fleet, most of the world cruise comprised 14 battleships, divided into four divisions.

During the first leg of the world cruise, from Hampton Roads, Virginia, to San Francisco, California, by way of the Strait of Magellan, R/Adm William H. Emory commanded the Second Division when the fleet set sail, including the U.S.S. Georgia[114] (BB-15, squadron flagship), New Jersey (BB-16), Rhode Island (BB-17) and Virginia (BB-13). During this leg of the world tour he sailed through the Straits of Magellan. In California, Emory transferred his flag to the Third Division for the second leg of the cruise, between San Francisco and Puget Sound and back; comprising U.S.S. Louisiana (BB-19, squadron flagship), Virginia (BB-13), Missouri (BB-11), and Ohio (BB-12). Emory continued his command of the Third Divisions during the third leg of the cruise, from San Francisco to Manila, in the Philippines. In Manila, he transferred his flag to the Fourth Division, which he commanded for the fourth and final leg of the cruise, Manila to Hampton Roads, by way of the Suez Canal; comprising U.S.S. Wisconsin[115] (BB-9, squadron flagship), Illinois (BB-7), Kearsarge (BB-5), and Kentucky (BB-6).

140. Edward Bourke[9] Emory (Edward Bourke[8] Emory, John Register[7], Thomas[6], John[5], John[4], John[3], Arthur[2], John[1]) was born 1883 in Maryland; died 1950. He married Susannah Watson about 1907, daughter of William Watson and Rebecca Glenville. She was born May 1883 in Maryland; died after 1929.

Children of Edward Emory and Susannah Watson are:
160 i. Anna R.[10] Emory, born about August 1908 in Maryland.
161 ii. William W. Emory, born about 1913 in Maryland.

For information about Edward Bourke and Susannah (Watson) Emory, see the main Smith Family genealogy under Susannah Watson [No. 356 in that genealogy].

The Circuitous Link to Benjamin Franklin (including Bache and Emory)

When Susannah Watson of our Smith family married Edward Bourke Emory, she joined into a circuitous genealogical connection to Benjamin Franklin and, through the Franklin descendants, other notable American families like Bache and Dallas. The genealogy passes through two additional marriages where it joins with Sarah Franklin (1743-1808), daughter of Benjamin Franklin.

Descendants of Thomas Emory

Generation No. 1

1. Thomas[6] Emory (John[5], John[4], John[3], Arthur[2], John[1]) was born 24 March 1782, and died before 1850. He married Anna Maria Hemsley 13 June 1805, daughter of William Hemsley and Anna Tilghman. She was born 05 March 1787 in Maryland.

Children of Thomas Emory and Anna Hemsley are:

	2	i.	Ann[7] Emory, born 24 March 1806. She married Dr. William H. Thomas; born of Easton, Maryland.
	3	ii.	Sarah Emory, born 17 January 1808. She married William Cooke Tilghman.
	4	iii.	Thomas Alexander Emory, born 09 March 1809. He married Winder.
+	5	iv.	William Hemsley Emory, born 09 September 1811 at "Poplar Grove", Queen Anne's Co., Maryland; died 01 December 1877 in Washington, D.C.
	6	v.	Henrietta Earle Emory, born 30 January 1814.
	7	vi.	Robert Emory, Jr., born 1815.
	8	vii.	John Register Emory II, born 01 November 1818 at "Poplar Grove", Queen Anne's Co., Queen Anne's Co., Maryland; died 29 March 1880 at "Poplar Grove", Queen Anne's Co., Maryland.
	9	viii.	Albert Troup Emory, born 09 August 1821. He married Sarah Winder.
	10	ix.	Frederick Emory, born 09 September 1829. He married undetermined wife.
	11	x.	Blanchard Emory, born 22 November 1831, of "Poplar Grove", Queen Anne's Co., Maryland.

See the Emory collateral genealogy (above) for information about the extended Emory family.

Generation No. 2

5. William Hemsley[7] Emory (Thomas[6], John[5], John[4], John[3], Arthur[2], John[1]) was born 09 September 1811 at "Poplar Grove", Queen Anne's Co., Maryland, and died 01 December 1877 in Washington, D.C. He married Matilda Wilkins Bache 29 May 1838 in Washington, D.C., daughter of Richard Bache and Sophia Dallas. She was born 15 February 1819 in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, and died 22 January 1900 in 1718 H St., N.W., Washington, D.C.

The second link is through Richard Bache (1737-1811), who married Sarah Franklin (1743-1808), daughter of Benjamin Franklin. Their granddaughter, Matilda Bache, married William Hemsley Emory (see above). The descendancy passes through the following lineage:

1 Benjamin Franklin
4 Sarah (Franklin) Bache
12 Richard Bache [son of Richard Bache (1737-1811)]
47 Matilda Wilkins (Bache) Emory

Descendants of Benjamin Franklin

Generation No. 1

1. Benjamin[5] Franklin (Josiah[4], Thomas[3] Franckline, Henry[2], Thomas[1]) was born 17 January 1705/06 in Boston, Massachusetts, and died 17 April 1790 in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. He met Deborah Read 01 September 1730 in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, daughter of John Read and Sarah. She was born 1708 in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, and died 19 December 1774 in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania.

Children of Benjamin Franklin and Deborah Read are:

\+ 2 i. William[6] Franklin, born 01 September 1731 in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania; died 17 November 1813 in London, England.
3 ii. Francis Folger Franklin, born 17 October 1732 in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania; died 21 November 1736 in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania.
\+ 4 iii. Sarah Franklin, born 22 September 1743 in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania; died 05 October 1808 in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania.

NOTES

It is superfluous to include notes about Benjamin Franklin (1705/06–1790) [No. 1] given the overwhelming amount of historical, and easily obtained, information about the man. [116] Suffice it to say, he was a printer, Signer of the Declaration of Independence, and Minister Plenipotentiary to France. His will is dated 17 July 1788; probate 23 April 1790, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. He was buried 18 April 1790 in Christ Church Burial Ground, 5th and Arch Sts., Philadelphia, Pennsylvania.

[116] An interesting diversion may be had through the letters of Benjamin Franklin and his correspondents, which now are available through a searchable website, Frankin Papers Online, www.franklinpapers.org.

Of his burial place, the following traditional note was published in 1864:[117]

> "Next to the tomb of Washington this grave has probably more general interest than any in the country. The great Benjamin Franklin rests here, side by side with the partner of his life. The plain stone that covers their resting place reflects his character better than any epitaph, and the simple inscription affords abundant scope for medicate. The locality of the tomb is in a retired part of the grounds, and the grave until recently could only be visited with difficulty; but in the year 1858 a portion of the wall next to it was taken down and an iron railing substituted, so that a view of the grave can now readily be obtained without entering the grounds.
> "The plain appearance of the tomb must strike every one as unworthy of the memory of Franklin, over whose remains one would naturally look for an imposing monument commemorative of his worth; but the stone as seen here is such as was contemplated by him before his death, and particularly ordered in his will.
> "The following is an extract from the codicil to his will, dated 23d June, 1789, the year before his death:—
> "'I wish to be buried by the side of my wife, if it may be, and that a marble stone to be made by Chambers, six feet long, four feet wide, plain, with only a small moulding round the upper edge, and this inscription,
> BENJAMIN > and } FRANKLIN
> DEBORAH
> 178– "

The dark-patinaed railing is still in place today, and as testimony to the continued popularity of visits, the brass is always well polished at the level at which people grasp it while viewing the graves. The actual will of Benjamin Franklin, while as a legal document it remains an official record of the City of Philadelphia, it is kept in the vault of the American Philosophical Society Library, two and a half blocks south of the Franklin grave, the institution that Franklin himself founded in 1743 and over which he presided as its president until his death.

Deborah (Read) Franklin (1708–1774), wife of Benjamin Franklin, was buried 22 December 1774 in Christ Church Burial Ground, 5th and Arch Sts., Philadelphia, Pennsylvania.

Francis Folger Franklin (1732–1736) [No. 3] is buried in Christ Church Burial Ground, 5th and Arch Sts., Philadelphia, Pennsylvania.

(wife of Richard Bache)

She is buried in Congressional Cemetery, Washington, D.C., R32/S193.

42. Alexander Dallas Bache (1806–1867)

Quite a lot of biographical material is available that relates to Alexander Dallas Bache, which follows a distinguished career teaching in military and civilian life and serving in administrative capacities in Government service. His obituary in The National Intelligencer upon his death probably serves as an adequate contemporary summary:[122]

> "Professor Alexander Dallas Bache was born, July 19, 1806 at Philadelphia, Pa. He was the nephew of George M. Dallas, former Vice President of the United States, and great-grandson of Dr. Benjamin Franklin. He graduated from the U.S. Military Academy July 1, 1825, at the head of a distinguished class and served for one year as Assistant Professor of Engineering at the Military Academy. Before leaving the Army in 1829, Bache was called to the chair of Natural Philosophy and Chemistry in the University of Pennsylvania, which position he held for eight years. During that time he was also engaged upon scientific researchers in chemistry and physics; and, as a member of the Franklin Institute, actively participated in its work, particularly in experimenting on steam-boiler explosions.
> "In 1836 he organized Girard College and became its first President. He went to Europe to study European methods of instruction and discipline; and, upon his return made an elaborate report on scientific and literary education, which was subsequently adopted by the Philadelphia school system.
> "Bache served as Superintendent of the Geodetic and Hydrographic Survey of the Coasts of the United States, and of the Office of Weights and Measures from 1843 until his death. In addition, he established standard Weights and Measures for the United States; served as a Regent of the Smithsonian Institution; was a member of the Light-house Board; and was Commissioner for various harbor and river improvements. During the Civil War, Bache was Vice-President of the U.S. Sanitary Commission. He was President of the American Philosophical Society; of the American Association for the Advancement of Sciences; and founder and first president of the National Academy of Sciences.
> "The funeral procession will be formed at the Coast Survey office, on New Jersey Avenue at 3 p.m. on Sunday . . . ."

He is buried in Congressional Cemetery, Washington, D.C., R32/S194.

Regarding his military service, the Biographical Register of the U.S. Military Academy records the following information:[123]

> "Graduated 1st of 37. Cadet at the Military Academy, July 1, 1821, to July 1, 1825, when he was graduated and promoted the Army to Bvt. 2d. Lieut. And 2d Lieut., Corps of Engineers.
> "Served at the Military Academy, as Asst. Professor of Engineering, August 31, 1825, to July 31, 1826; and as Asst. Engineer in the construction of Ft. Adams, Newport Harbor, R.I., 1826-29. Resigned, June 1, 1829."

As first president of Girard College, in Philadelphia, in 1836-1841, he served in the establishment of facilities and curricula. The school did not open to students until 1848. He also was the first president of Central High School, in Philadelphia, in 1839.

[123] Cullum: The Biographical Register of the U.S. Military Academy Class of 1825.

The high point of his distinguished career is generally considered to be his years with the U.S. Coast Survey. During his European tour to study educational systems there on behalf of Girard College, he had had a chance to meet with Europe's leading savants, including Alexander von Humboldt, Francois Arago, and Karl Friedrich Gauss, when he then became convinced that American science required professionalization of the kind long established in Europe. He implemented this task when he assumed the superintendent's position of the U.S. Coast Survey in 1843. The following portion of a historical sketch of the Coast Survey places the man in perspective:[124]

> "In acquiring the superintendency of the Survey, Bache displayed many of the political and organizational traits that would do him so well in future battles with Congress and elements of the Navy. Bache had an amazing ability to galvanize the American scientific community behind him, with a few notable exceptions, and accomplish his ends. He used the synergism of the American scientific/intellectual community to influence the political process for the good of the Survey and the American scientific community. In this instance, it might also be added for his own good. Besides this backing of the scientific community, Bache also had 'the backing of his extensive family connection, at that period doubtless the most powerful and influential in the country, commonly known in those days by the nickname of "the Coburges", in allusion to the way in which, in the England of that day, offices of trust and profit had been bestowed upon the family connections of the Prince-Consort.'"

Nancy (Fowler) Bache (after 1800–1870)
(wife of Alexander Dallas Bache [No. 42])

She is buried in Congressional Cemetery, Washington, D.C., R32/S196.

45. Richard Bache (junior) (1813–1850)

He drowned 27 March 1850 with Lt. Robert L. Browning while performing a reconnaissance survey for the Navy in the vicinity of Point St. George, near present Crescent City, northern California. The bodies were retrieved in April by the U.S. Coast Survey ship Ewing under the command of Lt. William Pope McArthur.[125]

Richard Bache was buried November 1851 in Congressional Cemetery, Washington, D.C., R32/S192. A Washington newspaper reported:[126]

> "The remains of Lieut. Richard M. Bache, of the navy of the United States were on Saturday borne to their last resting place in the Congressional burying ground, attended by his relations and a few of his many navy and army friends who chanced to be in Washington at the time.

"Our readers may remember that he was drowned while on active service in Humboldt's Bay, of Upper California, when bravely striving to rescue a comrade from the breakers. His memory will be warmly cherished by those who knew him, and by none more fervently than his companions of the navy, where all believed him to be as capable an officer and as gallant a gentleman as ever sailed upon the ocean, or sacrificed a life of youth and hope to the service of the country."

NOTES

17. Franklin Bache (1792–1864)

Numerous biographical sources are available for Franklin Bache.[127] He was a physician, chemist, and author, having earned an A.B. in 1810, and an M.D. in 1814, from the University of Pennsylvania. He had studied privately under Drs. Benjamin Rush and James Rush. In his deep interests in the chemistry of medicine, he published several standard texts on the subject. But his most deeply researched and most far-reaching work was with the Pharmacopoeia of the United States of America and Dispensary of the United States of America, the income from which made him wealthy, remarkably accomplished even though he did not himself undertake research in the field. He was awarded an honorary membership in the American Pharmaceutical Association.

Aglae (Dabadie) Bache (1796–1835)
(wife of Franklin Bache)

Her brother was Albert Dabadie, who was nominated by President Andrew Jackson to be the American Consul in Venice, 12 December 1836; confirmed by the Senate, 9 January 1837; and recalled by President James K. Polk, 18 December 1845.[128]

62. Albert Dabadie Bache (1832–1895)

At the time of the 1860 U.S. census, Albert Dabadie Bache resided in his father's household in the 7th Ward, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. His occupation there was listed as "Manufacturer".

He served in the U.S. Army and the U.S. Navy. He enlisted in the Union army on 25 April 1861 and served in Co. A of the 17th Pennsylvania Infantry; mustered out on 2 August 1861 in Philadelphia. Later during the Civil War he was a captain's clerk aboard the U.S.S. Hartford[129], Adm. Farragut's flagship on the Mississippi River. In the late

[129] The U.S.S. Hartford was a screw sloop of war displacing 2,900 tons, length 225 ft, 44 ft beam. She was launched 22 Nov 1858, commissioned 27 May 1859, and decommissioned 20 Aug 1926. She sank at her berth on 20 Nov 1956. (>>U.S. Naval Historical Center, Dictionary of American Naval Fighting Ships, website http://www.history.navy.mil/dansfs/h3/hartford.htm; accessed 22 Nov 2006.) The U.S.S. Hartford was the flagship of Adm. David Farragut in command of the West Gulf Blockading Squadron, when he ran past Confederate forts on the lower Mississippi River to take the port of New Orleans on 29 Apr 1862. On 5 Aug 1864, he took the heavily mined Mobile Bay from Confederate forces, during which engagement he uttered the famous phrase, "Damn the torpedoes, full speed ahead!"

1860s he went to the Far East as an assistant paymaster on the U.S.S. Iroquois[130] of the Asiatic Squadron, and was present at the time when Japan was opened to western trading.

The list of Officers of the Continental and U.S. Navy and marine Corps, 1775-1900 lists the following for Albert D. Bache:[131]

Acting Assistant Paymaster, 19 November 1862
Passed Assistant Paymaster 23 July 1866
Paymaster, 11 June 1868
Pay Inspector, 12 September 1893
Retired 23 May 1894

His diary from his time aboard the U.S.S. Hartford, and his day book from his time aboard the U.S.S. Iroquois, are in the collections of the American Philosophical Society, in Philadelphia. A few selections from the latter journal, during the mission to Japan, are as follows:[132]

> 27 November 1867: "Bound for Nagasaki Japan, at which place we are ordered to rendezvous by December 15th to participate in the opening of the ports, by Jany 1st 1868".
> 5 Dec: "At Sea bound for Nagasaki Japan—Have been 173 days at sea this cruise so far & have sailed over 22,000 miles."

NOTES

44. George Mifflin Bache (senior) (1811–1846)

Lt. George Mifflin Bache commanded the U.S. Coast Survey Brig Washington.[133] During a hurricane, about noon on 8 September 1846 off the coast of Cape Hatteras, North Carolina, a heavy sea swept Lt. Bache and ten other men overboard. The brig was dismasted and was not until 22 September anchored in harbor at Philadelphia.

A newspaper account reported the eventual safe return of the Brig Washington at the Philadelphia Navy Yard:[134]

> "The U.S. Brig Washington—This vessel arrived at Philadelphia on Friday, having been towed to within fifty miles of the Capes by the frigate Constitution, which vessel was found to Boston, and continued on her course. She was last from Rio with a convoy, and is reported all well.
> "The Washington arrived in command of Lieut. John Hall."

[133] The Washington was a revenue cutter of unknown dimensions, the second cutter of that name. She was originally built for the U.S. Navy in 1837 but transferred to the U.S. Coast Survey on 23 Apr 1840. Later, again in the service of the navy, she participated with Commo. Matthew C. Perry's forces during the war with Mexico, taking part in the capture of Tobasco, 16 Jun 1847. Returned again to the Treasury Department, she underwent extensive repairs in New York during most of 1852, operating thereafter mostly off the coast of the northeastern U.S. She was sent to the Gulf of Mexico in 1859 and served in Louisiana until the outbreak of the Civil War, when she was taken by the Confederacy. Although she was being fitted for sea in Jun 1861, there is no further record of her. Two days later, an extensive record of events was written by "A Naval Officer" from Philadelphia to the Baltimore Patriot, which was recopied to The National Intelligencer:[135]

> "After a pleasant cruise of about a month in the Gulf Stream, where she had been employed surveying, the United States brig Washington, Lieut. Commanding George M. Bache, stood in on the 7th instant for the Capes of Virginia. As the weather appeared threatening, the wind fresh and blowing on shore, great anxiety was felt to reach an anchorage. The night came on dark and lowering, and, as we neared the land, all eyes were turned to windward to catch the glimmer of the light for which we were striving, (that upon Smith's Island,) through the haze and squalls, now beginning to obscure the horizon to windward. About eleven, our hearts were gladdened by the welcome cry of 'light ho!' from the lookout; but the joy was doomed to be of short duration. The light upon Cape Henry, without making which the harbor cannot be entered, must have been obscured by a squall, for when we brought by the wind, after bearing up for it, expecting every moment to make the looked-for beacon, always cheering to the mariner, (in our case we felt it to be our only hope,) the terrible cry of 'breakers ahead!' struck a pang to hearts throbbing with hope, and told that we were abandoned to the horrors of a lee shore, and that our only prospect of safety lay in being able to carry sail against the wind. Sea and current forcing us upon Cape Hatteras, the terror of seamen, this all felt to be a forlorn hope, for the gale, now increased in violence, howled ominously through the rigging, and already our little vessel staggered under her canvass. The sky was obscured by flying masses of dark clouds; the crests of the waves, heaving their dark volumes to the sky, flashed with the ghastly phosphorescent light often observed in storms, and once the sea ahead was lit up for a few seconds by a pale blue light, known to seamen as the Corpus Santo, and whose appalling appearance they superstitiously regard as the precursor of misfortune and wreck; the barometer fell rapidly, and every thing foretold a terrible strife of the heavens.
> "Upon discovering the breakers, the brig was immediately worn with her head off shore; the courses reefed, her topsails double reefed and set. Nobly the gallant craft did her part; groaning in every timber, her tall masts bowing to the blast. Daylight found her still dragging on and rising to the seas which appeared pressing on to her destruction; it brought an increase of wind and most gloomy prospects; the sea ran fearfully high, and appeared one sheet of foam as far as the eye could reach. We had lost during the night the lee boats, which had filled and torn from the davits; jib and flying-jib booms, topmast, staysail, etc. The lead, every cast of which had been watched with deep anxiety, told that we were rapidly drifting upon the shore. By seven the wind had increased to a hurricane; sail after sail had either been taken in, or, splitting with a noise like thunder, blew into ribands to leeward, the yards shivering like pipe-stems. Nothing remained but the fore-topsail, unbonnetted, under which the brig 'lay to' until 11 a.m., when the hurricane had reached its height, and raged with extraordinary violence, surpassing any thing we had ever seen. The brig lay over completely on her side, the water boiling over the lee rail; we were obliged to cling to the rigging to prevent being blown or washed overboard, for the sea, appearing uprooted from its bed, and borne in huge masses through the air, constantly swept our decks. The lee guns were thrown overboard, and subsequently the weather ones, and the helm put up; she refused to answer it, and the order was given to cut away the mainmast; it was promptly obeyed, as was every other, our noble crew behaving with the steadiness and discipline characteristic of 'men-of-war's men.' In its fall the mainmast carried away the head of the foremast, topmast, and fore topsail yards, which hung in a mass to leeward; every exertion was made to get clear of the wreck, and the shattered hull of the Washington steered wildly on before the hurricane to the shore she had striven so well to clear. The anchors had been prepared for letting go as the last hope; yet no one imagined that the cables would hold for a moment n that furious sea. The horrors of the scene baffled description. The fierce howling of the hurricane, the roaring of the waves, breaking in irregular masses around us, and pressing on madly in our wake, as if eager to be in at the death, were added to the crashing of spars, which, falling from aloft or launched on board by thee sea, now made sad havoc among us. Two officers and several of the crew had been borne wounded below; scarcely one among us escaped injury; and yet throughout this trying scene not a sign of flinching; fore and aft not a blanched cheek, was to be seen; orders were given and executed with the coolness of every day maneuvering. Never did the writer feel so proud of his country's seamen as then. As we neared the breakers, each man awaited the inevitable fate with a calmness and self-possession almost incredible.

"At or near the meridian the helm was put down, and the starboard anchor let go; as she came to the wind a heavy sea broke on board, throwing the brig upon her beam ends, shifting tanks, ballasts, etc. in the hold, carrying away on deck cabin, wheel, boats, bulwarks, etc., and washing overboard nearly every soul; but thrown aboard by the sea, as she righted half full of water, or clinging to fragments of the wreck towing, all succeeded in regaining the deck, excepted our lamented commander, Lieut. Bache, and ten of the crew, whose names are subjoined. In a moment they were swept from our view; that moment showed them calm and composed—the determined spirit which supported them on board seemed still to animate them. One noble fellow, as he passed astern, waved his hat in token of adieu, and the driving spray hid them forever from our sight. We supposed ourselves among the breakers, and that our unfortunate shipmates had but anticipated our doom—still it was a bitter pang to seem them thus cut off from among us, and many an eye which had calmly confronted death mistrusted at their fate. They were among the flower of our crew; better seamen never trod a deck, and long will be cherished the memory of their generous, kindly natures. My pen is unequal to the task of paying a fitting tribute to the memory of our departed commander. To rare professional accomplishments, he added every virtue which ennobles the human character. Never was a commander more sincerely beloved and respected by those who served under him; his duty was always uppermost n his mind, and he last words we heard him utter were addressing his officers when they stood together upon the brink of eternity: 'Gentlemen, I hope you think I have done my duty—have used every exertion to save the vessel.' He had indeed done his duty, with the skill and courage which distinguished him; no mortal could have done more. Yet, when there appeared no earthly hope, God was mercifully pleased to succor us; the hurricane abated, our cables, veered to the 'better end,' (contrary to all expectation,) held, and the anchors dragging checked her drift; soon after the wind suddenly shifted to the northward and westward, the sea went down considerably, and, still dragging, the brig tailed off shore. She was lightened of kentledge, etc, the foremast cut away, and rode easily; at sunset Cape Hatteras was seen close aboard. Until the 12th, we rode to a heavy gale from the northward, with two anchors ahead—the stream cable had parted. It was a period of painful suspense. Our cables bearing a heavy strain, we expected every moment to part, and the breakers upon the cape roaring astern. We were employed rigging jury masts, but, having saved only a few light spars, managed badly. Upon the evening of the 12th, the windy dying away, hove in on the larboard chain, and found the anchor gone. In heaving up the starboard one, when near the bows, its shackle-bolt drew, and it was also lost; made sail upon the jury masts and stood to sea. The next day spoke the brig J. Peterson, of New York, and by her was kindly supplied with an anchor and a few spare spars, and the next day the steamer 'Palmetto,' obtained from her a small boat. Upon the 15th, wafted by light airs from the southward, got within thirty miles of Cape Henry, when the wind again coming out fresh from the northeast, were again in great peril—barely succeeded in weathering 'Hatteras Shoals,' and again were blown into the Gulf stream, where he > 'lay to' in a gale from the northward and eastward until the 17th, when it abated, and in the afternoon, to the great joy of all hands, a man-of-war, showing American colors, was descried standing towards us. As she neared us we recognized with emotions and pride and pleasure the well-known figure-head of the 'Constitution.' We were immediately boarded, and taken in tow by her, and upon the evening of the 21st exchanging with her gallant crew three hearty cheers, we cast off and stood in to the Capes of Delaware, where we anchored upon the 22d, accompanied by a pilot boat. We were nearly destitute of water, provisions, and of every comfort, when we fell in with 'Old Ironsides,' and shall long remember with gratitude the kind sympathy extended towards us by her officers, and the alacrity and generosity with which they supplied all our wants.

Stanford, Francis Butler, Lewis Maynard, Wm. Wright, seamen[136]; Peter Hanson and Edward Grennian, ordinary seamen. The surviving officers of the Washington are John Hall, R.N. Stembel, J.R.M. Mullany, Lieuts.; S.D. Trenchard, acting master; E.J. Rutter, passed assistant surgeon; Edward Donaldson and J.K. Murray, passed midshipmen; J.J. Ricketts, captain's clerk; B. F. Ricketson, master's mate."

A commemorative marker was placed for Lt. George Mifflin Bache in Congressional Cemetery, Washington, D.C. (R32/S190), with the other graves of the Bache family.

137. George Mifflin Bache (junior) (1840–1896)

George Mifflin Bache[137] was appointed Midshipman on 9 November 1857 and graduated from the U.S. Naval Academy in 1861. Passed Midshipman Bache went to sea in the sloop Jamestown[138], defending the Atlantic coast from Confederate naval forces. He served briefly aboard the steam sloop Powhatan before transferring to the Mississippi Rive squadron late in 1862, where on 8 November he received orders to take command of the newly built sternwheel casemate gunboat Cincinnati.[139] He continued his command of the Cincinnati until it was sunk on [136] In the newspaper account of 26 Sep, aforementioned, it listed the names of the men lost overboard. Other than the rank of Lt. Bache, the article unaccountably singled out "two colored servants, Francis Butler and Lewis Maynard", who otherwise were seamen of the ship's crew.

[138] The Jamestown was a sloop of war launched in 1844 at the Navy Yard in Gosport, Virginia; commissioned 12 Dec. She displaced 1,150 tons; 163 ft long, 32 ft beam Her first service was as the flagship of Commo. Charles W. Skinner, operating off the west coast of Africa to suppress the slave trade. After continued service she was decommissioned, but the outbreak of war brought her again to service on 5 Jun 1861, at which time Passed Midshipman Bache came aboard. During 1861 and early 1862, she captured or destroyed several Confederate vessels. On 12 Oct 1862 she departed for the Pacific, at which time probably Bache transferred from the ship. The ultimate fate of the Jamestown was in the Marine Hospital Service for quarantine purposes under the Treasury Department, from Sep 1892. On 3 Jan 1913, again on the Navy List, she was destroyed by fire in the Norfolk Navy Yard. (>>Dictionary of American Naval Fighting Ships, U.S. Naval Historical Center website http://www.history.navy.mil/danfs/j2/jamestown-i.htm; accessed 21 Aug 2006.)

[139] The Cincinnati was a 512-ton sternwheel gunboat, 175 ft long, 51 ft beam. She was built in 1861 under a War Department contract by James Eads, St. Louis, Missouri; commissioned Mound City, Ill., 16 Jan 1862 with Lt. G. M. Bache in command. She was assigned to duty with the U.S. Army in the Western Gunboat Flotilla under naval Flag Officer A. H. Foote. She was sunk during engagements at Fort Pillow, 10 May 1862; raised and returned to service, transferred to the Navy on 1 Oct 1862 with other boats of the Western Gunboat Flotilla. After she was sunk in the attacks on Vicksburg batteries, she was raised again in Aug 1863 and returned to patrol duty on the Mississippi River until Feb 1865 and placed in service in Mobile Bay and Mississippi Sounds. She was decommissioned 4 Aug 1865 at

27 May 1863 while dueling with Confederate batteries defending the approaches to Vicksburg, Tennessee. Thereafter he assumed command of the sidewheel gunboat Lexington[140], participating in a number of engagements. It was during the Red River campaign that the Lexington participated in a critical maneuver:[141]

> "Upon reaching Grand Encore the fleet faced a danger situation. The Red River, normally high until late June, had fallen so much that the gunboats could not pass over the rapids and it seemed that the better part of the Mississippi Squadron was doomed to destruction as the Union Army made plans for evacuation. However, Lt. Col. Joseph Bally USA, proposed a plan for building a series of dams across the rocks of the falls and raising the water. A center opening would let the ships ride out on the crest of the water. On 9 May 1864 the dam had nearly reached completion but the pressure of the water became so great that it swept away two stone barges which swung in below the dam on one side. Seeing this accident, admiral Porter mounted a horse and rode up to where upper vessels were anchored and ordered Lexington to get underway.
> "Lieutenant Bache succeeded in getting Lexington over the upper falls, then steered her directly for the opening in the dam where the furiously ranging waters seemed to promise only her destruction. She entered the gap in the dam with a full head of steam and pitched down the powerful torrent with several heavy rolls, hung for a moment on the rocks below, then reached the calm, deep water to the ringing cheers of some 30,000 voices. She was soon followed by the remainder of the vessels and the Union's valuable fleet was saved."

During 1864, George Mifflin Bache returned to the Atlantic blockade as executive officer of the Powhatan[142]; Lt. Bache participated in assaults against Fort Fisher, North Caroline, in December 1864 and January 1865. He was wounded in the second attack but not severely. After the war, he served aboard the Sacramento[143], which sailed to [140] The Lexington was a 448-ton sidewheel steamer, 177 ft long, 36 ft beam, built at Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, in 1861 and purchased by the War Department for conversion as a gunboat at Cincinnati. In the middle of the Civil War, she was ordered on 29 Oct 1863 to the Tennessee River to support General Sherman at the beginning of his campaign into the heartland of the Confederacy. Thereafter she returned to the Mississippi River in support of the Red River campaign. She was decommissioned at Mound City, Illinois, 2 Jul 1865, and sold to Thomas Scott and Woodburn 17 Aug 1865.

[142] The Powhatan displaced 2,415 tons, 253 ft long, 45 ft beam. She was launched 14 Feb 1850 at Norfolk Navy Yard; commissioned 2 Sep 1852. In 1853 she sailed around the Cape of Good Hope to join the East India Squadron in Chinese waters. On 14 Feb 1854 she sailed into Yedo (Tokyo) Bay with Commo. Matthew C. Perry's squadron when the Japanese islands were first opened to the West; she was Perry's flagship when the treaty with Japan was singed on 31 Mar, returning with the treaty to the U.S. on 14 Feb 1856. She saw significant action throughout the Civil War, culminating with the capture of Fort Fisher, North Carolina, on 15 Jan 1865. After the war, she became the flagship of the South Pacific Squadron and returned to the Home Squadron in 1869. She was decommissioned 2 Jun 1886, sold 30 Jul to Burdette Pond of Meriden, Connecticut, and scrapped 5 Aug 1887. (>>Dictionary of American Naval Fighting Ships, U.S. Naval Historical Center website http://www.history.navy.mil/ danfs/p10/powhatan-i.htm; accessed 21 Aug 2006.)

[143] The Sacramento was launched 28 Apr 1862 at Portsmouth Navy Yard, New Hampshire; commissioned 7 Jan 1863. She displaced 2,100 tons, 229 ft long, 38 ft beam. After service in the Civil War she was decommissioned 21 Aug 1865 at Boston Navy Yard. She was recommissioned 17 Sep 1866 and sailed via the Cape of Good Hope to Indian waters. She grounded on 19 Jun 1867 on reefs at the mouth of the Godavary River; after all hands were saved she was battered to a total wreck. The crew embarked for the U.S. aboard the S.S. General Caulfield, arriving in New York on 19 Nov 1867. the Near East. On 19 June 1867 the Sacramento was destroyed on a reef at the mouth of the Godavary River in Madras, India. During 1869-1872 Lt. Cmdr. Bache was assigned to the steam sloop of war Juniata[144] on European station. Thereafter, he worked ashore in the Washington Navy Yard in ordnance duty, until Cmdr. Bache retired on 5 April 1875.

[144] The Juniata displaced 1,240 tons; launched 20 Mar 1862 at the Philadelphia Navy Yard; commissioned there on 4 Dec. After having been decommissioned at Philadelphia Navy Yard on 29 Jun 1867, she was recommissioned 19 Jul 1869 for European service; when she returned to the U.S. she was decommissioned again, at the Boston Navy Yard on 29 Jun 1872. Thereafter she was recommissioned again in 1873, serving on the northeastern U.S. coast. On 26 Jun 1873 she participated in efforts to locate survivors of Polaris, which had come to grief while exploring in the Arctic. Juniata steamed as far north as Upernavik, 250 miles above Godhaven, Greenland; returned to New York 1 Nov 1873. After additional service, decommissioned and commissioned yet again, Juniata departed in 1882 on a circumnavigation of the world under Comdr. George Dewey, returning in 1885. Eventually, Juniata was sold at the Portsmouth Navy Yard, 25 Mar 1891, to Herbert H. Ives. 154 iii. Sophia Bache Abert, born 04 December 1849 in Washington, D.C.; died 28 December 1906 in Buncombe Co., North Carolina. She married James Stanley Mallory; born 11 November 1841 in Bristol, Connecticut; died 14 December 1902 in Buncombe Co., North Carolina.
155 iv. Charles Abert, Jr., born 17 November 1852 in Washington, D.C. He married Martha Willson Stonestreet 14 January 1880; born 13 July 1857 in Rockville, Maryland.
156 v. Constantia Abert, born 1858.
157 vi. Allan McLane Abert, born 27 March 1865 in Homewood, Montgomery, Maryland.

NOTES

Charles Abert (1822–1897), husband of Henrietta Bache [No. 48], was the son of John James Abert (17 September 1788–27 January 1863) and Ellen Matlack Stretch (1792-1872). John James Abert was born in Shepherdstown, Virginia, and died in Washington, D.C. He is remembered as Col. Abert, whose name is nearly synonymous with the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers. A graduate of West Point in 1811, he declined an appointment and left the Army to marry Ellen Stretch. He returned as Bvt. Major of Topographical Engineers on 22 November 1814, and was honorably discharged 15 June 1815; but reinstated 2 May 1816. He was made Bvt. Lieutenant Colonel in the Topographical Engineers on 22 November 1824 and for ten years served faithfully in one grade. On 7 July 1838 he was made Colonel, at which grade he retired 9 September 1861. In 1829, he was promoted to lead the U.S. Army Corps of Topographical Engineers, which he commanded for 32 years, during which time a large part of the American West was mapped for the first time.[145] Retired in 1861. The Abert squirrel, Sciurus aberti, common in the West, was named for him.

\+ 13 ix. Hugh Hodge, born 20 August 1755; died 14 July 1798.

NOTES

2. Andrew Hodge (senior) (1711–1788/89)

He immigrated to the U.S. in 1730.

According to the Hodge Genealogy,

> "April 15, 1779, Andrew Hodge, of Philadelphia, probably this Andrew, was part owner of the 'Revenge Cutter,' Captain Coynham, master. Feb. 11, 1779, 'young Mr. Hodge' sent arms from Mr. Hodge's wharf to Capt. Mitchell's galley, 'for safety.' Mr. Hodge, tradition says, had fifteen children, but the names of eight only have been ascertained. Among those whose names have not been obtained was a daughter."[151]

At the time of the 1790 U.S. census Andrew Hodge's occupation is listed as merchant. He operated Hodge's Wharf on Water Street, between Arch and Race Sts., Philadelphia.

Residences of Andrew Hodge (from U.S. census and other sources):
1752: Bank St., Philadelphia, Pennsylvania
1790 census: 85 Water St. [old scheme], Philadelphia, Pennsylvania

His will, dated 10 September 1788, refers to a deceased daughter, Jane; probate 20 June 1789, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania.

7. James Hodge

He never married.

Samuel Hodgdon (1745–1824)
(husband of Mary Hodge [No. 9])

During the Revolutionary War, he was a Lieutenant in the Marines, 1776; Captain of Artillery, 1777; Principal Field Commissary of Military Stores in the Continental Army, 1777-1780; Deputy Commissary General, 1780-1781; Commissary General and assistant to the Quartermaster General (Thomas Pickering), 1781-1783; Quartermaster General, 1791-1792; Superintendent of Military Stores, 1794-1800. He attained the rank of Major.

He resided in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. In civilian life in 1813 he became the president of the Pennsylvania Company, a trust and insurance firm. He maintained a livery stable behind the City Tavern on 2nd Street at least during 1780-1782, which was noted that he had fitted up in "a most elegant manner".[152] In 1789 he acquired the old

The City Tavern on the west side of 2nd St. just north of Walnut St., was the general meeting place of numerous members of the Continental Congress and others; John Adams called it the "most genteel tavern in America". Razed in the 19th century, it was reconstructed on the same site, largely from existing plans, for the national Bicentennial in 1976. Now administered by the National Park Service, the City Tavern is a functioning tavern and restaurant, operated by a chef concessionaire.

Block House Tavern on Front St. In the 1790 census for Philadelphia, he has a property listed as "Vacant" at 71 N. Water St. (old numbering scheme); on the census sheet the entry is emended, "Maj. Hodgdon".

11. John Hodge (ca. 1748–1771)

He died at age 23. The Pennsylvania Gazette for 3 January 1771 reported that Dr. John Hodge died Sunday morning, the eldest son of Andrew Hodge.

---

3. William[2] Hodge (William[1]) was born in Ireland, and died between March 1783-Jun 1784 in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. He married Elinor. She died after June 1784.

Child of William Hodge and Elinor is:
\+ 14 i. Mary[3] Hodge.

NOTES

As a Philadelphia merchant, William Hodge (–1783/84) [No. 3] was a signer of the "non-importation act", 25 October 1765. According to the Hodge Genealogy, he probably had a daughter who in 1757 married William West.[153] His will refers to grandsons Francis West, Jr., and John Donaldson.

In his will, dated 7 March 1783, he gives his occupation as baker; will probated 9 June 1784, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania.

4. Hugh[2] Hodge (William[1]) was born in Ireland, and died Between October 1783-Dec 1784 in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. He married Hannah Harkum, daughter of John Harkum. She was born January 1720/21, and died 1805.

Child of Hugh Hodge and Hannah Harkum is:
15 i. Hugh[3] Hodge, born September 1743.

NOTES

4. Hugh Hodge (senior) (–1783/84)

In 1747, he was a tobacconist in Philadelphia, moved from Water St. next to Capt. Hopkins to a house where widow Harper lived next to Thomas Campbell, opposite the court house.[154]

His will, dated 10 October 1783 (probate 23 December 1784, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania), notes that he is a shopkeeper. It refers to a niece, Margaret Johnston, widow of nephew James Johnston; and to Hannah and Jane

Johnston, daughters of Margaret Johnston. (The will of his brother, William [No. 3], probated 9 June 1784 refers to James Johnson [sic] and his daughter, Mrs. McCullough, widow of John McCullough.)

Hannah (Harkum) Hodge (1720/21–1805)
(wife of Hugh Hodge [No. 4])

She was called "Aunt Hanna" by acquaintances. At the time of the 1790 U.S. census and in the 1796 Philadelphia city directory, she resided at 67 Market St. [old scheme]. Her will is dated 16 August 1794; probate 19 December 1805, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania.

15. Hugh Hodge (junior) (1743–)

According to the Hodge Genealogy, "b. as supposed, Sept. 1743; graduated at college in 1773; sailed for Europe and never afterwards heard from."[155]

Generation No. 3

8. Margaret[3] Hodge (Andrew[2], William[1]) died before 1781. She married John Bubenheim Bayard 1759 in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, son of James Bayard and Mary Asheton. He was born 11 August 1738 in Bohemia Manor, Cecil Co., Maryland, and died 07 January 1807 in New Brunswick, New Jersey.

Children of Margaret Hodge and John Bayard are:

NOTES

12. Andrew Hodge (senior) (1753–1835)

Information about the children of Andrew Hodge was supplemented by a partial transcription of data that had been written in a Hodge family Bible, posted online.[156]

He (as "Andrew Hodge, Junior") was one of numerous signers of a 1779 merchants' petition to the Committee of Trade for the City of Philadelphia, decrying the proposal that merchants reduce their wartime-inflated prices to those of pre-war levels. This inspired one of the "most remarkable debates of the Revolutionary era", which eventually brought Philadelphia citizens to decide upon the post-Revolutionary form of society that would evolve.[157]

Ann (Ledyard) Hodge (1757–1848)
(wife of Andrew Hodge [No. 12])

Second Presbyterian Church marriage records indicate her name was Nancy Lediard [sic].

24. John Ledyard Hodge (1784–1870)

He was the U.S. Consul at Marseilles, Frances. He never married.

27. William Ledyard Hodge (1790–1868)

He was Assistant Secretary of the Treasury under Secretary William M. Meredith in the administration of President Zachary Taylor.

31. Andrew Hodge (junior) (1797–1856)

He may have moved to New Orleans, Louisiana. He never married.

NOTES

34. Charles Hodge (1797–1878)

Rev. Charles Hodge was a graduate of Princeton College, 1815. He has been called "The Presbyterian Pope" and was the author of What Is Darwinism? He was a professor at the Princeton Theological Seminary.[161] His active life as a theologian was summarized by his son, Archibald Alexander Hodge in The Life of Dr. Charles Hodge[162]. Amongst his many opinions on theological matters was his objection to the postulates of Charles Darwin on the origin of species and matters that we today refer to as evolution.[163]

He was the editor of The Biblical Repertory and Theological Review. He was an abolitionist and wrote at least one tract on the subject.[164] A selection of his other works is as follows:

A Commentary on the Epistle to the Romans (The Religious Tract Society, London, 1837) new edition, rev., and in great measure rewritten (W. S. and A. Martien, Philadelphia, 1864); also various other editions

The Constitutional History of the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America (W. S. Martien, Philadelphia, 1839–1840); and later editions

The Way of Life (American Sunday-school Union, Philadelphia [1841?]); with later editions

The Faithful Mother's Reward (Presbyterian Board of Publication, Philadelphia, 1853)

What Is Presbyterianism? An Address Delivered Before the Presbyterian Historical Society at Their Anniversary Meeting in Philadelphia . . . . (Presbyterian Board of Publication, Philadelphia, 1855)

Commentary on the Epistle to the Ephesians (R. Carter and Brothers, New York, 1856)

An Exposition of the First Epistle to the Corinthians (R. Carter, New York, 1857)

An Exposition of the Second Epistle to the Corinthians (R. Carter and Brothers, New York, 1860)

Children are listed above under (18) Henry Hollyday.

Lloyd Family
Collateral Genealogy

(358 descendants)

The genealogy of the Lloyd family, as it relates to the extended Smith family genealogy through Covington, is as follows.

The Lloyd family is among one of the most publicly involved families of the Eastern Shore, whose lineage there spans several centuries. They are the so-called "Lloyds of Wye", about which much biographical and historical information has been published. Much of the information garnered here has been derived from the very informative website posted by the Talbot County Free Library.[172] Also see the various Lloyd entries in A Biographical Dictionary of the Maryland Legislature.[173]

Descendants of Lloyd

Generation No. 1

1. Lloyd[1]

Children of Lloyd are:

2 i. Cornelius[2] Lloyd, born 1608 in probably Wales; died 1654. He married Elizabeth Evans.

\+ 3 ii. Edward Lloyd, born about 1620 in probably Wales; died between 1695-1696 in England.

NOTES

Cornelius Lloyd (1608–) [No. 2] was a merchant in London by ca. 1635, when he emigrated to Virginia. In the 1640s–1650s he was a justice, burgess, and colonel in the militia in Lower Norfolk Co., Virginia.

Generation No. 2

3. Edward[2] Lloyd (Lloyd[1]) was born about 1620 in probably Wales, and died between 1695-1696 in England. He married (1) Alice Crouch after 1645. She died before 1650. He married (2) Frances about 1650. He married (3) Grace Mauldin after 1650. She died between 1700-1701.

Child of Edward Lloyd and Alice Crouch is:

+	4	i.	Col. Philemon[3] Lloyd, born 1647 in along the Nausemond or Elizabeth River, Virginia; died 22 June 1685 in Talbot Co., Maryland.

NOTES

"Edward Lloyd the Puritan" (ca. 1620–1695/96) [No. 3] immigrated to Virginia and settled in old Lower Norfolk Co. where he received a patent for land on the Elizabeth River, 31 March 1636. He removed to Anne Arundel Co., Maryland, in 1649–1650, where he patented "Pen Lloyd" (Lloyd's Head) and "Pendenny" on the north side of the Severn River. Subsequently he removed to Talbot Co., where in 1659 he patented "Heir Deir Lloyd" (Lloyd's Long Land), comprising 3,050 acres, and the adjoining "Linton". He returned to England in 1668.

Generation No. 3

4. Philemon[3] Lloyd (Edward[2], Lloyd[1]) was born 1647 in along the Nausemond or Elizabeth River, Virginia, and died 22 June 1685 in Talbot Co., Maryland. He married Henrietta Maria Neale 1669, daughter of James Neale and Anna Gill/Gynne. She was born 27 March 1647 in Spain, and died 04 May 1697.

Rich Neck

"Rich Neck", was the manor home of the Tilghman family for generations. The property, north of Claiborne, Talbot Co., on Rich Neck Road, was placed on the National Register of Historic Places in 1978. For years the manor house was "a political and social epicenter for Washington society". Today the estate encompasses some 600 acres, and in 2003 it was placed for sale by its then-owner Mrs. Ella Poe Burling. LandVest, a real estate corporation of Christie's Great Estates, conducted an intensive national campaign to offer the property but the maximized financial return expected was not realized in the market and the property was successfully re-offered through targeted marketing by subdividing its component farms and the main estate. The manor was obtained by a Washington, D.C., surgeon.[178]

124 iv. Emily Lloyd. She married Dean George Gifford Ward; from Lincoln.

NOTES

Capt. Richard Bennett Lloyd (senior) (1750–1787) [No. 44] was a Captain in the Colstream Guards. He resigned from the British Army during the American Revolution and emigrated to Maryland with his wife and children, where he had large real estate possessions. He stood for a full-length portrait in the Horse Guards uniform, by Benjamin West, which hangs in Wye House. Another portrait, by Charles Willson Peale in 1770, is in Annapolis; and a second one, possibly by Peale, is with descendants. He returned to England ca. 1785. He is buried in the Lloyd family cemetery at Wye House, Talbot Co., Maryland.

Edward Lloyd [No. 121] was sent back to Maryland from England, and he settled at or near Alexandria, Virginia.

Richard Bennett Lloyd (junior) (–1789) [No. 122] died of drowning.

Henry Lloyd [No. 123] was a Major in the India Army. He never married.

---

47. James[6] Lloyd (Richard[5], Edward[4], Philemon[3], Edward[2], Lloyd[1]) was born about 1756 probably at "Farley", Kent Co., Maryland, and died 1830. He married Elizabeth Tilghman 1780, daughter of James Tilghman and Ann Francis. She died before 1800.

Children of James Lloyd and Elizabeth Tilghman are:

125 i. Richard T.[7] Lloyd, died 1834 in New York.

88. Edward[6] Tilghman (Edward[5], Anna Maria[4] Lloyd, Philemon[3], Edward[2], Lloyd[1]) was born 11 December 1750 at Wye, Queen Anne's Co., Maryland, and died 01 November 1815 in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. He married Elizabeth Chew 26 May 1775, daughter of Benjamin Chew and Mary Galloway. She was born 10 November 1751 in Dover, Kent, Delaware, and died after November 1815.

Children of Edward Tilghman and Elizabeth Chew are:

	161	i.	Anna Mary[7] Tilghman.
+	162	ii.	Benjamin Tilghman.
	163	iii.	Edward Tilghman.
	164	iv.	Elizabeth Tilghman.
	165	v.	Mary Tilghman.

NOTES

Edward Tilghman (1750–1815) [No. 88] was a Brigade Major at the Battle of Long Island during the Revolutionary War. During 1794-1807 he was a trustee of the University of Pennsylvania.[190]

In 1778, Edward Tilghman fell into a situation wherein he had visited Philadelphia during the British occupation. The Council of Maryland ordered his arrest, but he was later cleared:[191]

> "Whereas it Appears from a Deposition made before this Board that Edward Tilghman son of Edward Tilghman hath gone into Phil[a] then and now in the Possession of the Enemy and hath again returned into this State not having had any License from the Governor and Council for his going to Philadelphia. It is therefore Ordered that the Sheriff of Queen Annes County take the said Edward Tilghman the Son if in his County and him immediately bring before this Board that he may be dealt with according to Law.

At the time of the 1790 U.S. census, Edward Tilghman was listed as "Atty at Law", residing at 116 Chestnut St. [old scheme], Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. The Philadelphia Bar Association recognizes him as one of the "Legends of the Bar", noting that he > ". . . was a superb jury trial lawyer who talked to jurors as if he was one of them. He mastered what was in his time the most intellectually difficult area of the law, contingent remainders and executory devises. A contemporary analysis of his capabilities noted that he was 'an advocate of great powers, purest integrity and brightest honor.'"[192]

90. Susannah Carroll[6] Tilghman (Edward[5], Anna Maria[4] Lloyd, Philemon[3], Edward[2], Lloyd[1]) died about 1800. She married Richard Ireland Jones between 1785-1786. He was born in England, and died 1844 in Maryland.

Child of Susannah Tilghman and Richard Jones is:
\+ 166 i. Arthur Tilghman[7] Jones, born about 1787.

NOTES

Richard Ireland Jones (–1844), husband of Susannah Tilghman [No. 90], arrived in Maryland in 1784, representing the family of Robert Eden (1741-1784)[193], the last colonial governor of Maryland, to whom Jones was related by marriage. After having had returned to England at the time of the Revolution, Eden, who had been made a Baronet, returned to Maryland after the war to make claims for his properties, during which time he also worked on claims for Lord Baltimore. Jones had been appointed to continue Eden's work on reacquiring what was possible of the pre-Revolutionary wealth and belongings of Frederick, Lord Baltimore.

Jones first settled in Annapolis, then joined his brother, Alfred, in Queen Anne's Co., where he married Susannah Carroll Tilghman. Between 1785 and 1798, on property owned by Susannah, Richard Ireland Jones built "Kennersley", a manor on South East Creek west of Church Hill, Queen Anne's Co., Maryland. Kennersley passed to Arthur Tilghman Jones upon her death, but soon after Arthur's marriage he fell in great debt, and Henry Hollyday of "Ratcliffe", a principal creditor, acquired Kennersley in 1827. The property descended in the Hollyday family until 1858, and thereafter through numerous hands to the present day.

91. Mathew[6] Tilghman (Edward[5], Anna Maria[4] Lloyd, Philemon[3], Edward[2], Lloyd[1]) was born 05 June 1760 in Queen Anne's Co., Maryland, and died before March 1801. He married Sarah Smyth before January 1786, daughter of Thomas Smyth.

Children of Mathew Tilghman and Sarah Smyth are:
167 i. Edward[7] Tilghman. He married Anna Maria Tilghman.
168 ii. Henry Tilghman. He married Martha Hall.
169 iii. Sarah Tilghman. She married Francis Hall.

NOTES

By January 1786, Mathew Tilghman (1760–1801) [No. 91] removed to Kent Co., Maryland. He was elected to the Lower House, Maryland Assembly, for Kent Co., 1789, 1792-1794; resigned to enter a vacancy in the Senate for the Eastern Shore, 1794-1796. After his death an administration bond was filed in Kent Co., 14 March 1801.

114. Mary Tayloe[7] Lloyd (Edward[6], Edward[5], Edward[4], Philemon[3], Edward[2], Lloyd[1]) She married Francis Scott Key 1802, son of John Key and Anne Penn. He was born 01 August 1779 in Frederick Co. [now Carroll Co.], Maryland, and died 11 January 1843 in Baltimore, Maryland.

Children of Mary Lloyd and Francis Key are:

197	i.	Elizabeth[8] Key. She married William Howard.
198	ii.	Philip Barton Key, born 1818; died 1859.

NOTES

Mary (Lloyd) Key [No. 114] was known as "Polly".

Francis Scott Key (1779–1843), husband of Mary Tayloe Lloyd, is best remembered as the author of "The Star Spangled Banner". He was the son of John Ross Key (an Army officer during the Revolutionary War) and Anne Phoebe (Penn) Dagworthy Charlton Key. By profession Francis Scott Key was a lawyer and writer. During the War of 1812, after detention aboard HMS Surprise, Key was released to the American ship, Minden, in Baltimore harbor. There, on the night of 13-14 September 1814, he witnessed the British naval bombardment and American defense of Fort McHenry. His lyrics, The Defense of Fort M'Henry, were written to the melody of To Anacreon in Heaven, a popular English drinking song composed by John Stafford Smith. Henry's lyrics were first printed in the Baltimore American on 21 September 1814 to modest attention. The "Defense" received greater recognition and acclaim during the Civil War, inspiring Congress to consider legislation for a national anthem, but it was not until 1931 that Key's lyrics were adopted as the national anthem. Francis Scott Key is buried in Mt. Olivet Cemetery, Frederick, Maryland. [198]

He married Sally Scott Murray 30 November 1797, daughter of James Murray. She was born 30 October 1775, and died 09 May 1854.

Children of Edward Lloyd and Sally Murray are:

+	199	i.	Edward[8] Lloyd, Jr., born 27 December 1798 in Annapolis, Anne Arundel, Maryland; died 11 August 1861 in Wye House, Talbot Co., Maryland.
	200	ii.	Daniel Lloyd.
	201	iii.	Anne Catherine Lloyd. She married Adm. Franklin Buchanan; born 13 September 1800 in Baltimore, Maryland; died 11 May 1874 in Maryland.

NOTES

119. Edward Lloyd (1779–1834)

Col. Edward Lloyd was a delegate to the Maryland General Assembly. He was elected to fulfill a vacant term in the U.S. House of Representatives, 27 September 1806, and appointed 3 December; the term expired 3 March 1808 and he did not seek re-election. He was elected Governor on 5 June 1809 to fill the unexpired term of Gov. Robert Wright, who had resigned [see no. 57 in the Coursey Family collateral genealogy, above]. His term expired after the election of 8 November 1811. On 12 February 1812 he was commissioned Lieutenant Colonel in the 9th Regiment, Maryland Militia, and served in the War of 1812. He was elected U.S. Senator 18 December 1819 and was re-elected in 1825. He died at the home of his brother-in-law, Henry H. Harwood, Annapolis. He is buried in the Lloyd family cemetery at Wye House, Talbot Co., Maryland.[199]

In various genealogies he is cited as "Edward Lloyd, V".

Confederate States Navy. He was appointed Midshipman in 28 January 1815, at age 14, promoted to Lieutenant in 1825, Commander in 1841, and Captain in 1855. He saw service against the Barbary Pirates in Tripoli, the Mediterranean, the Caribbean, and the Gulf of Mexico. During 1845-1847 he served as the first Superintendent of the U.S. Naval Academy in Annapolis, Maryland. During the U.S. naval expedition to Japan under Admiral Perry in the 1850s he commanded the steam frigate Susquehanna. Anticipating the secession of Maryland from the union, he resigned his commission in the U.S. Navy 22 April 1861, when he was Superintendent of the Washington Navy Yard, but applied for reinstatement when the state did not secede. The application was denied, and he joined the C.S. Navy at the rank of Captain. He headed the C.S. Navy Office of Orders and Detail and soon thereafter placed in command of the defenses of the James River, Virginia. He commanded the ironclad ship, C.S.S. Virginia (historically better known as the C.S.S. Merrimac that faced off against the U.S.S. Monitor), turning its trial voyage into a successful combat mission in Hampton Roads on 8 March 1862, in which action he was wounded. In August 1862 he was promoted to Admiral, the Confederate States' first, and sent to command naval forces in Mobile Bay, Alabama. He was in command of the ironclad C.S.S. Tennessee (which vessel he oversaw its construction) when the Confederate fleet unsuccessfully faced off against the Union fleet under Rear Admiral David Farragut during the historic engagement in Mobile Bay on 5 August 1864. He was wounded and captured and, his leg having had to be amputated, he spent several months as a prisoner, released in an exchange in February 1865. After the war, he returned to Maryland for a year, then returned to Mobile, Alabama, where until 1870 he was Secretary and State Manager of the Alabama Branch of the Life Association of America. He again returned to his family in Easton, Maryland, and lived there for the remainder of his life. In his honor, three U.S. Navy destroyers have been named U.S.S. Buchanan (DD-131, DD-484, DDG-14).[200]

He is buried in the Lloyd family cemetery at Wye House, Talbot Co., Maryland.

+	230	x.	Blanchard Emory, born 22 November 1831, from "Poplar Grove", Queen Anne's Co., Maryland.

NOTES

With the marriage of Thomas Emory to Anna Maria Hemsley the Smith family genealogy is accorded a link to an astonishing number of connections to historical American families. Her father was William Hemsley (1737–1812), member of the Continental Congress, 1782-1783; earlier Provincial Treasurer of Eastern Shore, Maryland, 1773, surveyor of Talbot Co., Maryland, Colonel of the Twentieth Battalion, Queen Anne's County Militia, 1777, Justice of the Peace for Queen Anne's Co., 1777, member of the Maryland State Senate, 1779-1881 and terms of 1786, 1790, 1800.[201] Anna Maria Hemsley's mother was Anna Maria Tilghman (1749/50–1817), and great grandparents in her paternal and maternal lineages (both) were Anna Maria Lloyd (1676–1748) and Richard Tilghman (1671/72–1737/38). Two of the brothers of Anna Maria Hemsley, William and Matthew, married Tilghman sisters, Margaret and Anne.

Cousins of various kinds, and their own marriages in turn, include numerous individuals of the Tilghman and Lloyd families, as well as others whose names are among the historical ranks both in Maryland and in Pennsylvania, such as Bache, Cadwalader, Chew, Coursey, Dallas, Foulke, Hodge, Hollyday, and McCall. Indeed, Anna Maria Hemsley Emory provides a genealogical reconnection with our own Smith family through Elizabeth Wilkinson, fourth wife of Joseph Moore Smith (1782–1863) [see Part II, Smith Family, No. 34] and their descendants.

Of the children of Thomas and Anna Maria Hemsley Emory, marriages reaffirmed genealogical connections with the Tilghman families, and, as noted elsewhere herein, son William Hemsley Emory married Matilda Bache, a great granddaughter of Benjamin Franklin. And through other descendants again the families interconnect through Anna Maria Hemsley Emory's grandson, Edward Bourke Emory (1849–1924), who married Henrietta Tilghman (1855–1953) and Susannah Watson (1873–after 1929) [No. 356 in the main Smith genealogy] who was the great granddaughter of Katharine W. (Smith) Watson (ca. 1801–1881) [see main Smith family genealogy, No. 47] whose second husband was John H. Covington (1789–ca. 1861) who took in orphaned John Edward Smith (1848–1930) [No. 92].

(husband of Anna Maria Hemsley [No. 157])

> "General Thomas Emory was a member of the Maryland House of Delegates, the State Senate and Executive Council of the governor under the old Constitution. He was an officer in the war of 1812, serving as a major in the 9th Cavalry District and took active part in the defense of Queenstown against the attack of the British. He was also first president of the Eastern Shore Railroad and one of the Commissioners to negotiate an internal loan for the state of Maryland, visiting England for that purpose in 1838."[202]

226. Robert Emory, Jr. (1815–)

He never married.

229. Frederick Emory (1829–)

He "was the Emory genealogist and the author of the early history of the Emory family, [and] he married and died leaving no children." [203]

162. Benjamin[7] Tilghman (Edward[6], Edward[5], Anna Maria[4] Lloyd, Philemon[3], Edward[2], Lloyd[1]) He married Anna Maria McMurtrie.

Children of Benjamin Tilghman and Anna McMurtrie are:

231 i. Benjamin Chew[8] Tilghman, born 26 October 1821 in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania; died 03 July 1901.

232 ii. Richard Albert Tilghman, born 24 May 1824 in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania; died 24 March 1899.

NOTES

Benjamin Tilghman [No. 162] was elected a member of the American Philosophical Society in 1871. He was a lawyer.

Benjamin Chew Tilghman (1821–1901) [No. 231] was a graduate of the University of Pennsylvania, B.A., 1839. He was admitted to the bar but joined his brother, Richard, in business, invention, and manufacturing. In April 1861 he joined the 26th Regiment, Pennsylvania Volunteers, rising from Captain to regimental commander in two years. He was wounded at Chancellorsville, 3 May 1863, after which he was appointed to command the 3rd Regt. U.S. Colored Troops from Philadelphia. He was made Brevet Brigadier General two years later. He mustered out 9 June 1865. He was a member of the American Philosophical Society.[204]

Richard Albert Tilghman (1824–1899) [No. 232] was a graduate of the University of Pennsylvania, B.A., 1841. Among numerous accomplishments as a chemist, he is known for his patents on fat hydrolysis, which he and his brother, Benjamin, advanced. In addition, he produced a method to manufacture wood-pulp paper, which would not become commercially practical until later. He was elected a member of the American Philosophical Society in 1847.[205]

NOTES

224. William Hemsley Emory (1811–1877)

Maj. Gen. Emory saw significant military service during his lifetime, retiring at the rank of Brigadier General on 1 July 1876. He was in charge of the U.S.–Mexico boundary survey.

> "General Wm. Hemsley Emory, a graduate of [the U.S. Military Academy at] West Point, was commissioned a second Lieut. in the U.S. Army 1831; attained rank of Major General in 1865. He had extensive active service in the Mexican and Civil Wars and was decorated for gallantry in the battles of San Pasqual 1846, and San Gabriel 1747 [sic]."[206]

At the time of the 1840 U.S. census, he and his young family may have been living with one of the members of his wife's family in Philadelphia. Curiously, only one Bache family appears in the 1840 census for Philadelphia, A. D. Bache, presumably Alexander Dallas Bache. At the time of the 1870 census, he resided in Ward 1, Washington, D.C.

Gen. Emory is buried in Congressional Cemetery, Washington, D.C., R43/S37.

Matilda (Bache) Emory (1819–1900)
(wife of William Hemsley Emory [No. 224])

She resided at 1718 H St., N.W., Washington, D.C. She is buried in Congressional Cemetery, Washington, D.C., R43/S36.

Children of William Hemsley and Matilda Bache Emory

227. John Register[8] Emory II (Anna Maria[7] Hemsley, William[6], Anna Maria[5] Tilghman, Anna Maria[4] Lloyd, Philemon[3], Edward[2], Lloyd[1]) was born 01 November 1818 at "Poplar Grove", Spaniard Neck, Queen Anne's Co., Maryland, and died 29 March 1880 at "Poplar Grove", Spaniard Neck, Queen Anne's Co., Maryland. He married (1) Alice Gray Bourke, daughter of Edward Bourke and Mary Cox. She was born about 1829 in Maryland, and died 05 December 1857 at "Poplar Grove", Spaniard Neck, Queen Anne's Co., Maryland. He married (2) undetermined wife.

Children of John Emory and Alice Bourke are:

+	279	i.	Edward Bourke[9] Emory, born 29 September 1849 at "Poplar Grove", Spaniard Neck, Queen Anne's Co., Maryland; died 01 May 1924.
+	280	ii.	John Register Emory III, born 1850 at "Poplar Grove", Spaniard Neck, Queen Anne's Co., Maryland; died January 1925.
	281	iii.	Ann M. Emory, born about 1852 in Maryland.
	282	iv.	Alice Emory, born about 1855 in Maryland.

NOTES

Col. John Register Emory, II (1818–1880) [No. 227] served in the U.S. Army. He was commissioned a 2nd Lieutenant in the 6th Infantry, where he "saw active service during the Seminole War in Florida".[208] He resigned from U.S. Army on 9 February 1843.

At the time of the 1850 and 1860 U.S. censuses he is listed as a farmer, residing in the 3rd District, Queen Anne's Co., Maryland. He "was one of the largest land and slave owners of his time in Maryland"[209].

Col. Emory is buried in the family cemetery at Poplar Grove, Spaniard Neck Road, near Centreville, Queen Anne's Co., Maryland.

Alice (Bourke) Emory (ca. 1829–1857), wife of John Register Emory, II, is buried in the family cemetery at Poplar Grove, Spaniard Neck Road, near Centreville, Queen Anne's Co., Maryland.

Lloyd[8] Tilghman (James[7], Tench[6], James[5], Anna Maria[4] Lloyd, Philemon[3], Edward[2], Lloyd[1]) was born 18 January 1816 at "Rich Neck", near Claiborne, Talbot, Maryland, and died 16 May 1863 in Baker's Creek/Champion Hill, Mississippi. He married Augusta Murray Boyd. She was born about 1814 in Maine.

Children of Lloyd Tilghman and Augusta Boyd are:
289 i. Lloyd[9] Tilghman, born about 1846 in Maryland.
290 ii. Fred Tilghman, born about 1848 in Maryland.
291 iii. Sidel Tilghman, born about 1849 in Pennsylvania.
292 iv. Horatio Tilghman, born about 1852 in Tennessee.
+ 293 v. Henrietta Tilghman, born 09 December 1855; died 08 September 1953.

NOTES

Lloyd Tilghman (senior) (1816–1863) [No. 235] was a graduate of the U.S. Military Academy, 1836, but shortly afterward resigned from the Army. He worked as an engineer on several railroads, and at the outbreak of the Mexican War he was an Army supplier in Corpus Christi, Texas, and became the aide de camp for Gen. David Twiggs, 2nd Dragoons, later serving in various locations and positions. He attained the rank of Captain, Maryland and D.C. Artillery, 1847. Honorable discharge 13 July 1848. In 1852 he moved to Kentucky, in December 1860 joining the Kentucky State Guard where he was a Major in the Paducah Southwest Battalion.

On 5 July 1861 Tilghman and Co. D of the State Guard joined the Confederate Army.[213] He attained the rank of Brig. Gen., C.S.A., 1861. At Fort Henry, Tennessee, he defended the fort while allowing his army to retreat to Fort [214] The Battle of Fort Henry took place 6 Feb 1862, the first important victory for Union forces during the Civil War. The earthen fort, designed for river defense rather than against infantry on land, occupied 10 low-standing acres on the eastern bank of the Tennessee River across from higher ground on the Kentucky side of the river. A newer fort on that higher ground, Fort Heiman, was still under construction. Approximately 3,000-3,400 Confederate combatants under Brig. Gen. Tilghman faced off against 15,000 Union troops under Brig. Gen. Ulysses S. Grant, as well as seven ships of the U.S. Navy's Western Flotilla, including four ironclads, under Flag Officer Andrew Hull Foote. Tilghman, his forces under naval bombardment, sent his troops to Fort Donelson, eleven miles distant, but continued to defend Fort Henry with a small force. When Union gunboats steamed to within 200 yards of Fort Henry, knocking out 13 of the 17 heavy guns, Tilghman surrendered the fort before Union troops arrived, which thus opened the Tennessee River to Union forces beyond the Alabama border. (Fort Donelson fell to Union forces ten days later.) [216] Fort Warren is situated on 28-acre Georges Island in the entrance to Boston Harbor. Constructed during 833-1861, it both defended the harbor and served as a prisoner-of-war camp for Confederate military personnel and civilian officials. Among the high-ranking Confederates who were held here were Tilghman, Vice President Alexander H. Stephens, and Postmaster General John Henninger Reagan. The fort was decommissioned in 1947. In 1958, the fort was transferred from the Federal government to the state of Massachusetts, which administers it as the focal point of the Boston Harbor Islands National Recreation Area. (>>"Fort Warren (Massachusetts)", Wikipedia online encyclopedia, http://en.wikipedia.org, accessed 13 Dec 2006.) During his incarceration, a Southern newspaper took note of his affairs in Fort Warren, as repeated from the Boston Post. "Generals Buckner and Tilghman are the two greatest lions among us. Their residence is at Hotel de Warren, in Boston harbour. They room with Marshal Kane, and thus far, are quite satisfied with their accommodations. They talk and smoke, eat and drink, and read the Boston newspapers with great satisfaction." [217] The Battle of Champion Hill (also called Bakers Creek) took place between the towns of Edwards, Bolton, and Raymond, Mississippi. The battle took place during a Confederate army countermarch in operations against Union forces operating in the area. In an attempt to quit the field through a single remaining route, Tilghman's brigade formed the rear guard. The battle was concluded in favor of the Union forces, with the Confederate forces in retreat toward Vicksburg. A monument to Brig. Gen. Lloyd Tilghman was placed in 1907 or shortly afterward, at the spot on which he was killed on Champion Hill Battlefield. 3. Mary[2] McCall (Archibald[1]) was born 28 July 1764 in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, and died 23 March 1848. She married Lambert Cadwalader 1793, son of Thomas Cadwalader and Hannah Lambert. He was born 1741 in probably Trenton, New Jersey, and died 13 September 1823 at "Greenwood", near Trenton, New Jersey.

Child of Mary McCall and Lambert Cadwalader is:

14 i. John[3] Cadwalader, born 22 June 1794; died 08 March 1801.

NOTES

Another date of birth for Lambert Cadwalader (1741–1823), husband of Mary McCall [No. 3], is given as 1743. Elected to American Philosophical Society, 11 November 1768. Delegate to the provincial convention in Pennsylvania, 1775, and State constitutional convention, 1776. Lieutenant Colonel, 3rd Pennsylvania Battalion, 1776. Colonel, 4th Battalion, Pennsylvania Line, commissioned 25 October 1776, commanding a regiment of "The Greens". Taken prisoner at Fort Washington on the Hudson River. Member of Continental Congress, 1785, 1786, 1787; elected as Pro-Administration candidate to First Congress (4 March 1789-3 March 1791) and Third Congress (4 March 1793-3 March 1795).

He is buried in the Friends Burying Grounding, Trenton, New Jersey.

John Cadwalader (1794–1801) [No. 14] is buried in St. Peter's Church graveyard, 3rd and Pine Sts., Philadelphia, Pennsylvania.

21. George[4] McCall (George Archibald[3], Archibald[2], Archibald[1]) was born 04 September 1858 in Chester, Pennsylvania. He married Mildred Carter.

Children of George McCall and Mildred Carter are:

	28	i.	George Archibald[5] McCall II, born 24 August 1886.
	29	ii.	Richard Coxe McCall, born 12 February 1888.

Generation No. 5

25. Edward Fenno[5] Hoffman, Jr. (Elizabeth[4] McCall, George Archibald[3], Archibald[2], Archibald[1]) was born 27 July 1888, and died 1971. He married (1) Marjorie Watmough. He married (2) Elizabeth Rodman Wright. She was born 1890, and died 1963.

Child of Edward Hoffman and Marjorie Watmough is:

+	30	i.	Marjorie Watmough[6] Hoffman, born 1913; died 1990.

Generation No. 6

30. Marjorie Watmough[6] Hoffman (Edward Fenno[5], Elizabeth[4] McCall, George Archibald[3], Archibald[2], Archibald[1]) was born 1913, and died 1990. She married John Bayard McPherson. He was born 1910, and died 1987.

Children of Marjorie Hoffman and John McPherson are:

31 i. McPherson[7].

32 ii. McPherson.

Patrick Family Collateral Genealogy

(17 descendants)

The genealogy of the Patrick family, as it relates to the Hodge Family collateral lineage, is as follows:

Descendants of Hugh P. Patrick

Generation No. 1

1. Hugh P.[1] Patrick, of Belfast, Ireland.

Child of Hugh P. Patrick is:

\+ 2 i. James[2] Patrick, born 06 August 1792 in Belfast, Ireland; died 23 January 1883 in Tuscarawas Co., Ohio.

NOTES

Hugh P. Patrick was a merchant.

Generation No. 2

2. James[2] Patrick (Hugh P.[1]) was born 06 August 1792 in Belfast, Ireland, and died 23 January 1883 in Tuscarawas Co., Ohio. He married Catherine Westfall 30 July 1821 in Tuscarawas Co., Ohio, daughter of Abraham Westfall and Naomi Van Etta. She was born 30 January 1798, and died 01 January 1833 in Tuscarawas Co., Ohio.

Children of James Patrick and Catherine Westfall are:

3 i. Annie[3] Patrick. She married James Moffett.

4 ii. Rachel Patrick. She married David McFarland.

\+ 5 iii. Andrew Patrick, born 05 February 1822 in New Philadelphia, Tuscarawas Co., Ohio; died 17 June 1898 in New Philadelphia, Tuscarawas Co., Ohio.

6 iv. James Patrick, born 21 July 1827 in New Philadelphia, Tuscarawas Co., Ohio; died 31 October 1887 in Tuscarawas Co., Ohio. He married Mary Helen Graham 19 October 1854 in Tuscarawas Co., Ohio; born 02 June 1832 in New York; died 04 August 1897 in Tuscarawas Co., Ohio.

\+ 7 v. Abraham W. Patrick, born 02 August 1831 in New Philadelphia, Tuscarawas Co., Ohio; died 26 September 1909 in Tuscarawas Co., Ohio.

8 vi. Catherine Patrick, born about 1832 in New Philadelphia, Tuscarawas, Ohio. She married Joseph Medill 02 September 1852 in Tuscarawas Co., Ohio; from Chicago, Illinois.

NOTES

2. James Patrick (senior) (1792–1883)

After emigrating from Ireland to Norfolk, Virginia, he went to Philadelphia where he worked as a foreman at the Aurora newspaper. In 1819 he went to Tuscarawas Co., Ohio, and there started the Tuscarawas Chronicle, serving as editor continuously until 1846, with the exception of two years. His son, Andrew, assumed the management of the newspaper in 1846. James Patrick, self-educated in law, was placed on the bench of the Court of Common Pleas for about seven years. He became a Republican after the formation of that party. He was Tuscarawas County Recorder and Auditor in the early days of the county.

At the time of the 1850 U.S. census, James Patrick was a printer. In the 1830–1850 censuses he resided in New Philadelphia, Tuscarawas Co., Ohio. He is buried in Fair Avenue Cemetery, New Philadelphia.

The marriage of James Patrick and Catherine Westfall was officiated by Rev. Abraham Snyder.

A biographical sketch for James Patrick appeared with the sketch for his son, Abraham, in the Portrait and Biographical Record of Tuscarawas County, Ohio:[219]

> "[James Patrick] was born and reared in the city of Belfast, Ireland, and emigrated to the United States in 1815. He landed in Norfolk, Va., and from there went to Philadelphia, where he became foreman in the office of the Aurora, a leading newspaper. He had learned the printer's trade in Belfast, where he had received a collegiate education. In 1819 he came to this place and started the Tuscarawas Chronicle, which he continuously edited up to 1846, with the exception of only two years. His son Andrew assumed the management of the paper in the year last mentioned. The sheet was a Whig in politics and for years was considered one of the best exponents of its party's principles. After leaving the field of journalism, James Patrick was placed on the Bench of the Court of Common Pleas, where he remained about seven years. He had taken up the study of law by himself, and became an able jurist. After the formation of the Republican party he became one of its staunch supporters. In the early days of this county's history he occupied the positions of Recorder and Auditor, making a faithful officer. He was the son of Hugh P. Patrick, a merchant in Belfast. Though reared in the Presbyterian faith, he was never a member of the church. After living a long and useful life he was called to his final rest in 1883, aged ninety years. His wife was the daughter of Capt. Abraham Westfall, who won his title in the Revolutionary War, and lived in New Jersey, not far from New York City. He was a highly educated and scholarly man, and a person of prominence in the community where he made his home. His wife, Naomi, nee Van Etta, was of Dutch descent, and a very accomplished lady, noted for her rare beauty."

5. Andrew Patrick (1822–1898)

He resided in New Philadelphia, Tuscarawas Co., Ohio.

Occupations of Andrew Patrick (from U.S. censuses):
1850, 1860: Printer
1870: Banker
1880: Retired banker

He is noticed in the reminiscences of L. B. Haskins (1882–1909), whose articles originally appeared in The Twin City News during 1899–1900:[220]

> "[During floods on the Little Stillwater Creek at Uhrichsville, Ohio, on 14 December 1847] Andrew Patrick and D. W. Stambaugh of New Philadelphia had gone to Wheeling on a stage-coach. When they came back to Uhrichsville, they were storm stayed. The writer of these lines took them across Little Stillwater creek on a small dugout or canoe. The craft would only carry two persons at once. Patrick had a large bundle of printing paper and consequently had to make three trips across the stream, before I would consent to take them across. I asked them if they could swim, they said they could, and took off their coast. This was the most risky adventure I had ever undertaken. The current in the stream and driftwood that was running made it more dangerous. I landed them safely over the other shore and they paid me well for my adventure. They went their way rejoicing. They hired John Welch to take them to their homes at New Philadelphia."

7. Abraham W. Patrick (1831–1909) Also see Additions & Corrections

Another birthdate is given as 2 August 1829. He was sent to college at New Athens and studied law at Mount Vernon, Ohio, in the office of Lapp and Smith; he was admitted to the bar at Columbus, Ohio. He practiced in Mount Vernon for a year and then removed to New Philadelphia, Tuscarawas Co., Ohio. At one time his brother, James, was in his partnership. About 1858 he was elected as Prosecuting Attorney and afterward as Probate Judge. In 1871 he was appointed State Senator. He was a member of the Free and Accepted Masons.

At the time of the 1850 U.S. census, Abraham W. Patrick was a printer. His marriage to Mary Talbot was officiated by Henry M. Bickle. Abraham Patrick is buried in Fair Avenue Cemetery, New Philadelphia, Tuscarawas Co., Ohio.

A biographical sketch for Abraham W. Patrick appeared in the Portrait and Biographical Record of Tuscarawas County, Ohio:[221]

> "Judge Abraham W. Patrick is one of the old and prominent citizens of New Philadelphia. This community, in which he was born and has passed nearly his entire life, he has ever been interested in, and to the utmost of his ability he has promoted its welfare. * * *

> "The boyhood of Judge Abraham W. Patrick was spent in the home of his parents. His preliminary education was received at the public schools of the locality, after which he was sent to the college at New Athens. Later he studied law at Mt. Vernon, Ohio, in the office of Lapp & Smith, and was abmitted [sic] to the Bar at Columbus, Ohio. On beginning the practice of his profession, he located in Mt. Vernon, where he remained for a year. At the end of that time he came to this city and opened an office, where he has since been engaged in practice. At one time he had in partnership with him his brother James. About 1858 he was elected to the position of Prosecuting Attorney, and afterward to that of Probate Judge. In 1871 he was sent to represent the Senatorial District in the State Legislature, where he displayed marked ability and fidelity to his constituents. He introduced a number of bills for the advancement of the public welfare and made an enviable reputation as a public speaker. * * *

> "A close law student, blessed with an analytical mind and gifted in brining out all the strong points of a cause, the Judge is, however, particularly able in addressing a jury. In questions involving life, such as capital cases, he rises to flights of eloquence and oratory rarely surpassed. For the past thirty years his services have been in great demand in this portion of the state on legal complications of great moment. In disposition he is genial and sociable, and as he is a man of original thought and progressive ideas, he is very entertaining as a conversationalist. By his friends and neighbors he is esteemed and greatly loved; as a citizen he is patriotic and devoted. Politically he belongs to the old school of Democracy, and in former years was actively interested in the advancement of his party. Fraternally he is identified with the Masonic order."

12. Hugh T. Patrick

A brief biographical sketch for Hugh T. Patrick appeared with the sketch for his father, Abraham W. Patrick, in the Portrait and Biographical Record of Tuscarawas County, Ohio:[222]

> "Dr. Hugh T. Patrick, the only son of Judge Patrick, is deserving of special mention. He secured a literary education at the Wooster (Ohio) University, and subsequently pursued a course of medical study at Bellevue Hospital in New York City. After his graduation he began practicing in Chicago, where he continued to reside for four years. Desiring higher advantages, he went to Europe, and was a student in the celebrated universities of Heidelberg, Vienna, Berlin, Paris and London. He gave special attention to nervous diseases and expects to make this his particular field of work. In 1894 he returned to Chicago and resumed practice, having his office in the Venetian Building. He stands in the front rank of the physicians of that city and has a constantly increasing clientage."

Child of Ruth Patrick and Charles Hodge is:

17 i. Charles[6] Hodge V. He married undetermined wife.

NOTES

16. Ruth Patrick (1907–)

She is one of the world's renowned researchers in limnology (the study of freshwater ecosystems), a diatom taxonomist, and educator. At the age of 100, she continues to work most every day in her office at the Academy of Natural Sciences of Philadelphia, where she has worked for nearly 75 years.

Ruth Patrick graduated from Coker College, 1929; M.S., University of Virginia; Ph.D. (botany), University of Virginia, 1934. As of 2005 she had been awarded 26 honorary degrees, including a D.Sc. from Princeton University, 1980.

Her father's avocational interest in microscopes inspired her career. She has worked at the Academy of Natural Sciences of Philadelphia (ANSP) 1937-2007 (with previous unpaid-staff time dating to 1933), including Chair of the Board of Trustees (1973-1976) and Honorary Chair, Board of Trustees (1976-2007). At ANSP she was Chair of the Limnology Department, 1947-1973 [in 1973 the department was expanded and renamed the Patrick Center for Environmental Research], and Francis Boyer Chair of Limnology, 1973-2007). She is the author of numerous papers and monographs, including the multi-volume Rivers of the United States.[223] She served on the Board of Directors of E.I. DuPont deNemours Co. (the first woman and first ecologist elected to that board), and the Pennsylvania Power and Light Co. She has served on numerous boards, councils, committees, and panels relating to environmental concerns, and she has been honored with numerous awards and prizes from institutions, societies, and professional organizations. She was elected a member of the American Philosophical Society, 1974, and the National Academy of Science The Ruth Patrick Science Education Center at the University of South Carolina at Aiken was named in her honor. She is named in the EcoTopia Ecology Hall of Fame together with a select list of luminaries including Henry David Thoreau, Rachel Carson, John Burroughs, John Muir, Aldo Leopold, Theodore Roosevelt, and Edward Abbey. She received the National Medal of Science from President William Jefferson Clinton (Bill Clinton), 1996. To the National Millennium Time Capsule (White House Millennium Council, 2000) she contributed a small vial of diatoms. [224]

Science writer Thomas E. Lovejoy recognized "The Patrick Principle", the fundamental point of which is that "the imprint of human activities can be measured by the biology of the ecosystem in question." It "provides the basis for a much more rigorous analysis of the effects of human actions, and an operational measure of the elusive concept of sustainable development."[225]

Ruth Patrick's career spans the corresponding careers of several generations of scientists. But if one interesting example of her work and its use may be taken (not entirely at random), it is her contribution to the war effort during

Dr. Ruth Patrick, 96, in her office in the Academy of Natural Sciences of Philadelphia, on 28 July 2004. As of 2008, at age 100 and 75 years with the Academy, she continues her work as the Francis Boyer Chair of Limnology. She is one of the world's leading fresh-water ecologists and a paramount taxonomist of the microscopic, single-celled plants called diatoms. Dr. Patrick holds a Ph.D. degree—and twenty-six honorary doctorates—the diplomas for none of which are to be seen in her office. Patrick also was a Trustee of the Academy and is now the Honorary Chair of the Academy's Board of Trustees. She also was the first woman elected to the board of directors of the Du Pont chemicals-manufacturing corporation, among numerous other responsible positions and honors. She is a member of the American Association for the Advancement of Science and the American Philosophical Society and a recipient of the National Medal of Science.

Ruth Patrick conceived the "big picture" approach to the analysis of environmental qualilty of fresh waters, whereby the myriad components of an ecosystem—biological, chemical, and physical—are studied as a whole rather than by their separate components. Key to many of these studies is the population of diatoms, the diversity of which prove to be excellent indicators of environmental quality. Diatoms are found in every body of water and even in moist soils. They can be collected from streams, lakes, and oceans; even from the underside of polar ice sheets where sunlight can reach them. Some species live floating freely in the water; other are colonial, attaching themselves in filaments to the bottoms of streams and lakes and to any object in the water. Photosynthesizers, diatoms produce a significant fraction of the world's free oxygen.

Between 1992–1997, Earle Spamer was the Collection Manager in the Diatom Herbarium of the Academy of Natural Sciences, the collection upon which the Academy's former Limnology Department was founded. That department eventually became a much larger, more diversified branch of the Academy, the Patrick Center for Environmental Research, which undertakes contractural investigations for governmental agencies and private industry. The Diatom Herbarium contains arguably the world's largest collection of diatoms, the organization of which was principally the work of Dr. Patrick and colleague Dr. Charles Reimer over fifty years. Spamer was also acting collection manager of the herbarium during 1997–2000 while he worked as the Collection Manager of the Academy's Department of Botany.

As of June 2011, Dr. Patrick is no longer actively at work, although she occasionally participates in commemorative affairs or as a guest at environmental meetings.

World War II. Faced with the fortuitous capture of a German submarine, the U.S. Navy retrieved samples of vegetative material from the hull of the boat. They contacted the Academy of Natural Sciences of Philadelphia to inquire about whether the samples might divulge where the submarine had been in the world. The samples were given to Ruth Patrick, who otherwise was not told where they were taken. Her study of the diatoms contained in the samples revealed a species that was known only from the north coast of Cuba and one of the islands of the West Indies. With this information, the Navy was able to discover a U-boat supply line north of Cuba.

Although Ruth Patrick and her work have been the subject of brief informational or laudatory articles in scientific journals, newspapers, and newsletters, the only biographical sketch of her thus far is a brief one published in 1997 by Barbara Mandula.[226] At the time of her 100th birthday, she was feted with a gala dinner by the Academy of Natural Sciences of Philadelphia on 17 November 2007, and several other events in her honor (all hosted before her birthday because in 2007 it falls close to the Thanksgiving Day weekend).

On a more personal note: When I worked in the Academy of Natural Sciences of Philadelphia, during the period 1992-2000 I was Collection Manager in the Diatom Herbarium, a separate department in what then was the Division of Systematics and Biodiversity. Although I did not work on a day-to-day basis with Ruth Patrick, the herbarium as it is arranged today is largely the work of Dr. Patrick and colleague Dr. Charles Reimer—Patrick during her amazing career of now nearly 75 years at the Academy and still working, and Reimer's career of more than 40 years (now as Curator Proprius; that is, permanent curator). Working with Ruth Patrick is a rare, inspiring opportunity. She is a master of the study of freshwater ecology, the environment, and human influences on ecosystems. She in fact was the first to promote the "big picture" method of studying ecosystems; she invented the multi-system approach to studying the environments of fresh waters. She also is a definitive resource on diatom taxonomy, particularly the "pennate" diatoms (mostly long in morphology; the round morphology represents the "centric" diatoms). In 2007, she was called by a newspaper reporter "The den mother of ecology."[227] Although Ruth Patrick is a diminutive person, and her deportment is reserved, she commands the attention of a room when she speaks, which is with great assurance although not in any way with an aristocratic air. She is a quiet person, but quick to voice an opinion or to give advice when it is needed. When she works personally with people, one instantly knows that she expects certain results—certainly. For years, well into her 90s, she continued to drive herself to work each day (now, at 100, she has a driver); and in earlier years she is supposed to have had a reputation for being a fast, precise driver, which few passengers appreciated. My own relationship with Dr. Patrick—she was Ruth only to very close associates—was intermittent. Since she was essentially in an emerita position despite her active workload, she was never officially my supervisor; but as the founder of the Academy's modern Diatom Herbarium and its remarkable ancillary research guides, she was in every way my intellectual mentor in this department. Whereas I used an electron scanning microscope, she was a master of the light microscope, and I never knew of an instance where she was confounded for long with an identification of one of her microscopic organisms.

It is honestly difficult to select a representative number of Ruth Patrick's publications; she wrote so many and so many have been important ones. It will have to suffice to list a couple of her retrospective titles, written later in her long career, which provide broad insights into both a long career full of experience and modern, very critical issues of great social and environmental importance:

Charles Hodge, IV (1900–1985)
(husband of Ruth Patrick)

At the time of the 1900 U.S. census he is listed as Charles H. Hodge. He was an entomologist and at one time a member of the Biology Department, Temple University, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. The Charles Hodge IV Prize in Biology there was established in his name by his wife, Dr. Ruth Patrick. He is buried in Princeton Cemetery, Princeton, Mercer Co., New Jersey.

See the Hodge Family collateral genealogy for information about his lineage.

Lewis Harlow Van Dusen, Jr. (1910–2004)
(husband of Ruth Patrick)

He was a graduate of Princeton University, 1932 (delivering his salutary address in classic Greek[228]), and Harvard University law school, 1933. He was a Rhodes Scholar from the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, studying civil law at New College, Oxford University. In 1935 he entered the Philadelphia law practice of Drinker, Biddle and Reath, and without formal designation headed the firm from the 1950s to 1970s, continuing as counsel to the firm (currently Drinker Biddle) through 2004. During World War II he served in the U.S. Army, 1942-1945, serving in North Africa, Normandy, and southern Europe (where he was assistant to the Chief of Staff, Allied Military Government in Sicily and southern Italy), and was discharged at the rank of Lieutenant Colonel; he was awarded a Bronze Star, Decorated Purple Heart, Legion of Merit of the United States, and France's Legion of Merit of Honor, Croix de Guerre. In the early 1950s he was the Director of the U.S. Representation to the North American Treaty Organization (NATO). He served on the American Bar Association's Standing Committee on Ethics and Professional Responsibility, 1953-1956 and 1962-1974 (chair, 1971-1974). He was a judge in the Philadelphia Orphans Court. He was Chancellor of the Philadelphia Bar Association, 1968, and President of the Pennsylvania Bar Association, 1974-1975. he served on the boards of International Utilities and the Campbell Soup Company; he served as a trustee of the Academy of Natural Sciences of Philadelphia, Philadelphia Divinity School, Episcopal Academy, and Princeton University. He was elected a member of the American Philosophical Society in 1987.[229]

He authored numerous essays for professional journals, but his most-quoted and critiqued work is "Civil Disobedience: Destroyer of Democracy"[230].

He received the American Bar Association's Michael Franck Professional Responsibility Award in 1997.[231] The American Bar Association's biographical sketch relating to the award reads:[232]

> "Lewis H. Van Dusen, a partner in the law firm of Drinker, Biddle & Reath in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, was awarded the Michael Franck Professional Responsibility Award on August 1, 1997.
> "Mr. Van Dusen['s] accomplishments spanned more than a half century, and ranged from daring, as a bar leader to publicly challenge corrupt practices within the tight-knit community of the bar[,] to working toward international justice as the first Director of the United States Representation to NATO in the early 1950s. While is broad vision of a lawyer's responsibility for the quality of justice served as an inspiration to his law firm colleagues, he was singled out to receive the Michael Franck award for the intense focus he brought to the study and literature of legal ethics.
> "Following in the tradition of his law firm partner Henry S. Drinker, Mr. Van Dusen served on the ABA Standing Committee on Ethics and Professional Responsibility and its predecessor Standing Committee on Professional Ethics form 1953 to 1956 and from 1962 to 1974. Serving as its chair from 1971 to 1974, he oversaw what was arguably the single biggest step forward in establishing ethical standards for the bar: the development and adoption of the Model Code of Professional Responsibility. During his time of service, the committee also issued what has been described as a 'blizzard' of ethics opinions.
> "Closer to home, Mr. Van Dusen served as president of the Pennsylvania Bar Association and chancellor of the Philadelphia Bar Association, where he also worked to improve ethical standards."

In 1935, Lewis H. Van Dusen, Jr., resided at 5641 Overbrook Ave., Philadelphia, Pennsylvania.

In 2006 he was a practicing physician specializing in pediatric gastroenterology with offices at 2401 Gillham Rd., Kansas City, Missouri, and 5808 W. 110th St., Overland Park, Kansas. In 2005 he resided in Shawnee Mission, Kansas.

Powel Family
Collateral Genealogy

(33 descendants)

The genealogy of the Powel family, as it relates to the Foulke and Hodge collateral lineages, is as follows:

Descendants of Robert Hare

Generation No. 1

1. Robert[1] Hare He married Margaret Willing, daughter of Charles Willing and Ann Shippen.

Children of Robert Hare and Margaret Willing are:

+	2	i.	Col. John Hare[2] Powel, died 1856.
	3	ii.	Richard Powel.
	4	iii.	Charles Willing Powel.
	5	iv.	Robert Powel.
	6	v.	Richard Powel.

NOTES

Robert Hare [No. 1] emigrated from England in 1773 by way of Canada in company with Sir William Johnson. In Pennsylvania he was a member of the Convention that formed the first Constitution of Pennsylvania, and he was a state Senate Speaker.

Generation No. 2

2. John Hare[2] Powel [John Powel Hare] (Robert[1] Hare) died 1856. He married Julia De Veaux, daughter of Col. Andrew De Veaux.

Children of John Powel and Julia De Veaux are:

	7	i.	De Veaux[3] Powel.
+	8	ii.	Henry Baring Powel, died in Oregon.
	9	iii.	Ida Powel.
	10	iv.	John Hare Powel, Jr.
+	11	v.	Julia De Veaux Powel, died 30 April 1884.
	12	vi.	Robert Hare Powel.
+	13	vii.	Samuel Powel, born 1818.

NOTES

John Hare Powel (–1856) [No. 2] was born "John Powel Hare" and was later adopted by his aunt, Elizabeth Willing Powel. He changed his name legally to John Hare Powel on 18 January 1808.[233]

Generation No. 3

8. Henry Baring[3] Powel (John Hare[2], Robert[1] Hare) died in Oregon. He married Catharine Bayard, daughter of Richard Henry Bayard.

Child of Henry Powel and Catharine Bayard is:

\+ 14 i. Mary DeVeaux[4] Powel.

NOTES

Henry Baring Powel [No. 8] was a graduate of the University of Pennsylvania, 1843.

---

11. Julia De Veaux[3] Powel (John Hare[2], Robert[1] Hare) died 30 April 1884. She married William Parker Foulke 1855, son of Richard Foulke and Anna Strohn. He was born 31 May 1816 in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, and died 18 June 1865 in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania.

Children of Julia Powel and William Foulke are:

15 i. Julia Catharine[4] Foulke, born 22 January 1856.
16 ii. William De Veaux Foulke, born 09 June 1857.
17 iii. Richard Parker Foulke, born 30 August 1858; died 07 January 1865.
18 iv. Lisa De Veaux Foulke, born 08 March 1860.
19 v. John Francis Foulke, born 26 November 1861.
20 vi. Sara Gwendolen Foulke, born 26 June 1863.
21 vii. George Rhyfedd Foulke, born 16 August 1865.

NOTES

William Parker Foulke (1816–1865), husband of Julia De Veux Powel [No. 11], was elected to the American Philosophical Society, 1854, and was a member of the Academy of Natural Sciences of Philadelphia. Point Foulke, Greenland, is named for him. A substantial part of the Foulke family papers that survive are in the William Parker Foulke Papers, in the American Philosophical Society.[234]

In 1858, Foulke brought to the attention of Joseph Leidy some fossil bones that were taken in Haddonfield, Camden Co., New Jersey. Leidy was a comparative anatomist at the Academy of Natural Sciences and the University of 13. Samuel[3] Powel (John Hare[2], Robert[1] Hare) was born 1818. He married Mary Johnston, daughter of Robert Johnston and Catherine Taylor. She was born in Jamaica.

Children of Samuel Powel and Mary Johnston are:

22 i. Mary Edith[4] Powel.
23 ii. Samuel Powel, Jr.
24 iii. Katherine Julia Powel.
25 iv. Robert Johnston Hare Powel.
26 v. Harford Willing Hare Powel.
27 vi. John Hare Powel, Jr.

NOTES

Samuel Powel (senior) (1818–) [No. 13] was a Rhode Island state senator, residing in Newport, Rhode Island.

Generation No. 4

14. Mary DeVeaux[4] Powel (Henry Baring[3], John Hare[2], Robert[1] Hare) She married George Woolsey Hodge 1872, son of Hugh Hodge and Margaret Aspinwall. He was born 20 May 1845 in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, and died 21 April 1929.

Children of Mary Powel and George Hodge are:

28 i. Carroll[5] Hodge, born 24 September 1874.
29 ii. Helen Harriet Hodge, born 21 November 1876.
30 iii. Henry Baring Hodge, born 12 August 1878.

[235] Joseph Leidy became one of the most notable and publicly recognized scientists of the 19th century, in part for his discovery of the source of the trichinosis parasite as well as for his champion work in public health. He was the principal comparative anatomist of his day, working in diverse fields like parasitology, invertebrate zoology, and vertebrate paleontology; he discovered evidence for bipedalism in dinosaurs, scientifically described the first dinosaur specimens from North America, and described as well the first-ever nearly complete dinosaur skeleton, Hadrosaurus foulkii. A celebratory sketch written upon Leidy's death is W. S. W. Ruschenberger, "A Sketch of the Life of Joseph Leidy, M.D., LL.D.", Proceedings of the American Philosophical Society, vol. 30 (Apr 1892), pp. 135-184. The only modern biography of Joseph Leidy is the one by Leonard Warren, Joseph Leidy: the Last Man Who Knew Everything (Yale University Press, New Haven and London, 1997). Leidy also was the President of the Academy of Natural Sciences of Philadelphia (with which Earle Spamer has had a working affiliation from 1973 to 2007, including staff employment in its research collections from 1986 to 2005). Leidy was the President of the faculty of, and Director of the museum of, the Wagner Free Institute of Science, in Philadelphia, which responsibilities he assumed after the death of its founder, William Wagner. (Parenthetically, Spamer also was on the Wagner Institute's Board of Trustees for ten years, 1988-1998; its Secretary 1993-1997.)

32 v. Louise Bayard Hodge, born 19 October 1883.
33 vi. Mary Carroll Hodge, born 24 December 1887.

NOTES

Rev. George Woolsey Hodge (1845–1929), husband of Mary De Veaux Powel [No. 14], received degrees from the University of Pennsylvania, A.B. 1865, A.M. 1868, and was a graduate of the Episcopal Divinity School, Philadelphia. He was an assistant pastor at Christ Church, Philadelphia. In 1880 he became rector of the Church of the Ascension, Lombard St. above 11th St., Philadelphia. Tilghman Family Collateral Genealogy [237]

(214 descendants)

The genealogy of the Tilghman family, as it relates to the extended Smith genealogy as currently understood, is as follows:

Descendants of William Tilghman

Generation No. 1

1. William[1] Tilghman

Child of William Tilghman is:
\+ 2 i. William[2] Tilghman.

Generation No. 2

2. William[2] Tilghman (William[1])

Child of William Tilghman is:
\+ 3 i. Richard[3] Tilghman, of "Snodland", Kent, England; died between 05 October 1673–06 March 1674/75 in Maryland.

Generation No. 3

3. Richard[3] Tilghman (William[2], William[1]) was from "Snodland", Kent, England, and died between 05 October 1673–06 March 1674/75 in Maryland. He married Mary.

Children of Richard Tilghman and Mary are:

4 i. Rebecca[4] Tilghman, died 1725. She married Simon Wilmer; born about 1656; died 1699.
5 ii. William Tilghman.
+ 6 iii. Richard Tilghman, born 23 February 1671/72 in The Hermitage, near Centreville, Queen Anne's Co., Maryland; died 23 January 1737/38.

NOTES

Richard Tilghman (–1673/75) [No. 3] was a surgeon in London. He emigrated to Maryland in 1660, having received a patent from Cecilius Calvert on 400 acres on 17 January 1659. He named his manor "Tilghman's Hermitage" (also known as The Hermitage), and its lands were much expanded later. The original home burned in 1850, leaving only the kitchen wing. In his will he left Tilghman's Hermitage to his son, William, and other properties as follows: "Tilghman's Addition to the Forlorne" on Chester River, to son Richard; "Tilghman's Farm", "Tilghman's Choice", "Tilghman's Discovery", and "Poplar Hill" to daughter Rebecca, to revert to son William if she dies without issue. He left personalty to his wife, Mary.

His will is dated 5 October 1673; probate 6 March 1674/75.[238] He is buried at The Hermitage, Queen Anne's Co., Maryland.

The Hermitage

The Hermitage is listed on the National Register of Historic Places and was inventoried in the State Historic Sites Survey conducted by the Maryland Historical Trust (site QA-113). At the time of the survey, in 1981, the property remained in the Tilghman family.

The National Register nomination form, prepared in the mid-1970s, located The Hermitage between Queenstown and Centreville, on Tilghman Neck. The National Register Field Sheet described the home:

> [Physical Appearance]
> "This historic property is handsomely situated on the point where Tilghman Creek joins the Chester River.
> "The present house has been so much altered that it is hard to tell what is originally was. At the present time, the main block is in the Italianate Villa style, three storeys high, and stuccoed. There is a wide overhanging roof, with a cornice interrupted by elaborate dormers. This block is approximately 45-50 feet square.
> "The main block is joined by two-storey hyphens, also stuccoed, with narrow oval headed windows on the land side, to a square brick building which appears always to have been the kitchen. It is now three storeys in height; although records indicate that the third storey was added by a recent owner. It is painted the same gray color as the stuccoed sections.
> "There is also one small one-storey red brick building, about 20′ x 12′, on the same axis as the main house. This would seem to be an original building. It has three slit-like apertures with interior louvers, indicating that it was used as a smokehouse.
> "They do not permit visits to the house.

[238] Maryland Calendar of Wills, Vol. 1.

"The house was once surrounded by beautiful box terraces, but they have been much neglected in recent years. The present generation of Tilghman owners come seldom to The Heritage, and would appear to be spending very little on its upkeep."

[Statement of Significance]

"The Hermitage has been the cradle of one of the most famous and public spirited of Maryland families, and has always remained in the possession of the Tilghman family. One of the best known members was Matthew Tilghman, who was a delegate to the Continental Congress.

"400 acres were originally patented in 1659 to Richard Tilghman by Lord Baltimore (Cecilius Calvert). One 19th century account, although not too reliable, states that 'The 17th century house was rebuilt in 1859 after having been partially burned in 1932.' There are no available photographs, or drawings, of the original house.

"About the turn of the century, The Hermitage passed to a seventh generation collateral descendant of the Tilghmans, named Susan Williams. This maiden lady had made the grand tour of Europe, so fashionable in those days, and fell in love with Mediterranean architecture. Upon her return, she transformed her ancestral home into an Italian villa, covering the brick walls with stucco and adding a wide overhanging roof. She also changed the fenestration on the ground floor.

"Further evidence of her pre-occupation with European grandeur is the fact that she built a new stable close-by, modeled upon a Spanish royal stable!

"Aside from the setting, the item of outstanding interest at The Hermitage today is the walled family graveyard, situated just beyond the house. Here lies the first Richard Tilghman, who died on January 7, 1675, and many of his distinguished descendants."

The Maryland Historical Trust inventory form for the State Historic Sites Survey of The Hermitage was not been seen. However, the inventory form for the slave quarter on the property (site QA-113A), prepared 6 March 1981, provides interesting historical information:[239]

[Statement of Significance]

"Documentary evidence is lacking to prove that this structure is a slave quarter, but the location and placement as well as the architectural evidence make this the mostly likely function. The basic frame of the building is constructed with wrought nails, suggesting a probable date of construction in the late 18th or very early 19th century. In the middle third of the 19th century a number of changes were made, including rebuilding the chimney, reworking several openings, and adding or rebuilding the stair. The exposed brick nogging may also date to this second period. Narrow circular sawn flooring on the second floor may be replaced or could be evidence of an inserted floor in an open loft building. Particular features of interest include the exposed brick nogging in the walls, the brick paved floor, the tilted false plate eave construction and the relatively undisturbed early finish of the interior."

[Physical Appearance]

"The slave quarter at the Hermitage is located approximately 1/4 mile to the east of the main house on the south side of a row of four late 19th and early 20th century tenant houses, facing the water.

[239] Maryland Historical Trust, Historic Sites Survey; survey for QA-113A, Hermitage Slave Quarter, Tilghman's Neck Road, Queenstown, Queen Anne's Co.; form prepared by Orlando Ridout, V, Historic Sites Surveyor. The report was located on the Maryland Historical Trust website, http://www.mdihp.net (accessed 3 Aug 2006).

"This small frame building is 16 feet wide and 20 feet long with single flush brick chimney at the west end of a steeply pitched gable roof. The interior consists of a single room with a brick paved floor on the first story and an unfinished loft room above. The frame of the building dates to the 19th or very early 19th century, but the building went through a major renovation sometime in the middle third of the 19th century. Changes included rebuilding the chimney and changing the original fenestration. It would appear that some or all of the exposed brick walls may date to this second period of construction.

"The front facade faces south, toward the water. There is a door offset to the left of center and a 6/6 window to the right. A small six-light window to the left of the door has clearly been added at a later date."

Generation No. 4

6. Richard[4] Tilghman (Richard[3], William[2], William[1]) was born 23 February 1671/72 at The Hermitage, near Centreville, Queen Anne's Co., Maryland, and died 23 January 1737/38. He married Anna Maria Lloyd 07 January 1699/00, daughter of Philemon Lloyd and Henrietta Neale. She was born 1676, and died 15 December 1748 at The Hermitage, near Centreville, Queen Anne's Co., Maryland.

Children of Richard Tilghman and Anna Lloyd are:

	7	i.	Mary[5] Tilghman, born 1702; died about 1736. She married James Earle, Jr.; born about 1694; died 1739.
	8	ii.	Philemon Tilghman, born 1704. [Died young.]
+	9	iii.	Richard Tilghman, born 1705; died 1766.
+	10	iv.	Henrietta Maria Tilghman, born 1707; died 1771.
+	11	v.	Anna Maria Tilghman, born 15 November 1709 in Maryland; died 30 August 1763.
+	12	vi.	William Tilghman, born 22 September 1711 at The Hermitage, near Centreville, Queen Anne's Co., Maryland; died 1782.
+	13	vii.	Edward Tilghman, born 03 July 1713 at The Hermitage, Queen Anne's Co., Maryland; died 09 October 1785 in Queen Anne's Co., Maryland.
+	14	viii.	James Tilghman, born 06 December 1716 at The Hermitage, near Centreville, Queen Anne's Co., Maryland; died 24 August 1793 in probably Chestertown, Maryland.
+	15	ix.	Matthew Tilghman, born 17 February 1717/18 at The Hermitage, near Centreville, Queen Anne's Co., Maryland; died 04 May 1790 at "Rich Neck", near Claiborne, Talbot Co., Maryland.

NOTES

Col. Richard Tilghman (senior) (1671/72–1737/38) [No. 6] was elected to the to Lower House, Maryland Assembly, for Talbot Co., 1697-1704; Upper House, 1711-1738, serving three times as its President. Maryland Militia, Captain by 1706/1707; Lt. Col., 1707-1716; Colonel, 1716-1738/1739. His will is dated 25 April 1737, probate 14 February 1737/38. He is buried at The Hermitage, near Centreville, Queen Anne's Co., Maryland.

As a slave owner, Richard Tilghman's name appears in an advertisement in a 1720 Philadelphia newspaper regarding a "run-away" slave:[240]

\+ 99 i. Arthur Tilghman[7] Jones, born about 1787.

NOTES

Richard Ireland Jones (–1844), husband of Susannah Tilghman [No. 46], arrived in Maryland in 1784, representing the family of Robert Eden (1741-1784)[244], the last colonial governor of Maryland, to whom Jones was related by marriage. After having had returned to England at the time of the Revolution, Eden, who had been made a Baronet, returned to Maryland after the war to make claims for his properties, during which time he also worked on claims for Lord Baltimore. Jones had been appointed to continue Eden's work on reacquiring what was possible of the pre-Revolutionary wealth and belongings of Frederick, Lord Baltimore.

Jones first settled in Annapolis, then joined his brother, Alfred, in Queen Anne's Co., where he married Susannah Carroll Tilghman. Between 1785 and 1798, on property owned by Susannah, Richard Ireland Jones built "Kennersley", a manor on South East Creek west of Church Hill, Queen Anne's Co., Maryland. Kennersley passed to Arthur Tilghman Jones upon her death, but soon after Arthur's marriage he fell in great debt, and Henry Hollyday of "Ratcliffe", a principal creditor, acquired Kennersley in 1827. The property descended in the Hollyday family until 1858, and thereafter through numerous hands to the present day.

NOTES

By January 1786, Mathew Tilghman (1760–1801) [No. 47] removed to Kent Co., Maryland. He was elected to the Lower House, Maryland Assembly, for Kent Co., 1789, 1792-1794; resigned to enter a vacancy in the Senate for the Eastern Shore, 1794-1796. After his death an administration bond was filed in Kent Co., 14 March 1801.

---

48. Elizabeth[6] Tilghman (James[5], Richard[4], Richard[3], William[2], William[1]) died before 1800. She married James Lloyd 1780, son of Richard Lloyd and Anne Crouch. He was born about 1756 at probably "Farley", Kent Co., Maryland, and died 1830.

Children of Elizabeth Tilghman and James Lloyd are:

103 i. Richard T.[7] Lloyd, died 1834 in New York.
104 ii. Anna Maria Lloyd, born 1782; died 1808.
105 iii. Maria Lloyd, born 1784; died 1825. She married William Hemsley; born 1766; died 1825.
106 iv. Elizabeth Lloyd, born 1784; died 1808. She married Philemon Hemsley; died before 1822.

NOTES

James Lloyd (1756–1830), husband of Elizabeth Tilghman [No. 48], was the only son of Richard and Anne Lloyd to survive to adulthood. He resided in Kent Co. at least until 1807, where he may have lived for the rest of his life. He was elected to the Lower House of the Maryland Assembly for Kent Co., 1778-1779, 1781-1783; Senate, for the Eastern Shore, 1781-1786; Lower House for Kent Co., 1793, 1794; Senate, for Eastern Shore, term 1796-1801 but resigned 9 December 1796. He was a U.S. Senator, 1798-1800 (resigned). He was in the Maryland Militia from 11 September 1776 to 1806, and served at the ranks of 2nd Lieutenant (in Capt. Frisby's Co.) to Brigadier General (6th Brigade, 1794-1806).

Maria Lloyd (1784–1825) [No. 105] and Elizabeth Lloyd (1784–1808) [No. 106] were twins.

Anna Maria Lloyd (1782–1808) [No. 104], Maria Lloyd, and Elizabeth Lloyd are buried at "Clover Fields", near Queenstown, Queen Anne's Co., Maryland.

NOTES

William Tilghman (1756–1827) [No. 54] removed to Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, between 1764 and 1777. He studied law in the College, Academy, and Charitable School of Philadelphia (later the University of Pennsylvania), 1763-1772, and thereafter read law in the offices of Benjamin Chew. He removed to Chestertown, Kent Co., Maryland, about 1777-1783. He was elected to Lower House, Maryland Assembly, for Kent Co., 1788-1790; Maryland Senate for Eastern Shore, 1791, resigned 1794. He removed again to Philadelphia, about 1793, and practiced law there. In 1801 he was appointed by President John Adams as Chief Judge, Third Circuit Court; one of Adams's "midnight judges".[246] After the Third Circuit Court was abolished in 1802, he returned to his law practice. In 1805, he was appointed President Judge, Court of Common Pleas for Philadelphia and vicinity, and judge in the Pennsylvania High Court of Errors and Appeals. He was Chief Justice, Pennsylvania Supreme Court, 1806-1827.[247]

The Philadelphia Bar Association recognizes him as one of the "Legends of the Bar". [248]

+	143	x.	Blanchard Emory, born 22 November 1831, from "Poplar Grove", Queen Anne's Co., Maryland.

NOTES

With the marriage of Thomas Emory to Anna Maria Hemsley the Smith family genealogy is accorded a link to an astonishing number of connections to historical American families. Her mother was Anna Maria Tilghman (1749/50–1817), and great grandparents in her paternal and maternal lineages (both) were Anna Maria Lloyd (1676–1748) and Richard Tilghman (1671/72–1737/38). Cousins of various kinds, and their own marriages, include numerous individuals of the Tilghman and Lloyd families, as well as others whose names are among the historical ranks both in Maryland and in Philadelphia, such as Bache, Cadwalader, Chew, Coursey, Dallas, Foulke, Hodge, Hollyday, and McCall. Indeed, Anna Maria Hemsley Emory provides a genealogical reconnection with our own Smith family through Elizabeth Wilkinson, fourth wife of Joseph Moore Smith (1782–1863) [see main Smith family genealogy, No. 34] and their descendants.

Of the children of Thomas and Anna Maria Hemsley Emory, marriages reaffirmed genealogical connections with the Tilghman families, and, as noted elsewhere herein, son William Hemsley Emory married Matilda Bache, a great granddaughter of Benjamin Franklin. And through other descendants again the families interconnect through Anna Maria Hemsley Emory's grandson, Edward Bourke Emory (1849–1924), who married Henrietta Tilghman (1855–1953) and Susannah Watson (1873–after 1929) [No. 356 in the main Smith genealogy] who was the great granddaughter of Katharine W. (Smith) Watson (ca. 1801–1881) [see main Smith family genealogy, No. 47] whose second husband was John H. Covington (1789–ca. 1861) who took in orphaned John Edward Smith (1848–1930) [No. 92].

(husband of Anna Maria Hemsley)

> "General Thomas Emory was a member of the Maryland House of Delegates, the State Senate and Executive Council of the governor under the old Constitution. He was an officer in the war of 1812, serving as a major in the 9th Cavalry District and took active part in the defence of Queenstown against the attack of the British. He was also first president of the Eastern Shore Railroad and one of the Commissioners to negotiate an internal loan for the state of Maryland, visiting England for that purpose in 1838."[249]

139. Robert Emory, Jr. (1815–)

He never married.

143. Frederick Emory (1829–)

He "was the Emory genealogist and the author of the early history of the Emory family, [and] he married and died leaving no children." [250]

---

95. Benjamin[7] Tilghman (Edward[6], Edward[5], Richard[4], Richard[3], William[2], William[1]) He married Anna Maria McMurtrie.

Children of Benjamin Tilghman and Anna McMurtrie are:

144 i. Benjamin Chew[8] Tilghman, born 26 October 1821 in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania; died 03 July 1901.

145 ii. Richard Albert Tilghman, born 24 May 1824 in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania; died 24 March 1899.

NOTES

Benjamin Tilghman [No. 95] was a lawyer; elected to membership in the American Philosophical Society, 1871.

Benjamin Chew Tilghman (1821–1901) [No. 144] was a graduate of the University of Pennsylvania, B.A., 1839. He was admitted to the bar but joined his brother, Richard, in business, invention, and manufacturing. In April 1861 he joined the 26th Regiment, Pennsylvania Volunteers, as Captain, rising to regimental commander in two years. He was wounded at Chancellorsville, 3 May 1863, after which he was appointed to command the 3rd Regt. U.S. Colored Troops from Philadelphia. He was made Brevet Brigadier General two years later. Mustered out 9 June 1865. Member of the American Philosophical Society.[251]

Richard Albert Tilghman (1824–1899) [No. 145] was a chemist, graduate of the University of Pennsylvania, B.A., 1841. Among numerous accomplishments, he is known for his fat hydrolysis patents, which he and his brother, Benjamin, advanced. In addition, he produced a method to manufacture wood-pulp paper, which would not become commercially practical until later. Elected member of the American Philosophical Society, 1847.[252]

NOTES

137. William Hemsley Emory (1811–1877)

Maj. Gen. Emory saw significant military service during his lifetime, retiring at the rank of Brigadier General on 1 July 1876. He was in charge of the U.S.–Mexico boundary survey.

> "General Wm. Hemsley Emory, a graduate of [the U.S. Military Academy at] West Point, was commissioned a second Lieut. in the U.S. Army 1831; attained rank of Major General in 1865. He had extensive active service in the Mexican and Civil Wars and was decorated for gallantry in the battles of San Pasqual 1846, and San Gabriel 1747 [sic]."[253]

At the time of the 1840 U.S. census, he and his young family may have been living with one of the members of his wife's family in Philadelphia. Curiously, only one Bache family appears in the 1840 census for Philadelphia, A. D. Bache, presumably Alexander Dallas Bache. At the time of the 1870 census, he resided in Ward 1, Washington, D.C.

Gen. Emory is buried in Congressional Cemetery, Washington, D.C., R43/S37.

Matilda (Bache) Emory (1819–1900)
(wife of William Hemsley Emory)

She resided at 1718 H St., N.W., Washington, D.C. She is buried in Congressional Cemetery, Washington, D.C., R43/S36.

[253] "Genealogical Notes on the Emory Family of Maryland", Maryland Historical Magazine, vol. 23 (1928), p. 370.

Children of William Hemsley and Matilda Bache Emory

Sophia Bache Emory (1843–1848) [No. 157] is buried in Congressional Cemetery, Washington, D.C., R43/S34.

George Bache Emory (1846–1887) [No. 158] is buried in Congressional Cemetery, Washington, D.C., R43/S35.

Sarah Tilghman Emory (1856–1940) [No. 161] never married. She resided at 1213 17th St., N.W., Washington, D.C. She is buried in Congressional Cemetery, Washington, D.C., R43/S36.

Victoria DeMonthelon Emory (1862–1944) [No. 162] never married. She resided at 1718 H St., N.W., Washington, D.C. She is buried in Congressional Cemetery, Washington, D.C., R43/S34.

---

138. Henrietta Earle[8] Emory (Anna Maria[7] Hemsley, William[6], Anna Maria[5] Tilghman, Richard[4], Richard[3], William[2], William[1]) was born 30 January 1814. She married Rev. David Kerr. He was from "Foxley Hall".

Child of Henrietta Emory and David Kerr is:

Wright Family
Collateral Genealogy

(171 descendants)

The genealogy of the Wright family, as it relates to the extended Smith family in these collateral genealogies, is as follows. There are numerous connections to other families listed in these collateral genealogies, in addition to the connection to the main Smith Family genealogy through Susannah Watson (see Edward Bourke Emory, No. 154 below).

Descendants of Solomon Wright

Generation No. 1

1. Solomon[1] Wright was born about 1655 in England, and died 1717 in Queen Anne's Co., Maryland. He married Anne Hynson, daughter of Thomas Hynson and Ann Gaine. She was born about 1662, and died 1717 in Queen Anne's Co., Maryland.

Children of Solomon Wright and Anne Hynson are:

+	2	i.	Thomas Hynson[2] Wright, born between 1687-1688 in "Walnut Grove", Queen Anne's Co., Maryland; died 1747 in Queen Anne's Co., Maryland.

NOTES

Regarding Philemon Blake Hopper (1791–1858) [No. 68], a "P. B. Hopper" is listed in household no. 2 in the 1850 U.S. census for the 3rd District, Queen Anne's Co., Maryland, which begins with the town of Centreville. He is then married to Ann, and the household includes the following: M.E., aged 35; Lucy A. C., 14; John B., 12; Sally M., 10. The identity of these children's mother is not determined. According to the census, P. B. Hopper was a Judge of the Queen Anne's County Court.

He was a Judge of the Queen Anne's County Court

The Queen Anne's County Marriage Records, 1817-1858, record the marriage of one Philemon B. Hopper, Jr., to a Henrietta Goldsboro, 14 March 1850; officiated by Rev. Brown. If that Hopper is the son of Philemon Blake Hopper, the identity of the son's mother is not yet established from among the three wives of the senior Hopper.

NOTES

59. Stephen Lowrey Wright (ca. 1799–ca. 1852)

Stephen Lowrey Wright inherited the homestead "Peace and Plenty" from Christopher Cox. According to Mary Bourke Emory[265], he married three times; but the author provides no information about the third wife. She also indicated that her uncle died "not long after" the deaths of two of his children, William and Alice, who died a month apart in 1852.

The marriage of Stephen Wright and Ann Cox was officiated by a Rev. Smith [no known relation].

The marriage of Stephen Wright and Elizabeth Cox was officiated by Rev. Brown.

Elizabeth (Cox) Wright (ca. 1812–after 1870)
(wife of Stephen Lowrey Wright)

She was known as "Lizzie".

Children of Stephen Lowrey Wright

Valeria E. Wright (ca. 1828–1852) [No. 78], William W. Wright (1845–1852) [No. 85], and Alice Bordley Wright (1846–1852) [No. 86] are buried at Peace and Plenty Farm, Maryland Rt. 213 south of Rt. 301, near Centreville, Queen Anne's Co., Maryland. Note that their dates of death are closely spaced.

[265] Mary B. Emory, Colonial Families and Their Descendants: by one of the oldest graduates of St. Mary's Hall, Burlington, N.J." (Sun Printing Office, Baltimore, 1900). She was Stephen L. Wright's niece (through marriage); see in the Emory Family collateral genealogy, under Blanchard Emory [No. 66 in that genealogy].

Frank Wright (1839–ca. 1865) [No. 83] served in the army of the Confederate States of America, but died in ill health soon after returning from the war. War records list a Frank Wright enlisting in the Union army on 16 August 1862 as a Private in the 6th Infantry Regiment, Co. F, and deserted from the unit on 8 September 1862; but it is not certain if this is the same Frank Wright. The unit history indicates that its organization took place between 12 August and 8 September 1862 and that the 6th Inf. Rgt. departed from Baltimore on its tour of duty on 20 September. Co. F was from Baltimore, while Co. K was from Queen Anne's Co. It is possible that the Frank Wright of family could have enlisted in Baltimore as a means to better reach the Confederate forces to the south.

Alexander Wright (1842–) [No.84] was named for an uncle, Alexander Wright of "Reed's Creek".

William W. Wright (ca. 1845–1852) [No. 85] was known as "Willie".

\+ 144 iii. James K. Harper, born about 1829 in Maryland.

\+ 145 iv. John B. Harper, born about 1833 in Maryland.

NOTES

James Kent Harper (1790–after 13 July 1850)
(husband of Alice Bordley Cox [No. 97])

At the time of the 1850 U.S. census, he was a physician. At the time of the 1820 U.S. census, he resided in District 2, Queen Anne's Co., Maryland. At the time of the 1850 census, he resided in District 3, Queen Anne's Co. In the 1850 census slave schedule, he is listed as holding six slaves (one male, aged 55; five females, aged 2-30).

142. Christopher Cox Harper (1822–1870/80)

He apparently had no children by either marriage; or, children who may have been born did not live to be registered in the censuses.

Occupations of Christopher Cox Harper (from U.S. censuses):
1850, 1860: Physician
1870: Farmer

At the time of the 1850–1870 U.S. censuses, he resided in District 3, Queen Anne's Co., Maryland.

In the 1860 census slave schedule, he is listed as holding seven slaves (two males, aged 16 and 14; five females, aged 50 and 4-16).

The 1866 map of the 3rd Election District for Queen Anne's Co.[266] shows the farm of "Dr. C.C. Harper" east of Centreville, on the south side of what now is Maryland Rt. 305; today this locale is approximately 1/2 miles west of U.S. Rt. 301.

98. Ann H.[6] Cox (Alice[5] Bordley, Mary Ann[4] Hopper, Mary Ann[3] Wright, Thomas Hynson[2], Solomon[1]) died 18 September 1842. She married Stephen Lowrey Wright 06 November 1827 in Queen Anne's Co., Maryland, son of Thomas Wright and Margaret Lowrey. He was born about 1799 in Maryland, and died about 1852.

Children are listed above under (59) Stephen Lowrey Wright.

100. Mary Ann Bordley[6] Cox (Alice[5] Bordley, Mary Ann[4] Hopper, Mary Ann[3] Wright, Thomas Hynson[2], Solomon[1]) died after April 1832. She married Edward Gray Bourke 17 April 1827 in Centreville, Queen Anne's, Maryland, son of William Bourke and Eliza Grey. He was born 1804.

Children of Mary Cox and Edward Bourke are:

\+ 146 i. Alice Gray[7] Bourke, born about 1829 in Maryland; died 05 December 1857 in "Poplar Grove", Spaniard Neck, west of Centreville, Queen Anne's Co., Maryland.

147 ii. Andrew Bourke. He married Rogers.

\+ 148 iii. Mary Edwardine Bourke.

---

101. Elizabeth M. N.[6] Cox (Alice[5] Bordley, Mary Ann[4] Hopper, Mary Ann[3] Wright, Thomas Hynson[2], Solomon[1]) was born about 1812 in Queen Anne's Co., Maryland, and died after 1870. She married Stephen Lowrey Wright 12 March 1844 in Queen Anne's Co., Maryland, son of Thomas Wright and Margaret Lowrey. He was born about 1799 in Maryland, and died about 1852.

Children are listed above under (59) Stephen Lowrey Wright.

Generation No. 7

144. James K.[7] Harper (Alice Bordley[6] Cox, Alice[5] Bordley, Mary Ann[4] Hopper, Mary Ann[3] Wright, Thomas Hynson[2], Solomon[1]) was born about 1829 in Maryland. He married Marianna. She was born about 1852 in Maryland.

Child of James Harper and Marianna is:

149 i. E.[8] Harper, born about 1868 in Maryland.

NOTES

At the time of the 1870 U.S. census, James K. Harper (ca. 1829–) [No. 144] was a farmer residing in District 3, Queen Anne's Co., Maryland. (The 1860 U.S. census District 3, Queen Anne's Co. [267], lists a "James R. Harper", aged 33, farmer; the slave schedule for the district lists "James Harper" as holding three slaves, males, aged 9-15.)

The 1866 map of the 3rd Election District for Queen Anne's Co. [268] shows the "J.K. Harper" farm southeast of Centreville, on the north side of the road to Ruthsberg (current Maryland Rt. 304); today this is approximately 1/2 mile east of U.S. Rt. 301.

145. John B.[7] Harper (Alice Bordley[6] Cox, Alice[5] Bordley, Mary Ann[4] Hopper, Mary Ann[3] Wright, Thomas Hynson[2], Solomon[1]) was born about 1833 in Maryland. He married Mary S. She was born about 1837 in Maryland.

Children of John Harper and Mary are:

150 i. Mary A.[8] Harper, born about 1860 in Maryland.
151 ii. Emily M. Harper, born about 1863 in Maryland.
152 iii. Carrie B. Harper, born about 1867 in Maryland.
153 iv. J. B. Harper, born about 1869 in Maryland.

NOTES

At the time of the 1870 U.S. census, John B. Harper (ca. 1833–) [No. 145] was a farmer residing in District 3, Queen Anne's Co., Maryland.

The 1866 map of the 3rd Election District for Queen Anne's Co. [269] shows the "J.B. Harper" farm west of Centreville, in Corsica Neck in what today is Brownsville; today the locale is south of Maryland Rt. 304 (Corsica Neck Rd.), between Hibernia Rd. and Dulin Clark Rd., at the head of Earle Creek.

146. Alice Gray[7] Bourke (Mary Ann Bordley[6] Cox, Alice[5] Bordley, Mary Ann[4] Hopper, Mary Ann[3] Wright, Thomas Hynson[2], Solomon[1]) was born about 1829 in Maryland, and died 05 December 1857 at "Poplar Grove", Spaniard Neck, west of Centreville, Queen Anne's Co., Maryland. She married John Register Emory II, son of Thomas Emory and Anna Hemsley. He was born 01 November 1818 at "Poplar Grove", Spaniard Neck, west of Centreville, Queen Anne's Co., Maryland, and died 29 March 1880 at "Poplar Grove", Spaniard Neck, west of Centreville, Queen Anne's Co., Maryland.

Children of Alice Bourke and John Emory are:

\+ 154 i. Edward Bourke[8] Emory, born 29 September 1849 at "Poplar Grove", Spaniard Neck, west of Centreville, Queen Anne's Co., Maryland; died 01 May 1924.
\+ 155 ii. John Register Emory III, born 1850 at "Poplar Grove", Spaniard Neck, west of Centreville, Queen Anne's Co., Maryland; died January 1925.

156 iii. Ann M. Emory, born about 1852 in Maryland.
157 iv. Alice Emory, born about 1855 in Maryland.

NOTES

Col. John Register Emory, II (1818–1880) [No. 63] served in the U.S. Army. He was commissioned a 2nd Lieutenant in the 6th Infantry, where he "saw active service during the Seminole War in Florida".[270] He resigned from U.S. Army on 9 February 1843.

At the time of the 1850 and 1860 U.S. censuses he is listed as a farmer, residing in the 3rd District, Queen Anne's Co., Maryland. He "was one of the largest land and slave owners of his time in Maryland"[271].

Col. Emory is buried in the family cemetery at Poplar Grove, Spaniard Neck Road, near Centreville, Queen Anne's Co., Maryland.

Alice (Bourke) Emory (ca. 1829–1857), wife of John Register Emory, II, is buried in the family cemetery at Poplar Grove, Spaniard Neck Road, near Centreville, Queen Anne's Co., Maryland.

148. Mary Edwardine[7] Bourke (Mary Ann Bordley[6] Cox, Alice[5] Bordley, Mary Ann[4] Hopper, Mary Ann[3] Wright, Thomas Hynson[2], Solomon[1]) She married Blanchard Emory 1852, son of Thomas Emory and Anna Hemsley. He was born 22 November 1831 in Of "Poplar Grove", Queen Anne's Co., Maryland.

Children of Mary Bourke and Blanchard Emory are:
158 i. Frederick[8] Emory.
159 ii. Edmund Emory.
\+ 160 iii. Blanchard Emory, Jr., born in Of "Bloomfield".
161 iv. Tilghman Emory.
162 v. Isabelle Emory. She married George Davidson.
163 vi. Mary Emory. She married Tilghman Davidson.

NOTES

Mary (Bourke) Emory [No. 148], wife of Blanchard Emory, inherited "Bloomfield" when her brother-in-law, Pachard Harrison, died without issue. She was author of Colonial Families and Their Descendants.[272] She graduated from St. Mary's Hall, an Episcopalian school for girls and young women in Burlington, Burlington Co., New Jersey.[273]

Additions and Corrections

Hyperlinks embedded in the main genealogy will, when clicked in the computer's web-browser environment, redirect the user automatically to the pertinent additions, emendations and corrections that are compiled in this "Additions and Corrections" section.

Additions apply newly found information to particular parts of the main genealogy. Emendations rewrite parts of orginal texts. Factual errors and errors that may misconstrue meanings are corrected. Inconsequential typographical errors are not corrected.

All additions, emendations, and corrections are in order by page numbers to which they apply in the main text.

The pagination of the "Additions and Corrections" section begins with Roman numeral "i". Footnotes within this section continue the enumeration from the last number used in the main genealogy.

Bear in mind that the pagination and the enumeration of footnotes within the "Additions and Corrections" section will change from revision to revision as new material is continually added here. The content, pagination, and footnote numbers of the main part of the original genealogy do not change.

If the "Additions and Corrections" section is printed out to accompany a printed version of the main genealogy, these pages may be kept either as a separate document or they may be interleaved where appropriate within the main text of the genealogy.

Features of the Comprehensive Index

- All direct descendants of the progenitors of the Spamer and Smith families, as listed in this genealogy; the direct descendants are highlighted in bold and their spouses are signified by " + "
- All married women listed both by their married and maiden names
- All individuals listed with years of birth and death, if known
- All relations in the separate collateral genealogies (families who are related by marriage to one or more of the direct descendants)
- All unrelated individuals mentioned throughout the text and footnotes
- All place names, including street addresses
- Unified lists for the names of cemeteries, churches, clergy, familiar names and nicknames, named real estate properties, occupations and civic duties, and names of ships and boats
- Unified list for military veterans, with separate lists for those killed in action and those who were prisoners of war

Why Comprehensive?

QUESTIONS about the features of this index may arise today or far in the future. Users may inquire about the notational styles, or why some parts of the genealogy are not as comprehensively indexed as others. As compiler, I may not be present to answer those questions, thus these comments and notes speak on my behalf. The information is, otherwise, neither a prerequisite for using the index nor for using the genealogy as a whole. The user should read the Preface and the General Introduction to the genealogy; they contain explanations and perspectives of the content and format of the genealogy.

The Spamer–Smith genealogy, fully titled "Genealogy and Historical Notes of Spamer and Smith Families of Maryland", is a manuscript about these two extended families, the American generations of which first established themselves in the colony or state of Maryland between the 17th and 19th centuries. Numerous more families are related through marriage. Even though the product is a manuscript—unpublished—it still requires an index if the document is to be a useful one. This Comprehensive Index supersedes the Concise Index that was prepared for earlier convenience, but which focuses only on the principal individuals of Parts I and II.

The Comprehensive Index is rather like a factual and conceptual summary of the genealogy. It meticulously accounts for thousands of bits of essential evidence that document our family's genealogy and contemporary culture. This body of evidence is documented as comprehensively as possible because so much has already been lost. The principal intent of the genealogy, as summarized by this index, is to restore some of the family's genealogical and cultural history. This index must serve not only today's family, but family historians and unrelated researchers who are as yet unborn; whether the next generation or many generations hence. In the future it also may become an interesting guide for historical and social researchers, since the index offers entryways to family-focused locations and special topics during a substantial part of American immigration and expansionist history.

A researcher may investigate family traditions or contemporary events, or may look hopefully to this document for any information about a person, place, or subject. The longer that this genealogy survives, the greater its use will be as a source document about people and their ever more remote times. Of course it is presumptuous to say that this document will become an "authoritative" reference, but such a title may be given to it by dint of being a sole source. The index thus will be the precise guide through the hailstorm of names, places, events and subjects through numerous generations. It will greatly assist the next and future generations of family historians, whoever they may be, in their own work.

In addition to providing hope to those who delve into the genealogy for uncertain treasure, the Comprehensive Index may serve other, less precise, uses. Someone may recall having once heard of a name, place, or event, left only with the frustration of knowing that "it is in there somewhere", or they may have been told ambiguous or partly incorrect information; thus this index may be the key to rediscovery. A family's traditional stories also may be checked, to establish whether additional research revealed misinformation or led to corroboration. The index also may be used as a browser's guide (albeit a daunting one) for newcomers to the family's many stories. In all such ways the index can lead to pertinent data and discussions, some of it available nowhere else.

SCOPE AND CONTENT. Part I is "The Spamer Family of Baltimore", and Part II is "The Smith Family of the Eastern Shore". Appendix 1, "Martel and Blouin Families of Québec and New England", is a genealogy of two families that are collaterally related to the Spamer Family; specifically, they are the maternal and paternal lines, respectively, of my mother, Jeannette (Blouin) Spamer. These family accounts have been segregated from Part I to form this appendix because their combined genealogy is too extensive to conveniently include their proper place within the text of Part I. As the only portion of the overall genealogy that embraces French Canadian families of Québec, Canada, and the New England section of the United States, it seemed reasonable to also separate it for family historians who are investigating that region and culture.

Comprehensive indexing of Appendix 2 is purposely omitted; indexing is restricted only to a cursory accounting of family groups represented there. A a separate index will be required for this appendix. The family lineages accounted for therein are all related to the Smith Family. These lineages overlap significantly even amongst themselves due to many family intermarriages during several centuries. Each collateral genealogy stands alone, but because of the overlaps individual lineages recur in different places. Creating comprehensive cross-indexed entries for this appendix thus would result in a great many replicate entries, confusingly and needlessly pointing to two, three or more places where occur the same individuals' names and factual and geographical information—except that each case would be from the perspective of a different marriage line. (See more about the content of Appendix 2 in the introductory material to this genealogy.)

Enumerated individuals within each part of the genealogy are part of the lineage of direct descendants of the earliest listed person in that part of the genealogy. That earliest person, who is enumerated No. 1, is designated the progenitor—at least within the bounds of the lineage under examination. Of course, that person has his own ancestry, which is not further traced in this document. Regarding the enumeration convention itself, see more extensive comments in the "Format" section of the General Introduction to the genealogy. Note also that each collateral genealogy, including those of the two appendices, is also enumerated in the same fashion. Their numbers, however, are not utilized in the index so as to avoid confusing them with the more important numbers that are given to the principal individuals of direct descendancy within the main lines of the Spamer and Smith families.

The Comprehensive Index includes the contents of a Concise Index that was compiled earlier—the Concise Index was restricted to the enumerated individuals of the direct descendancy from the progenitor in the Spamer and Smith lineages, and the principals' spouses. On this foundation, the Comprehensive Index adds all persons mentioned in the genealogy; family and unrelated individuals alike. In terms of family members, they include siblings and parents from the families of spouses; spouses of prior or subsequent marriages, and any children by those marriages; and all individuals in the collateral family genealogies (that is, the families of in-laws). Further, the Comprehensive Index includes all other people mentioned in the text or shown in illustrations, regardless of whether they are related to any of the principal or collateral persons. The Comprehensive Index also lists references to various subjects, most place names, lists of addresses by city, occupations and civic duties, and other specialized listings to effectively create the most detailed index possible.

At the end of this index are several pages of information that elaborate upon the procedures used in compiling this index, and likewise the kinds of information provided in the genealogy. Some users of this genealogy also may not be fully informed about peculiarities of indexes that convey multiple kinds of information concurrently, which likewise are explained there.

Important Notes Pertaining to Digital vs. Printed Copies of this Work

Digital copies of this manuscript have been distributed on CD-ROM. These CDs include all textual and graphical material. Some family members have received printed copies of the complete work. The copies were reproduced from the compiler's master copy; all copies are identical. They also received taped paper scrolls that depict the Spamer and Smith family trees. These scrolls were produced from a computerized database, each printed to about fifty pages, and, in the taped format, unroll to about 30 feet in length; the trees are the same layout as they are in their digital PDF format. The texts of Parts I and II comprise about two thousand pages, including interleaved illustration pages. Thus far few printed copies have been produced because of the high cost. Institutional copies also are produced; a list is accrued on the last page of this index. Collateral family trees, about a hundred of which appear throughout the text, have likewise been printed out for the use of the compiler. They have not been distributed in printed format due to the volume of material, but they all are supplied in PDF format on the CD.

A digital copy is not necessarily as easily searchable as one may imagine. While key words and phrases will be found with ease in the digital texts, a person's name may be less so easily found. As noted in the introductory text of the genealogy, standardized genealogical information follows the NGS Quarterly format. This format, followed widely by genealogists, inserts superscript numerals between given and surnames for individuals of a direct descendancy (for example, Christian Augustus Emanuel [5] Spamer); these numerals serve as a shorthand notation for the generation number (in this case, 5th generation). Thus, typing this person's full name in a digital search would not locate the main genealogical entry for him because the string is interrupted by the numeral.

The PDF version of this work supersedes comments that were placed here regarding the potential for minor pagination differences between indexed page numbers and actual page numbers in the main texts. However, in the far less likely event that an item is not found on a particular page, check an adjacent page.

Name in bold and accompanied by I:260 or II:351 (for example)	Named individual is a direct descendant of the progenitor of the family. The number in bold designates the individual's enumeration number within the indicated part number (I or II) of the genealogy. A similar number not in bold, such as [A1:34], indicates an enumerated individual in Appendix 1 (Section A)
Name in italics	Signifies a woman's marriage name; the page number associated with the name is a cross-reference to the page on which that person is shown to have married, or is the sole place that that person is mentioned in the genealogy. For a woman whose maiden name is given (in parentheses), see usually under that name for complete page listings
Part I : Part II : Appendix 1 or Appendix 2 :	Indicates the pertinent part of the Spamer–Smith genealogy: Part I (Spamer Family of Baltimore), Part II (Smith Family of the Eastern Shore), Appendix 1 or Appendix 2
bold page number	Signifies a principal informational entry (i.e., where "main information" relating to the person will be found)
italic page number	Signifies an illustration

Also note: Throughout the Spamer–Smith genealogy, text demarked on the left by parallel vertical lines ‖ denotes the separate genealogy of a collateral, or "in-law", family

Symbols and Abbreviations

+	Signifies a person who married one of the enumerated, direct descendants of the progenitor. (The convention is not applied to the collateral family genealogies or to the appenidices)
*	Signifies the page number where the person's birth is listed within his or her parents' genealogical entry. (The convention is not applied to the collateral family genealogies or to the appenidices)
=	Associated with a name, thus: [= Name] signifies a woman's marriage surname
=	Associated with a page number signifies the page where is noticed a person's marriage in the main genealogy (Part I or II). The symbol is used only with the spouse who married an enumerated individual; that is, he or she married into the direct descendants' line of either Part I or Part II of the genealogy. (The convention is not applied to the collateral family genealogies or to the appendices)
ff	Signifies "and the following pages" (used with a page number)
fl.	Signifies "flourished" (used with years, denoting active time of life, for which otherwise no specific years are known)
n.	Signifies footnote number (following a page number)
< or >	used with years, < signifies "before", > signifies "after"
ca.	circa, or "about" (used with years)
q.v.	quod vide ("which see"), meaning "refer to this"

QUICK KEY

Comprehensive Index

Coincidental surnames may juxtapose individuals who are otherwise wholly unrelated.

Many local sites are listed under their higher-ranking locales; for example, hospitals, museums and airports may be under the cities in which they are kicated; the cities under the states (or countries) in which they are located.

Page numbers in italics refer to illustration pages. These illustration pages have alphabetical suffixes, indicating that they are inserted into the text after the numerical page of the same number. If a page number with suffix is not in italics, the subject is mentioned on the page but not illustrated. A printed copy of this genealogy will have the inserted pages in the proper places. Users of digital copies of this genealogy (on CD-ROM) will find these illustration pages as individual files within a separate illustrations folder on the CD; each of those files are named according to their appropriate insert page numbers.

For explanations of other symbols and abbreviations, see the Quick Key or the more detailed explanations on Comprehensive Index pages 277–283.
